

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

A BOOK of selections from Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic and the Civil Wars will be welcomed by many teachers. In most schools the reading of the whole of Caesar's extant writings is quite out of the question. A selection must be made, and the method of selection which is most likely to produce the best results with the pupil is to take from the different books those episodes which are of greatest interest and importance.

It is still customary in many schools to limit the study of Caesar to the Gallic War, or even to the first four books of this work. Some of the most interesting portions of Caesar's writings are thus entirely neglected. The description of Britain and the Britons in the Fifth Book of the Gallic War and the comparison of the Gauls and the Germans in the Sixth Book are not only instructive, as the earliest sources of information on these peoples, but entertaining as well. No more amusing fairy tale can be found in any Latin serviceable for schools than Caesar's sober account of some of the animals in the Hercynian Forest. The failure at Gergovia — the only repulse suffered by Caesar's army in Gaul when led by him in person — and the successful siege of Alesia against an overwhelming force from without and a strong army from within, commanded by the intrepid Vercingetorix, greatest of all the Gauls, are episodes of the utmost interest.

The Civil War is often altogether unknown to pupils. And yet no work of antiquity is of greater historical importance or merit, and few narratives are more interesting than the story in the Third Book of the struggle between Caesar and Pompey.

Many teachers who would be glad to devote to the Civil War a part of the time spent on the study of Caesar have been deterred by the necessity of buying an additional text-book, an expense which they have felt to be unwarranted, owing to the short time during which it could be used.

In this volume some of the most interesting and important parts of both the Gallic and the Civil War are presented. The selections from the Gallic War are equivalent in amount to the first four books. From the Civil War about two thirds as much is taken. To facilitate reference, all chapters are numbered as in complete editions of Caesar.

The notes on the last three books of the Gallic War and on the Civil War are specially full, for the greater assistance of those who may find themselves, in these selections, on unfamiliar ground. The notes on the First and the Second Books of the Gallic War have been prepared with an eye to the needs of those classes which begin their study of Caesar with either book. Preceding the notes on each book is a summary of the entire book. The summaries of those parts not included in this volume are inclosed in brackets.

The Latin text of the Gallic War is in the main that of Meusel's school edition (Berlin, 1894), and of the Civil War that of Ellger's revision of Paul (Leipzig, 1898). The principal variations from either of these authorities are in details of spelling. In the Civil War, 2, 29, Menge's reading iactaverant has been inserted to avoid a lacuna; and the conjectures accepted by Ellger in 3, 6, of iumenta for impedimenta of the Mss., and in 3, 97, of locis aequis for the usual reading iugis eius, have not been adopted.

"Hidden quantities" are marked in accordance with the revised edition of Lane's Grammar. A decided advance has been made in this troublesome subject by the agreement which was reached in the marking of almost all words by the editors of the revised Lane, the new Allen and Greenough, and the Hale and Buck grammars, all of which appeared in 1903.

It is believed that all teachers and pupils will welcome the innovation in the Vocabulary of printing in full the principal parts of verbs and the genitive of nouns, except in the first conjugation of verbs and in such nouns of the first, second, and fourth declensions as offer no possibility of mistake.

For the long indirect quotations of the Gallic War, 1, 13, and 14, and for the more difficult passages earlier, the direct discourse has been given in the Notes; but this help has not been supplied in later passages, as it is desirable for the pupil to be thrown on his own resources a little even in the early stages of his study, and it is easily possible to make indirect discourse too much of a bugbear.

On the Plan of the battle with the Nervii (B.G. 2, 18 ff.) the positions usually assigned to the xth and the 1xth legions have been reversed, so that the 1xth shall be stationed on the extreme left. This harmonizes better with the statement in Chapter 21 that Caesar, when he first started out to encourage his troops, came by chance first to the xth legion; for we may assume that he had been engaged up to that moment about the site of the camp. It is also at least probable, from the order in which Caesar mentions the legions in Chapter 23 (namely, ix and x, xi and viii, xii and vii), that this was their arrangement in the line; for it is clear from Chapters 25 and 26 that the viiith legion was on the extreme right (see Holmes, Caesar's Conquest of Gaul, p. 660).

In the brief treatment of Caesar's army no attempt has been made at completeness. Only such information has been supplied as is needed to make the selections in this book intelligible. Probably not one in a hundred of the readers of Grant's Memoirs has even an elementary knowledge of army tactics. Why should it be considered any more necessary to be thoroughly posted in Roman military antiquities in order to read Caesar with appreciation and enjoyment?

The sources of the illustrations are sufficiently indicated, for the most part, in the list, pp. 11 ff. Figures 8, 24, and 38 are photographs of casts in the Scott Collection at Harvard University. Figure 26 has been drawn specially for this book by Mr. Gleeson. Figure 35, a photograph of the bust of Caesar in the British Museum, has been included because of the fame which this head has long enjoyed, although its authenticity as a likeness of Caesar is doubtful.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge with gratitude the many helpful suggestions and criticisms received from the editors of the series to which this book belongs. Cordial thanks are also due Mr. Eugene W. Harter, of the Erasmus Hall High School, Brooklyn, and Mr. H. T. Rich, of the Boston Latin School, from whose experience and scholarship the Notes have derived valuable improvements. Mr. N. W. Helm, of the Phillips Exeter Academy, has given generous assistance in proof-reading.

INTRODUCTION

LIFE OF CAESAR

“That Julius Caesar was a famous man.” — SHAKSPERE, Richard III, 3, 1, 84.

Caesar's many-

I. In beginning the study of Caesar, it is well to remember that we are dealing with one of the greatest characters of all time. He not only laid the foundations of the Roman Empire, which survived, with various changes, until the abdication of Francis II, in 1806; but by his conquest of Gaul, which Freeman (General Sketch of European History, 1874, p. 77) calls “one of the most important events in the history of the world,” he paved the way for Roman civilization in western Europe, and is properly considered the founder of modern France. Although we are tempted to think of him principally as a successful general, he is distinguished above Alexander, Hannibal, Napoleon, or Grant, in that he showed unusual ability in many other lines as well. As an orator he had gained favorable notice before he was twenty-five years of age, and in the judgment of Quintilian (10, 1, 114), an excellent Roman critic, he might have rivaled even Cicero, if he had devoted himself to the art of oratory. His style as a writer is given high praise by Cicero (Brutus, 262), and yet his literary productions were composed rapidly, and in the midst of an exceedingly busy life of affairs. It is as a statesman and practical politician, however, that Caesar deserves the greatest renown. He appears to have been the only man of his time to see the impossibility of holding the Roman government together under the old senatorial rule, in which corruption and violence often rode supreme over all justice or right. Caesar's strongest claim to honor rests on the clear-sighted, firm course he pursued in restoring order out of the chaos of civil war, and in securing a just and wise reform administration in many departments of the Roman domain.

The word Caesar is perpetuated in the German Kaiser and possibly in the Russian Czar, both of which mean 'emperor.' The name of the month in which Julius Caesar was born was changed, in his honor, from Quinctilis to Iulius, and is preserved in English, French, and several other modern languages.

Birth and boyhood. 2. Gaius Julius Caesar was born July 12, probably in the year 102 B.C.¹ On his father's side he claimed descent from the mythical founders of the Roman state, and his paternal grandmother's family traced its ancestry to Ancus Marcius, reputed to be the fourth king of Rome.

Caesar was fortunate in having a good mother, who watched over her boy and guided his education so carefully that she is named by Tacitus (Dialogus, 28) side by side with Cornelia, the mother of the Gracchi, as a model of motherly devotion. It may have been due to her wisdom that he was not, like most Roman boys at that time, intrusted to the instruction of a Greek slave, but was given a tutor from Gaul (probably Cisalpine Gaul, now northern Italy), a well-educated, refined man, named Gniphō, to whose influence he may have partly owed his lifelong interest in the Gallic peoples. It is easy to suppose, too, that many of Caesar's gentler characteristics, which distinguished him from most men of his day, were inherited from his mother.

Early democratic tendencies. 3. Caesar's political activities were early enlisted by the democratic party against the nobility of the senate. He must have been somewhat influenced by the career of his uncle, the great Marius, through whose support ¹ This is the year for which Mommsen (History of Rome, edition of 1895, IV, 278-280) argues, chiefly on the ground that if we accept the traditional date, 100 B.C., Caesar held the aedileship, praetorship, and consulship, two years before the legal age. Had this been the case, we should expect some reference to it in ancient writers. It seems unlikely too; for at that time Caesar had not attained to such distinction as to make it probable that he was exempted from the regular workings of the law.

FIG. 1.—CAESAR : PISA

he was appointed a priest of Jupiter when a mere boy, and still more by his marriage in 83 B.C. to Cornelia, daughter of Cinna, a prominent democratic politician. His loyalty to his wife. young wife when Sulla, the head of the senatorial party, ordered him, the next year, to put her away, illustrates two traits of his character which were often displayed throughout his life; namely, his strong will, and his faithfulness to friends. He was outlawed and obliged to go into hiding for a time. Once he was caught, and escaped with his life only by bribing his captor. But influential friends interceded, and Sulla finally pardoned him, prophesying that he would one day be the ruin of the aristocracy, for in him there were many Mariuses.

Wins the civic crown. 4. Feeling that there was no security for him in Rome, Caesar went to Asia Minor, where he gained his first military experience, and won the civic crown, equivalent to a medal of honor, for saving the life of a fellow-soldier. Upon Sulla's death, in 78 B.C., he returned to Rome, and soon attracted public attention by the skill with which he conducted the prosecution, for extortion, of two provincial governors.

Studies oratory. In 76 B.C., wishing to perfect his oratorical talent, he studied at Rhodes under the famous teacher Molon. On his way thither he was captured by pirates near Miletus, and for thirty-eight days, while the ransom money was being collected, he was held a prisoner. He joined in their sports, wrote verses and speeches for their amusement, and if they failed to admire his efforts, called them to their faces barbarous and illiterate, and threatened to crucify them. Upon his release, he procured ships at Miletus, took the pirates by surprise, recovered his ransom money, and carried out the threat which he had jestingly made when he was in their power.

Pontiff, military tribune, quaestor, aedile.

5. In 74 B.C., after being chosen to the religious office of pontiff, he returned to Rome, and was soon elected to his first public magistracy, the military tribunate. In 70 B.C. he supported the democratic measures of the consuls Pompey and Crassus, whereby the Sullan constitution, which had made the senate supreme, was overthrown. In 68 B.C. he served as quaestor in Further Spain. Three years later, as curule aedile, he had control of public festivals, and improved to the utmost the opportunity of winning the favor of the populace by giving lavish exhibitions and elaborate gladiatorial contests. He also restored the statue and trophies of Marius, which had been destroyed by Sulla. When he laid down the aedileship, he was the hero of the democratic party, and was practically certain of being elected, at the earliest legal age, to the highest offices of the government.

Chief pontiff. The Catiline conspiracy.

6. In 63 B.C. Caesar was elected chief pontiff, and thus became the head of the Roman religion. This office was held for life, and was considered a great prize. It kept a man constantly before the eyes of the people, and enabled him to exert no little control over the government through the management of the calendar. When Caesar left home on the morning of the election, he kissed his mother and told her he should return as chief pontiff or not at all. This was the year of Cicero's consulship, made forever memorable by the overthrow of Catiline's conspiracy. Caesar was charged by some of his political enemies with being implicated in it, and may very well have sympathized with the attempt to weaken the rule of the aristocracy; but the most radical schemes of the revolutionists, involving murders and arson, can hardly have been countenanced by a man of his usually humane and merciful character. In the end, he stood with his party in advising against the adoption of the unconstitutional death penalty for the conspirators.

Praetor. 7. After holding the praetorship, a judicial office, Propraetor. for the year 62 B.C., Caesar served as propraetor in The first triumvirate. Further Spain. There he gained much useful military Consul. experience and won such successes that he was entitled to celebrate a triumph upon his return to Rome. This honor he renounced, however, owing to certain legal difficulties, in order to stand as a candidate for the consulship for 59 B.C. His election to this office was effected partly by his great popularity with the common people, and partly by a masterly stroke of politics, by which he formed the so-called First Triumvirate,¹ a union of himself with Pompey, the greatest general, and Crassus, the wealthiest man of Rome, for the purpose of promoting their own interests in spite of the obstructive senate. Bibulus, Caesar's colleague in the consulship, representing the aristocrats, strove to thwart all his plans, until utterly beaten at every turn he at last shut himself up at home for the rest of the year, thus giving the wits a chance to say that the consuls were Julius and Caesar, instead of Caesar and Bibulus. Laws were then passed ratifying Pompey's acts in the East and granting farms to his discharged veterans. Through Caesar's influence, abstracts of all debates in the senate were posted in the forum, and more stringent laws against extortion in the provinces were carried. Other important legislative work was accomplished, by the aid of the popular assembly, regardless of the inefficient and jealous senate. During the year the union with Pompey was strengthened by his marriage to Caesar's beautiful and accomplished daughter Julia. At about the same time Caesar married his third wife. Cornelia (§ 3) had died nine years before, and a second wife, owing to a scandalous report, was divorced in 62 B.C., with the well-known remark, "Caesar's wife must be above suspicion."

Proconsul in Gaul. 8. The senate hoped that at the end of his consulship Caesar could be buried in obscurity and his legislation undone. But the triumvirate, which had been formed to guard against any such contingency, obtained for him, through the vote of the people, an appointment for five years, with the command of three legions, to the governorship of Cisalpine Gaul (northern Italy above the Rubicon) and Illyricum. The senate, seeing the way in which the wind of popular favor was blowing, added the Roman province in Transalpine Gaul (southern France, called Provincia on the map) and one legion. Nobody realized that this last appointment was to open the way for one of the most successful and famous military careers in history. The command to defend the province against attacks from without gave him the excuse for his campaigns in central and northern Gaul during the next eight years, which resulted in the complete subjugation of the whole territory. Caesar himself described the campaigns of the years 58-52 B.C.,¹ but the exploits of 51 B.C., which made the victory secure, were narrated by Hirtius, one of Caesar's faithful lieutenants. During these years both Britain and Germany were entered for the first time by a Roman army.

The conference at Lucca. 9. In the spring of 56 B.C. Caesar met his colleagues of the triumvirate at Lucca, on the frontier of his Cisalpine province, to lay plans for a continuance of their policies. This conference was attended by all the principal men of the democratic party. It was decided that Caesar's governorship of Gaul should be extended for another term of five years, while Pompey and Crassus, after holding the consulship for 55 B.C., were each to receive a governorship for five years, Pompey in Spain, Crassus in Syria.

End of the triumvirate. 10. In 54 B.C. Crassus departed for Syria, and was killed the next year at the battle of Carrhae. Pompey intrusted his province to a lieutenant, and remained, contrary to all precedent, at Rome. In this year his beloved wife Julia died, and thus a strong bond of sympathy and interest between him and Caesar was broken. With the death of Crassus the triumvirate was at an end, and the gulf separating the two survivors constantly widened. In 52 B.C. Pompey was made sole consul to restore order from the anarchy which had prevailed in the city the past few years. He thus found himself the champion of the senatorial party, which was opposed to Caesar and hoped to get him out of the way, as soon as his term of office should expire, by overthrowing his political measures and even bringing him to trial for his unconstitutional proceedings during his governorship.

Efforts to prevent Caesar's second consulship. 11. Caesar's only safeguard against the attacks of his political foes lay in his election as consul for 48 B.C.; for, according to Roman law, so long as a man held office he could not be tried for his official acts. As early as 56 B.C., at the Lucca conference, the triumvirs had arranged that upon the expiration of his command in Gaul he should at once enter the consulship, and a law was put through in 52 B.C. exempting him from the requirement by which all candidates for office had to declare themselves in person seventeen days before the election; for during his proconsulship he could not legally come into Italy from his province. This exemption was annulled, however, a little later through Pompey's influence, and Caesar's enemies in the senate endeavored during the years 51 and 50 B.C. to deprive him of his proconsulship before the legal expiration of his term at the close of 49 B.C. At the same time the army under Pompey's command was strengthened by various measures.

Civil war begun. 12. Caesar made more than one attempt to come to a compromise with the senate, and even offered to give up his governorship and disband his army if Pompey would do likewise. He would then come to Rome and stand for the consulship in the regular way. His proposals were met by the senate early in January, 49 B.C., with the demand that he give up his provinces and dismiss his troops before a certain day on pain of being declared a traitor. A few days later, by a decree of the senate, the country was declared to be in danger, and Pompey and other magistrates were given full power to provide for its defense. The Caesarean tribunes, one of whom was Mark Antony, finding their right of veto overridden and their very lives endangered, fled in disguise to Caesar; and this violation by the senate of the sacred office of tribune gave Caesar the opportunity, which he was not slow to seize, to pose as the protector of the constitution against the lawless attacks of the senate. Seeing that war or political ruin were the alternatives before him, Caesar, being assured of the allegiance of his soldiers (only Labienus, his ablest and most trusted officer, deserted him), crossed the Rubicon, the little stream separating his province from Italy, and civil war was begun.

The Civil War. Caesar supreme. 13. Caesar's clear-sighted grasp of a situation and his rapidity of action were never better displayed than in the first year of the Civil War. By October, 49 B.C., Italy, Sicily and Sardinia, Spain, and Marseilles had all been won to his side. In August of the next year he completely defeated Pompey at Pharsalus in Thessaly. Going to Alexandria in Egypt in pursuit of Pompey, he was detained until the summer of 47 B.C. by an uprising which, though insignificant in itself, nearly cost him his life.¹ While there he came under the spell of the famous Cleopatra. Before returning to Rome he settled affairs in Asia, winning at Zela in Pontus such an easy victory that he sent home the well-known message, "Veni, vidi, vici." Arriving in Italy before anybody dreamed of his approach, he set about restoring order and confidence in the government and in business lines. But in a few weeks he had to take the field again, this time in Africa, where the Pompeians had gathered a strong army. In the battle of Thapsus, fought in April, 46 B.C., Caesar won a decisive victory. Labienus, his old friend and lieutenant, with Pompey's son Sextus and other survivors, escaped to Spain, where at Munda, in March, 45 B.C., the final conflict of the war resulted in the complete overthrow of the Pompeians. Caesar was now the undisputed master of the whole Roman dominion.

Caesar's wise and just rule. 14. The senate and people lavished honors and titles upon the conqueror. He was made dictator for life, having already thrice received the appointment for shorter terms. The title of Imperator was given him, signifying that he held supreme military and civil power throughout the empire. He controlled all legislation through the tribunician powers which were conferred upon him. The censorial power gave him complete management of the senate, and oversight of the conduct of all the citizens. He used his prerogatives for the most part wisely and well. The senate, which in its old form had outlived its usefulness, was remodeled, its numbers were largely increased, and even provincials and worthy men of low rank were admitted to its membership. A beginning was made in the disbanding of the legions and settling them on farms in Italy and the provinces. Bankruptcy laws were passed, granting justice both to debtors and creditors. Free distribution of corn, which helped to pauperize thousands of the poor, was better organized, and the number of recipients reduced by more than a half. For the relief of Rome and Italy colonization was projected on a large scale. Carthage and Corinth, which had been destroyed by Rome a hundred years before, were rebuilt shortly after Caesar's death in accordance with his plans. An effort was made to reduce the evils of slavery and provide for the employment of a greater number of free men. Provincial administration was much improved and a just system of taxation was inaugurated. As early as 49 B.C. Caesar gave to the Gauls between the Po and the Alps the full Roman citizenship, and he afterwards conferred the same or similar rights on more distant communities, as Cadiz in Spain and some districts in Transalpine Gaul. The calendar, which was nearly two months out of the way, was reformed on scientific principles, and with only slight modification remains in use to-day. And these are only a few of the many projects which he had in mind for the betterment of the government in many parts of the empire. His rule promised a great improvement over the senatorial system of government, which had too often fostered the interests of the aristocratic and capitalist classes and neglected the welfare of the people taken as a whole.

Caesar's assassination. 15. Although Caesar had shown the utmost generosity and clemency towards the men who had fought against him in the Civil War, there were naturally many among them who could not accept peaceably the idea of an absolute monarchy. Disgruntled politicians, too, who felt that they had been slighted in the distribution of the offices, capitalists and others whose dreams of wealth had been balked by his financial legislation, unpractical lovers of the old republican forms, and some who could not forgive him because he had reduced them to the necessity of being forgiven by him, were all restless under the new yoke. A conspiracy comprising about sixty men, among them several of his intimate friends, was finally formed, and on the Ides (the 15th) of March, 44 B.C., he was assassinated at a meeting of the senate.¹ An act more useless or less justified by results the world has seldom seen. The empire was plunged once more into civil war, from which it was liberated only after thirteen years of strife and bloodshed, when Caesar's grandnephew and heir became sole ruler and established firmly the principle of absolutism which the greatest of the Caesars had set up.

Personal appearance. 16. Caesar is said by Suetonius (Life of Caesar, 45) to have been tall and of light complexion. He had a commanding presence, dark eyes, large mouth, and a high forehead. He was extremely fastidious about his dress and personal appearance. A premature baldness gave him not a little uneasiness. He was strong and active, excelled in athletics, and was capable of an astonishing amount of work without relaxation.

FIG. 3. — The Spot where the Body of Caesar was Cremated. From Lanciani's New Tales of Old Rome.

In energy and swiftness of action he has never been surpassed, frequently appearing in front of an army when he was supposed to be hundreds of miles away. Even in hardship and disaster his courage was firm, and he inspired his men with perfect confidence in his judgment and ability as a commander. He won their devotion, too, by his willingness to share their dangers and privations, his hearty commendation of merit, and his interest in their personal welfare. More than once he saved the day by leaving his horse and fighting side by side with his men. Although in accordance with the custom of the time he allowed his soldiers occasionally to indulge in unnecessary cruelty against a vanquished foe, yet he is distinguished above all his contemporaries for his mercy and readiness to forgive his fellow-countrymen who took sides against him. His fairness is seen in his writings, where he praises even his barbarian enemies, as the Helvetii and the Nervii.

Although the republican constitution was overthrown by Caesar, he cannot be regarded as a usurping tyrant seeking power merely to satisfy his own ambition. It was only after exhausting every means to obtain a peaceable settlement with Pompey and the senate that he began the Civil War. The alternative to fighting was complete political ruin for himself, and the triumph of the senatorial party, which had been showing itself for years less and less worthy of conducting the government. When victory placed the sole power in his hands, he saw clearly and truly that the only way to effect the reforms which the just interests of the whole people, poor as well as rich, provincials or Romans, demanded, was to keep the reins in his own hands and to use the officials and the senate simply as functionaries to carry out his will. That he rose to absolute power in accordance with a well-matured plan formed years before is not likely ; but he was a constructive statesman, capable of taking advantage of circumstances and of directing them towards the end which his discernment saw was essential for the public welfare.

In religion Caesar was a freethinker. Like most educated men of the time he could not believe in the national gods, Jupiter, Juno, and the rest. Although he showed favor to the Jews at Alexandria and elsewhere, it is not to be supposed that he knew anything of their God, in whom modern civilized peoples believe ; and the Christian religion was not yet founded. He appears, however, to have trusted somewhat in an overruling power, which he called Fortune. Death he thought should not be feared, as it brings no misery, but sets men free from the troubles of this life. He laughed at the signs which worried the superstitious. When he was disembarking in Africa for the brief campaign which was ended with his victory at Thapsus, he stumbled and fell, but giving a good turn to what others considered an unlucky omen he said, "I seize thee, Africa."

In the year after his death by a solemn vote of the senate this freethinker was enrolled among the gods and given the name Divus Iulius. The people thought that he was proved to have become a god by the appearance of a comet in the heavens at the celebration, in his honor, of the games of Venus Genetrix, who was considered to be the ancestral goddess of the Julian family.

Caesar's writings. 17. Caesar's literary activity covered a wide field. In his early years and again near the close of his life he dabbled in poetry, although not with marked success. His only extant verses are in praise of the comic poet Terence. In oratory Caesar was surpassed only by Cicero, who praises his style highly (Brutus, 252). One winter during a journey from Cisalpine Gaul to his army he composed a grammatical treatise. He wrote a book on astronomy, probably in connection with the reform of the calendar. After the suicide of the sturdy but narrow-minded republican, Cato of Utica, Caesar attacked him in a pamphlet replying to Cicero's panegyric. A collection of notable and witty sayings was also published by Caesar, and for many years after his death his official despatches and many of his private letters to Cicero, Balbus, and other friends, were extant. Of all these works only the merest fragments are preserved.

By great good fortune we have, however, Caesar's most important works, namely, the Commentaries on the Gallic and the Civil Wars. The Gallic War describes Caesar's campaigns in Gaul during the years 58-52 B.C., and was probably published in 51 B.C. The events of each year are related in a single book. The campaign of 51 B.C., in which the Gauls were completely subjugated, was described by Hirtius, one of Caesar's officers, who also recounts the attempts made at Rome in 50 B.C. by Caesar's opponents to prevent his having a second consulship in 48 B.C. The Civil War, which was published after Caesar's death, treats in detail the events of 49 and 48 B.C., from the outbreak of the war till the Alexandrine uprising. It thus includes Caesar's conquests in Italy, Spain, and Thessaly, the capture of Marseilles, the loss of Curio's army in Africa, and the unsuccessful blockade of Pompey near Dyrrachium. The narrative ends abruptly, and doubtless Caesar meant to carry it farther with the account of the Alexandrine, Asiatic, African, and Spanish campaigns, which had occupied him intermittently through 47-45 B.C.

Caesar's account of the Gallic and the Civil wars is one of the most valuable military histories ever written. The style is singularly clear and direct, free from all rhetorical or literary artifices, and from the time of Cicero to the present day has been considered the best model of simple unaffected Latinity. Caesar's purpose was not so much to write history himself as to furnish historians with the materials for writing; but Cicero says (Brutus, 262) that by his pure and clear brevity he discouraged others from attempting to improve on his work. Doubtless he wished to make his exposition favorable to himself, and presumably he concealed some of his mistakes. Apparently, too, he was sometimes misled by the reports of others, and in a few details his memory may have played him false; but for the most part his statements can be accepted with confidence.

The Commentaries have always been read and studied by military men. Napoleon recommended them to all aspiring officers, and Lord Wolseley, recently commander-in-chief of the British army, says that the words of Caesar will suggest to a soldier of to-day "reflections that he may afterwards recall with advantage as applicable to modern campaigns." At the battle of San Jacinto (April, 1836), by which Texas won its independence from Mexico in a victory strikingly like some of Caesar's achievements, the commander of the Texans was the picturesque old frontiersman, General Sam Houston, who had been a diligent student of Caesar's Commentaries.

"A wonderful man was this Caesar !

— LONGFELLOW, The Courtship of Miles Standish, Part II.

Caesar in later literature. 18. In English literature Caesar holds only an obscure place. Even in Shakspeare's Julius Caesar, the most important work in which he appears prominently, he can hardly be called the hero of the play. While Brutus, Cassius, and Antony are all idealized, Caesar is pictured as weak, vacillating, and superstitious. And yet Shakspeare held no mean opinion of him, as can be seen from such lines as "Caesar was mighty, bold, royal, and loving." — Julius Caesar, 3, 1, 127.

"There be many Caesars ere such another Julius." — Cymbeline, 3, 1, 11.

Chaucer, in the Monk's Tale, tells of Caesar's murder, wrongly putting it on the Capitol, a detail in which he is followed by Shakspeare, who makes Polonius say (Hamlet, 3, 2, 97), "I did enact Julius Caesar: I was killed i' the Capitol; Brutus killed me." There is a record as early as 1562 of a performance at Whitehall of a play entitled Julius Caesar, but this entry is possibly mythical. In 1582 a Latin play, Caesar Interfectus, by Dr. Eedes, was acted at Oxford. It is to this performance that Polonius refers in Hamlet; and probably the familiar "Et tu, Brute" first occurred in the Latin play, although Shakspeare is more likely to have taken it from the True Tragedy of Richard, Duke of York (1595).

After Shakspeare's play appeared (probably 1600–1601), an unsuccessful counterblast, called Caesar's Fall, was written by Webster, Middleton, Munday, and Drayton. In 1604 Alexander's Julius Caesar appeared. A puppet-play of 1605 was founded on Shakspeare's play. In 1719 Davenant and Dryden altered Shakspeare's play to conform to the tastes of the day. No play of Shakspeare is more popular or has been translated into more languages than Julius Caesar. The Duke of Buckingham's two plays, The Tragedy of Caesar and The Tragedy of Brutus, were printed in 1722, but neither was ever acted.

A different period of Caesar's life is presented in Fletcher's tragedy The False One (about 1620), which deals with Caesar's experiences in Egypt after the battle of Pharsalus (§ 13). His relations with Cleopatra give the principal interest to the plot. An adaptation of this play was produced in 1724 by Colley Cibber, whose Caesar in Egypt shows a nobler and more idealized characterization of both Caesar and Cleopatra. Pompey's murder and Caesar's narrow escape from destruction in the war with Ptolemy are important episodes of both plays.

The only novel in which Caesar holds a prominent part is A Friend of Caesar (1900), written by an American, Mr. William Stearns Davis, and even here the interest of the story centers round other characters.

In the literatures of other languages Caesar has exerted even less influence than in English. In 1550 the French scholar Muret (generally called Muretus) published a poem in Latin called Julius Caesar, which consisted largely of anecdotes taken from Suetonius. Among Voltaire's early tragedies are his Brutus and La Mort de César, neither of which compares favorably with Shakspeare's play. A German school teacher, Nicodemus Frischlin, produced in 1588 a Latin play, the Helvetiogermani, which relates the story, given in the first book of the Gallic War, of the campaigns against the Helvetii and the Germans under Ariovistus. In the comedy Julius Redivivus, Frischlin represents Caesar and Cicero visiting the upper world in his own day at Strassburg. It contains passages based on Caesar's account of the Germans in the sixth book of the Gallic War. Petrarch, the Italian poet of the fourteenth century, wrote a life of Caesar, which follows closely the ancient sources, and in the account of the Gallic and the Civil wars is based on Caesar's own books. Louis XIV of France translated the first twenty-nine chapters of the first book of the Gallic War, containing the narrative of the Helvetian campaign. Auguste Barbier's play, Jules César (1848), is of no special merit. A patriotic and historical poem, Vercingétorix et César, by J. Pautet, was published in 1865.

Though his influence in literature has been small, Caesar has always been a familiar name to school children in all lands where Latin forms an essential part of the educational system. The simple, clear style of his writings, as well as the interest of the narrative itself and the greatness of the author, make it improbable that Caesar's influence in this direction will ever wane.

"O Julius Caesar, thou art mighty yet!" — Julius Caesar, 5, 3, 94.

LIFE OF POMPEY

Birth. 19. Pompey's career illustrates the extremes of fortune. Rising in the height of his successes to such honor as no Roman before him had ever won, he finally became a fugitive, seeking safety wherever it might be found, and met death at the hands of a cowardly assassin.

Early exploits.
Joins the senatorial party.

Gnaeus Pompey was born September 29, 106 B.C., not quite nine months after the birth of his friend and political supporter, Cicero, and about four years earlier than his rival and conqueror, Caesar. While a mere boy he saw service in his father's army, and at the age of twenty-three so distinguished himself as an independent commander, in behalf of the senatorial or aristocratic party, that Sulla, the greatest general of the time, saluted him with the complimentary title of Imperator, a most extraordinary honor for a man so young. During the next two years, he commanded with such success against the popular or democratic forces in Italy, Sicily, and Africa, that Sulla greeted him on his return with the surname of Magnus, or the Great, and after some reluctance permitted him to celebrate a triumph. This was the first time that such an honor was granted a man who had not held any public office, and who, consequently, was not a member of the senate.

Commands against Lepidus and Sertorius. 20. Upon Sulla's death, in 78 B.C., the democratic consul, Lepidus, tried to overthrow the Sullan constitution, which had put all the government in the hands of the aristocratic party. Pompey was given command against Lepidus and soon drove him out of Italy. In the next year he was sent by the senate to aid Metellus in the war against Sertorius in Spain. Sertorius declared that a ferule was the only weapon he should need with which to whip this lad, if he were not afraid of the old woman Metellus; and in fact he would have worsted Pompey in pitched battle more than once if Metellus had not come to the rescue. Finally in 72 B.C. Sertorius was treacherously assassinated by his own officers, and Pompey found no difficulty in defeating his successor and bringing the war to a close. On his return to Italy he met and cut to pieces five thousand fugitive slaves from the army of Spartacus, who had been overthrown by Crassus. For this exploit he egotistically claimed that, while Crassus had conquered the slaves in battle, he had plucked up the whole war by the roots.

First consulship. 21. Although he had not yet reached the legal age, and had held none of the lower offices, Pompey was elected consul with Crassus for the year 70 B.C. He won the favor of the popular party by restoring to the tribunate the powers it had possessed before Sulla's reforms, and by taking away from the senate the exclusive right of sitting on juries in the law courts. Caesar supported these democratic measures and was glad to see the senate alienated from the popular hero. During this year Pompey received his formal discharge from military service, declaring at the ceremony that he had served the full number of campaigns prescribed by law, and all under himself as general.

FIG. 4.—POMPEY : COPENHAGEN

Wars with the pirates and with Mithridates. 22. For the next two years Pompey lived in retirement, but in 67 B.C., upon the proposal of the tribune Gabinius, he was given by vote of the people, in spite of strong opposition from the senate, an extraordinary command against the pirates, with absolute control over the whole Mediterranean and its shores for fifty miles inland. The pirates had carried things with a high hand for many years, destroying fleets, plundering cities and temples, taking Roman officials prisoner, and above all cutting off Rome's corn supply from the provinces. In three months Pompey cleared the sea of pirates, making commerce secure once more and restoring plenty and cheap prices to the capital.

Through this astonishing success Pompey became by far the most distinguished man of the time. The following year the tribune Manilius proposed that he should be given charge of the war against Mithridates, king of Pontus in Asia Minor, who had been warring with the Romans for more than twenty years. Pompey brought this troublesome and dangerous war to an end in 63 B.C., and reorganized the states of Asia, adding several new provinces to the Roman domain and increasing the revenues of the treasury by more than a half. One of his achievements was the capture of Jerusalem and the reduction of Judea to a Roman dependency. When he returned home in 62 B.C., he might easily have seized the supreme power with the help of his army and the political support of the people. But shrinking from such violation of the constitution, he dismissed his legions as soon as he landed in Italy, and was thus left at the mercy of the jealous senate, which long refused to grant him a triumph, to ratify his acts in the East, or to assign farms to his veterans.

Friendly relations with Caesar. 23. When Caesar returned from Spain in 60 B.C., his chief ambition was to secure the consulship for the following year. Taking advantage of the feud between his friend Pompey and the senate, he formed the First Triumvirate (§ 7) with Pompey and Crassus for the purpose of forwarding their own interests in spite of senatorial opposition. Early in his consulship he secured the ratification of Pompey's settlement of the East and the assignment of lands for his veterans.

The friendship of the two men was sealed by the marriage of Pompey to Caesar's daughter Julia. When the people had voted to Caesar the governorship of Cisalpine Gaul and Illyricum for five years, it was Pompey who proposed in the senate that Transalpine Gaul should be added to Caesar's province.

In 57 B.C. Pompey was made commissioner for five years of the corn supply throughout the empire, a position of high honor but little power. His request to be intrusted with the restoration of the exiled Ptolemy Auletes to the throne of Egypt was refused by the senate.

At the Lucca conference in 56 B.C. (§ 9) Pompey and Crassus were designated as consuls for 55 B.C., and Pompey was to receive the governorship of Spain for the five years following. He appears to have felt, however, that his influence, which had been waning as Caesar's had been growing during the last few years, would be endangered if he left Italy. Consequently, under the pretext of administering the corn supply, and disregarding all precedent, he committed his province to lieutenants and remained near Rome.

The break with Caesar. 24. When Julia died in September, 54 B.C., a strong tie between Pompey and Caesar was broken, and with the death of Crassus the next year the community of interests which had held the triumvirate together was at an end (§ 10). Still no open rupture occurred, and in 53 B.C. Pompey loaned Caesar a legion to be used in Gaul. Anarchy prevailed at Rome, elections even could not be held regularly, and at the beginning of 52 B.C. such disorder followed the murder of Clodius, Caesar's demagogue supporter, that Pompey was made sole consul by the senate.

This action made him the leader of the senatorial party, and put an end to the union of eighteen years' duration with Caesar.

During the year Pompey married Cornelia, daughter of Metellus Scipio, a bitter enemy of Caesar, and on August 1 he made his father-in-law his colleague in the consulship for the rest of the year. In the next two years Pompey and the enemies of Caesar in the senate were intriguing to prevent Caesar from receiving a second consulship in 48 B.C., and refusing all of Caesar's overtures for peaceable settlement of the rivalry between himself and Pompey (§§ 11, 12).

In the fall of 50 B.C., upon the false report that Caesar was collecting his troops in upper Italy, the consul Marcellus with both consuls elect, all fanatically opposed to Caesar, ordered Pompey, on their own responsibility and therefore unconstitutionally, to defend his country, using the forces then under his command and, if necessary, levying more. Pompey was so overconfident, being deceived partly by extravagant demonstrations throughout Italy over his recovery from a severe illness, and partly by the assertions of certain officers that Caesar's soldiers would desert as soon as war began, that he neglected all proper precautions, boasting that, whenever he stamped with his foot in any part of Italy, troops enough would arise in an instant.

The civil war.
Pompey's defeat. 25. When, in January, 49 B.C., the implacable senate, refusing all of Caesar's proposals, declared the country to be in danger, and summoned Pompey and the other magistrates to its defense (§ 12), Pompey was found to be far less ready for action than his rival. Upon learning that Caesar had crossed the Rubicon and that town after town was passing into his hands, all Rome was filled with the wildest confusion. Wholly unprepared for fighting, Pompey and his supporters fled in hot haste to Brundisium, whence the two consuls and part of the army at once embarked for Dyrrachium, and Pompey himself with the rest of his troops followed a few weeks later, when Caesar arrived before the town.

Making his headquarters at Dyrrachium, Pompey spent the year 49 B.C. in strengthening his fleet and collecting men and supplies of every sort from all the countries of the East, where his name had been one to conjure with ever since his exploits in the Mithridatic War. When Caesar, after his victorious campaigns in Italy and Spain,¹ arrived in Epirus at the beginning of the next year, his little army was no match for Pompey's in numbers or equipment. But while Caesar's troops were veterans, who had learned to put implicit confidence in their general and were ready to do and dare the utmost in his behalf, Pompey was hampered by the jealousies and feuds of the many nobles and magistrates in his suite, each one of whom wanted a share in the direction of affairs.

Although Caesar's daring attempt to blockade Pompey near Dyrrachium was a failure, he amply atoned for this reverse a few weeks later by his crushing defeat of the Pompeians at Pharsalus (August 9, 48 B.C.).

Flight and death. 26. Pompey himself fled with a handful of companions. Coming to the sea, he spent the night in a fisherman's cottage, and next morning obtained passage in a merchant ship for Lesbos, where his wife and younger son were sojourning during the war.

The pathetic meeting with his wife is related by Plutarch. She had been led to believe that his success at Dyrrachium had decided the war in his favor. When she learned that he had come as a fugitive with a single ship, and that not his own, she fell in a swoon. Upon recovering her senses, she was brought to Pompey, who tried to console her with philosophical reflections. "It behooves us, who are mortals born," he said, "to endure these events, and to try fortune yet again; neither is it any less possible to recover our former state than it was to fall from that into this."

Taking his wife and a few friends on board, Pompey proceeded on his way. After mature deliberation he decided to seek refuge with the Egyptian king, whose father had been restored to his throne through Pompey's favor. The young king's ministers, hoping to win Caesar's favor, had him treacherously murdered before the eyes of his wife and friends, as he was stepping ashore. The body, which was left lying on the sand, was burned by a freedman of Pompey, who had accompanied him to land. The funeral pile was made from planks of an old fishing boat. The head was reserved as a trophy for Caesar, who, when he saw it, turned away in disgust and sorrow, and afterwards had two of the guilty ministers punished with death.

Pompey died September 28, 48 B.C., the thirteenth anniversary of his triumph for the victory over Mithridates, and one day before he would have been fifty-eight years old. He was an honest man in an age of corruption and crookedness, a good husband and father, and a capable military officer. But he was not gifted with Caesar's strong character and power of leadership, and if he had been victorious at Pharsalus, there can be no doubt that he would have been the mere tool of the bloodthirsty, unscrupulous aristocrats, who were eager only to enrich themselves at the expense of their political and personal enemies, in utter disregard of the welfare of the state as a whole.

CAESAR'S ARMY

The legion. 27. The tactical unit in the Roman army was the legion, the full strength of which was theoretically 6000 men. But, as in modern armies, the effective fighting strength was constantly changing, owing to sickness, desertions, or losses in battle. It is estimated that Caesar's legions never much exceeded 5000 men, and at the battle of Pharsalus, as we know from his own statement (B.C. 3, 89), they averaged only 2750. Like modern corps and regiments, the legions were designated by numbers, as first, tenth, etc.

The legionary soldier was a Roman citizen of the lower classes. He enlisted for twenty years, and at the expiration of his term was rewarded with money, often with a farm, thus being assured of a competence for the rest of his days, just as in our own times veterans are given pensions and government positions. Veterans were often invited by a general to reënter the service for one or more campaigns. They were exempt from all the harder duties, and received liberal pay and rewards. Caesar paid his legionaries at first 120, afterwards 225, denarii (about $40) a year, but the purchasing value of money was greater then than now. In addition to their pay, soldiers received a share of the booty, and gifts from the general, after successful campaigns. They were trained to a variety of duties, and could fortify a camp, build bridges, or repair ships, as readily as they could fight. They constituted the heavy infantry of the army.

Divisions of the legion. 28. The legion was divided into ten tactical units called cohorts, each cohort comprising three maniples, or companies, and each maniple being again subdivided into two centuries, or platoons. Accordingly, there were thirty maniples and sixty centuries in each legion. The best men of the legion were in the first cohort.

The auxiliaries. 29. While the brunt of the fighting fell on the legions, there was a considerable body of light infantry (peditēs levis armātūrae) always attached to the army. These were never Romans, but were furnished by allied or subject states upon the requisition of the commander, or were hired from independent nations. They comprised the slingers (funditorēs) and archers (sagittariī). They had only light defensive armor or none at all. In battle they were stationed at the wings, and were depended on merely to make a show of numbers or to help in confusing the enemy at the first attack.

The cavalry. 30. The cavalry also belonged to the auxiliaries, being raised altogether from allied and subject states. Caesar's cavalry was composed of Gauls, Germans, and Spaniards. The Germans were by far the most effective. Horsemen were no match for infantry in actual conflict, but they were useful for defending the legions from flank attacks, for reconnoitring, and especially in the pursuit of a defeated enemy.

The general. 31. Caesar as governor of a province had absolute command of his army. Although he possessed the imperium, or supreme power, from the moment of entering upon his office, the title of imperātor, general-in-chief, was given by his soldiers after his first victory, which was won over the Helvetians in 58 B.C.

The lieutenants. 32. The lieutenants (lēgātī) were members of the Roman senate, appointed by that body on the nomination of the general. They could be detailed by the general for any service, civil or military. Caesar appointed his lieutenants to the command of single legions. Occasionally a lieutenant was given temporarily an independent command of two or more legions, with the title of lēgātus prō praetōre ('lieutenant acting as commander'). Among Caesar's most capable lieutenants were Labienus, who deserted him at the beginning of the Civil War, Publius Crassus, son of the triumvir, Quintus Cicero, the orator's brother, and Mark Antony, who afterwards shared with Octavian the rule of the Roman world.

The quaestor. 33. Every governor of a province had a quaestor assigned to him by lot. These officials, elected annually at Rome, had charge of the finances of the province, the pay, equipment, and supplies of the army, and the management of the booty. Caesar occasionally put a quaestor in command of one or more legions.

The commander-in-chief with his lieutenants, quaestor, and a large number of aids and guards, formed the general staff of the army.

The tribunes. 34. The tribunes were young men of equestrian rank, who obtained appointment from the general himself through family and political influences. Being without military experience and usually remaining with the army only a short time, they were of less value than the lieutenants. Their command in battle was apparently limited to small detachments of one or more cohorts. They presided over courts-martial and took part in the councils of war. They also had numerous administrative duties, such as maintaining the discipline of the camp, attending to the levying or discharge of troops, and assisting the quaestor in providing supplies and equipment. There were six tribunes to each legion.

The centurions. 35. Most important of the subordinate officers were the centurions. Unlike the superior officers they were professional soldiers, having been promoted from the ranks through merit. As their name implies they were commanders of centuries. Accordingly there were sixty in each legion, six in each cohort, and two in each maniple (§ 28).

Of the six centurions in each cohort the two belonging to the first maniple were called pīlus prior and pīlus posterior; the two belonging to the second maniple, prīnceps prior and prīnceps posterior; and the two of the third maniple, hastātus prior and hastātus posterior. The pīlus prior must have commanded the whole cohort, and within each maniple the prior, or senior, centurion was doubtless in charge.

The cohort to which a centurion belonged was indicated by prefixing the proper numeral. The lowest centurion of the tenth cohort of any legion was decimus hastātus posterior, the fourth centurion of the fifth cohort was quīntus prīnceps posterior, the first centurion of the first cohort was prīmus pīlus prior, generally abbreviated to prīmipīlus.

The prīmipīlus was the chief centurion of the legion and ranked next to the lieutenant, its commanding officer. This was the highest rank to which any centurion could aspire. The six centurions of the first cohort, called centuriōnēs prīmōrum ordinum, outranked all the others and enjoyed the special confidence of their superiors, being the only centurions invited to the councils of war. The centurions of the tenth cohort were the lowest in rank (centuriōnēs infimōrum ordinum), and the order of promotion was probably through the six grades of the tenth cohort, then of the ninth, the eighth, and so on to the first. Men of special bravery were sometimes promoted over the heads of their superiors. Caesar tells of advancing a worthy centurion from a position in the eighth cohort to the rank of primipilus, the highest in the whole legion.

The council of war. 36. The commanding officer frequently invited to a council of war his lieutenants, quaestor, tribunes, and centurions of highest rank. This body could merely advise. The general was perfectly free to go contrary to its judgment.

The prefects. 37. The prefects were officers of the auxiliary troops, whether infantry or cavalry. The subordinate prefects were generally of the same nationality as their men, but the highest prefects were Romans. The engineering operations of the army were also in charge of an officer called prefect of engineers.

Armor. 38. The legionary soldier was protected by a helmet (galea or cassis), which was adorned with a crest, and left the face exposed; a leather cuirass (lōrica), reënforced with strips of metal; and a shield (scūtum) of cylindrical shape, made of wood covered with hide. Probably a greave (ocrea) was worn on the right shin, the left was sufficiently protected by the shield.

Weapons. 39. The weapons of the legionary were the javelin (pīlum) and the sword (gladius). The javelin, which was about six feet long, consisted of a wooden shaft in which was fitted a long slender iron hardened only at the point. When the weapon struck, the iron bent and thus made it unserviceable for the enemy's use. The javelins were hurled with great force and accuracy by the charging soldiers when they were about seventy-five or one hundred feet from the enemy. In the hand-to-hand encounter which followed, the weapon used was the sword, about two feet long, double-edged, and sharp-pointed. It was carried on the right side suspended from a belt passing over the left shoulder.

The standards. 40. The standard of the legion was a silver or bronze eagle (aquila), with outstretched wings, carried on a long pole. It was borne by the aquilifer under the special charge of the chief centurion (primipilus).

Each maniple had its standard (signum), of varying forms so that the soldiers could easily distinguish their own. Animals were the commonest devices, and streamers or metal ornaments were often attached. The cohort had no separate standard.

The cavalry and the auxiliary infantry had rectangular flags or banners (vexilla) of different colors. A vexillum was also kept flying at the general's quarters.

Rations. 41. Wheat was the favorite food of the Roman soldiers, about two pounds forming one day's ration. On one occasion in the Civil War, rations for three weeks were issued, but ordinarily the soldier received his allowance every fortnight. The grinding and cooking were the work of the soldiers themselves. Variety of diet could be obtained by trading with the sutlers, who attended the army in considerable numbers. Meat was only sparingly eaten.

The baggage. 42. On the march each soldier carried his own personal baggage, containing rations, clothing, cooking and intrenching utensils, arms, etc., all tied in a secure bundle (sarcina) and fastened to a forked stick slung over the shoulder. This pack must have weighed, according to the amount of rations, from thirty to sixty pounds.

The general baggage of the legion, including tents, artillery, provisions, hand-mills for grinding the grain, etc., was carried by pack-animals (iumenta) or on wagons. From four hundred to five hundred pack-animals must have been required for each legion. The baggage train was such a hindrance to the army on the march that it was called impedimenta.

The camp. Its fortifications. 43. The Roman army always spent the night in a carefully built camp (castra). The shape of the camp was as nearly square or rectangular as the nature of the ground allowed. The favorite site was a gently sloping hill, which would give a commanding position against an enemy, and near which could be found an abundance of water and fodder, with wood for fuel and for fortification. The place was selected, and the plan of the camp marked out, by scouts sent on ahead. When the army came up, men were at once detailed to complete the work.

A ditch (fossa) was dug round the outer line of the camp, the dirt being thrown up on the inner side to form a rampart (vallum). The dimensions of ditch and rampart varied according to circumstances, but ordinarily the ditch was about nine feet wide at the top and seven feet deep, the rampart about six feet high and six feet broad at the top. On the outer edge of the rampart stakes (valli) were planted close together, making a fence, some four feet high, from behind which the defenders hurled their weapons down upon their assailants. Towers and other defenses were sometimes added to the rampart.

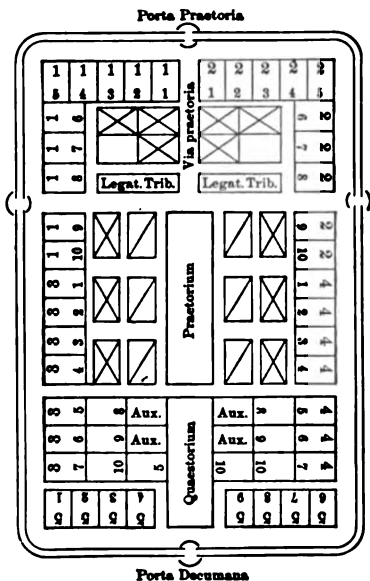

FIG. 5.— Plan of a Roman Camp.

Interior of the camp. 44. In the middle of the camp was a roomy open space, in which were the general's quarters (praetorium), the tribunal from which he addressed his troops, and the altar for sacrificing. The quaestor's quarters were just behind the praetorium. From the praetorium a street ran to the main entrance of the camp (porta praetoria) in the middle of the front rampart. Directly opposite this entrance, in the rear wall of the camp, was the porta decumana. Each of the side walls also had an entrance connected by a wide street passing in front of the praetorium. All the troops, both infantry and cavalry, had their regular positions in camp, so that every man could find his own quarters without any confusion.

The winter camp (hiberna) was constructed on the same plan, but as it was a permanent home of the soldiers for several months, its fortifications were ordinarily stronger, and thatch-covered huts took the place of tents.

The gates were always securely guarded, and their defense was made easier by the arrangement of the entrance, whereby any one attempting to enter exposed his right side, which was unprotected by the shield.

The march. 45. The day's march usually began at sunrise and was completed about noon. Sixteen or seventeen miles made an ordinary march, but Caesar's army was famous for forced marches (magna itinera), of twenty-five miles or more, by which the enemy were often taken completely by surprise. The vanguard (primum agmen) consisted of cavalry and light infantry. The legions followed at a suitable distance, each legion preceding its own baggage (impedimenta), except in times of danger, when the baggage of the whole army was united. A strong force of infantry brought up the rear (novissimum agmen). Occasionally, in the immediate proximity of the enemy and over level ground, the army marched in three parallel columns, and could thus be quickly formed into the triple line of battle (triplex aciēs).

The battle. 46. The legion was generally drawn up for battle in three lines (triplex aciēs). The number of cohorts in each line varied according to circumstances, but the normal arrangement was probably with four cohorts, side by side, in the first line, and three in each of the other two.

The three maniples of each cohort stood side by side, the second century of each maniple behind the first. If two or more legions were in line, they stood beside each other, perhaps with a slight interval between, but it is unlikely that there was any interval between the cohorts in the first line of a single legion. Cavalry and auxiliaries were generally stationed on the extreme wings of the army.

Occasionally the army was drawn up in a double line (duplex acies), with five cohorts in each, and more rarely, as at Pharsalus (B.C. 3, 89), a fourth line was formed as a special reserve. Other formations were occasionally adopted as circumstances demanded.

The first line began the battle, charging the enemy at full speed. When they came within range, the soldiers hurled their spears upon the enemy's line, and then fought hand to hand with the sword. The men of the second line gradually worked their way into the fight, taking the places of the killed and wounded. As a man became exhausted he fell back, giving way to a fresh man of the second line until rested enough to resume fighting. The third line was held as a reserve to be launched on the enemy at a critical moment or to support the first two lines in any way desired.

The siege. 47. The Romans exercised great ingenuity in taking walled towns. If the fortifications were weak, an assault was tried at once. The walls were cleared of defenders by showers of well-aimed missiles, the ditch round the town was filled with earth and brush, the gates and walls were demolished at the most convenient points, or scaling-ladders were run up, and the capture (expugnatio) of the town was speedily accomplished.

Some towns were so strong in their position that they could be taken only by a blockade (obsidio), which might continue until the besieged were starved into submission. Caesar's investment of Alesia, in 52 B.C., was one of the most remarkable military operations of all time.

If a town was strongly defended, but not inaccessible in location, a regular siege (oppugnātiō) was begun, with elaborate preparations culminating in an assault. A siege mound (agger) of timber and earth was built, starting from a point nearly, or quite, out of range of the enemy's missiles, and rising in height as it approached the wall of the town. The builders were protected by high movable fences and by rows of sheds (vīnae) along the sides of the mound. Stronger sheds (mūsculī) were used as the work came near the wall. Archers and slingers, and sharpshooters with artillery for hurling stones or shooting darts, also endeavored to prevent the enemy from manning the walls. Sometimes the mound equaled the height of the wall; in this case the invaders rushed along the mound and entered the town without much difficulty. Sometimes it was raised only high enough to admit more easily of using scaling-ladders (scālae) or towers (turrēs). The towers were huge structures on wheels, built up, story upon story, to overtop the enemy's wall. From them missiles could be hurled into the town, or drawbridges thrown out, on which soldiers passed across to occupy the wall and seize the town. Mines (cuniculī) were sometimes dug to give entrance to the town. Whenever a breach had been made in the wall, ranks of men, holding their shields so that they overlapped and formed a tortoise-covering (testūdō) above their heads, ran up and tried to force an entrance.

The besieged tried in every way to thwart the assailant. Sometimes the siege mound was undermined or set on fire. The sheds, too, unless they were well protected by strong coverings and green hides, were liable to be destroyed by fire or heavy stones. The implements for demolishing the walls were occasionally caught in nooses and hauled into the city. Sorties were made when possible in the effort to drive the enemy away and to destroy his works.

The fleet. 48. The Romans had no distinct naval service, but the fighting men of a fleet, both officers and privates, were drawn from the legions. The tactics were comparatively simple, consisting mainly of ramming an enemy's vessel with the sharp metal-covered beak (rōstrum) and sinking it, or of running alongside and grappling it while the legionaries sprang on board and engaged in a hand-to-hand combat. Towers were sometimes erected on a ship from which missiles could be sent down on the enemy.

The ships of war (nāvēs longae) were about eight times as long as broad. They had only one or two sails, being propelled mainly by rowers, and were capable of high speed. The commonest form was the trireme (trirēmis), in which the rowers sat on three levels or banks. The rudders were two large oars, one on each side, at the stern. For carrying troops or supplies, transports (nāvēs onerāriæ) were used. These were only about four times as long as broad, and were consequently steadier, but far slower, than the ships of war. They were propelled mainly by sails.

A FEW USEFUL BOOKS FOR THE STUDY OF CAESAR

- Fowler, W. W. Julius Caesar. Heroes of the Nations series, N.Y. and London, 1892. The best account of Caesar's life and influence, popular but scholarly.
- Froude, J. A. Caesar, a Sketch. N.Y., 1879 and (Harper, cheap edition) 1881. An interesting but partisan history of Roman politics and of Caesar. Unfair towards Cicero.
- Trollope, A. The Commentaries of Caesar. Edinburgh and London, 1870, Philadelphia, 1875. An account, book by book, of the Gallic and the Civil wars.
- Dodge, Col. T. A. Caesar. Boston and N.Y., 1892. A history of the art of war among the Romans, with a detailed description of Caesar's campaigns.
- Holmes, T. R. Caesar's Conquest of Gaul. London and N.Y., 1899. An excellent narrative of the Gallic War, with abundant discussions of many knotty points.
- Napoléon III. Histoire de Jules César. Paris and N.Y., 1865-1866; translation, London and N.Y., 1865. To be used with caution. Has a valuable atlas, containing maps of Gaul in sections, and plans of battles.
- Stoffel, Col. E. G. H. C. Histoire de Jules César, Guerre Civile. Paris, 1887. Continues Napoleon's work.
- Heuzey, L. Les Opérations Militaires de Jules César. Paris, 1886. A study of Caesar's operations in Macedonia, Illyricum, Epirus, and Thessaly, in the Civil War. Good maps.
- Scott, F. J. Portraits of Julius Caesar. London and N.Y., 1903. Has a brief sketch of Caesar's life, followed by a description of all the known coins, busts, and statues which purport to give his likeness. Many plates and cuts.
- Baring-Gould, S. Tragedy of the Caesars. London, 1892. Vol. I gives an entertaining narrative of Caesar, with the most important busts and statues of Caesar, Pompey, and others.
- Boissier, G. Cicero and his Friends. N.Y. and London, 1897. Pages 209-302 treat of Caesar's relations with Cicero.
- Suetonius. Lives of the Caesars. Alexander Thomson's translation, revised by T. Forester. London, 1896. The life of Julius Caesar is one of the most reliable of the ancient sources.

- Plutarch. Lives, Vol. IV. Clough's translation. Boston, 1881. The life of Caesar is interesting, but not to be depended on where it conflicts with other sources.
- Mommsen, T. History of Rome. N.Y., 1895. Vols. IV and V have a full and highly laudatory account of Caesar, who is Mommsen's hero.
- Holm, A. History of Greece. London and N.Y., 1894-1898. Vol. IV, Ch. 28, and especially Note 2, may be read as an antidote to Mommsen.
- Oehler, R. Bilder-Atlas zu Caesars Büchern De Bello Gallico. Leipzig, 1890. Has useful pictures and maps.
- Kraner-Dittenberger. De Bello Gallico. Berlin, 1890. Includes the eighth book by Hirtius. The best annotated edition for those who can read German.
- Kraner-Hoffmann. De Bello Civili. Berlin, 1890. Similar in plan to the last-named book.
- Benoist et Dosson. Jules César, Commentaires sur la Guerre des Gaules. Paris, 1899. Useful for its notes on history, geography, and antiquities.
- Meusel, H. Lexicon Caesarianum. Berlin, 1887-1893. A list of all words in Caesar's writings, including proper names, and stating all the passages in which each word occurs.
- Davis, W. S. A Friend of Caesar. N.Y., 1900. A novel of the time of the Civil War. Gives a satisfactory picture of Caesar, and will be read with interest and profit.

Plots of Orgetorix, a Helvetic noble

The Helvetii plan a migration into Gaul. 2. Apud Helvētiōs longē nōbilissimū fuit et ditissimū Orgetorix. Is, M. Messālā, M. Pīsōne cōsulibus, rēgnī cupiditāte inductus coniūratiōnem nōbilitātis fēcit, et civitātī persuāsit ut dē finibus
10 suis cum omnibus cōpiis exirent: perfacile esse, cum virtūte omnibus praestarent, tōtius Galliae imperiō potiri. Id hōc facilius iīs persuāsit, quod undique loci nātūrā Helvētīi continentur: unā ex parte flūmine Rhēnō lātissimō atque altissimō, quī agrum Helvētium ā Germānis dīvidit; alterā
15 ex parte monte Iūrā altissimō, quī est inter Sēquanōs et Helvētiōs; tertiā lacū Lemannō et flūmine Rhodanō, quī prōvinciam nostram ab Helvētīis dīvidit. His rēbus fiēbat ut et minus lātē vagārentur et minus facile finitimīs bellum inferre possent; quā ex parte hominēs bellandī cupidī magnō
20 dolōre adficiēbantur. Prō multitudīne autem hominum et prō glōriā bellī atque fortitudinis angustōs sē finēs habere arbitrābantur, quī in longitūdinem millia passuum CCXL, in lātitudinem CLXXX patēbant.

11. Helvētiī iam per angustias et finēs Sēquanōrum suās cōpiās trādūxerant, et in Haeduōrum finēs pervēnerant eōrumque agrōs populābantur. Haeduī, cum sē suaque ab iis dēfendere nōn possent, lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittunt rogātum auxiliū: Ita sē omnī tempore dē populō Rōmānō meritōs esse ut paene in cōspectū exercitūs nostrī agrī vāstārī, liberī in servitūtem abdūci, oppida Caesar annihilates one canton of the Helvetii at the Saône.

12. Flūmen est Arar, quod per finēs Haeduōrum et Sēquanōrum in Rhodanum influit, incredibili lēnitāte, ita ut oculīs in utram partem fluat iudicārī nōn possit. Id Helvētiī ratibus ac lintribus iūctis trānsibant. Ubi per explorātōrēs Caesar certior factus est trēs iam partēs cōpiārum Helvētiōs id
30 flūmen trādūxisse, quārtam ferē partem citrā flūmen

Ararim reliquam esse, de tertiā vigiliā cum legiōnibus tribus ē castris profectus ad eam partem pervēnit quae nondum flūmen trānsierat. Eōs impeditōs et inopinantes adgressus magnam partem eōrum concidit; reliqui sēsē fugae mandarunt atque in proximās silvās abdidērunt. Is pāgus appellābātur Tigurinus; nam omnis civitās Helvētia in quattuor pāgōs divisa est.

Hic pāgus ūnus, cum domō exisset, patrum nostrōrum memoriā L. Cassium cōsulem interfēcerat et eius exercitum sub iugum miserat. Ita sive cāsū sive cōsiliō deōrum immortalium, quae pars civitātis Helvētiaē insignem calamitatem populō Rōmānō intulerat, ea p̄nceps poenās persolvit. Quā in rē Caesar nōn solum publicās sed etiam privātās iniuriās ultus est, quod eius socerī L. Pisōnis avum, L. Pisōnem lēgātum, Tigurini eōdem proeliō quō Cassium interfēcerant.

13. Hōc proeliō factō, reliquās cōpiās Helvētiōrum ut cōsequi posset, pontem in Arari faciendum cūrat atque ita exercitum trādūcit.

Caesar's terms and Divico's proud reply. 14. His Caesar ita respondit: Eo sibi minus dubitationis dari quod eas res quas legati Helvetium commemorassent memoriam teneret, atque eo grauius ferre, quo minus merito populi Romanum accidissent; qui si alicuius iniuriae sibi conscius fuisset, non fuisse difficile cavere; sed eo deceptum, quod neque commissum a se intellexeret quare timeret, neque sine causa timendum

Hostility to Caesar among the Haedui

 20 tum quod essent pūblicē polliciti flāgitāre. Nam propter frīgora, quod Gallia sub septentriōnibus, ut ante dictum est, posita est, nōn modo frūmenta in agrīs mātūra nōn erant, sed nē pābuli quidem satis magna cōpia suppetēbat; eō autem frūmentō quod flūmine Ararī nāvibus 25 subvēxerat proptereā utī minus poterat, quod iter ab
 Ararī Helvētīi āverterant, ā quibus discēdere nōlēbat.
 Diem ex diē dūcere Haeduī; cōnferrī, comportārī, adesse dicere.

Ubi sē diūtius dūcī intellēxit et diem instāre quō diē frumentum militibus mētīrī oportēret, convocātis eōrum prīncipibus, quōrum magnam cōpiam in castris habēbat, — in hīs Dīviciācō et Liscō, quī summō magistrātūi praeerat, 5 quem ‘vergobretum’ appellant Haedui, quī creātur annuus et vitae necisque in suōs habet potestātem, — graviter eōs accūsāt, quod, cum neque emī neque ex agrīs sūmī possit, tam necessāriō tempore, tam propinquis hostibus, ab iīs nōn sublevētur, praesertim cum magnā ex parte eōrum 10 precibus adductus bellum suscēperit; multō etiam gravius quod sit dēstitūtus queritur.

Liscus explains that there is an anti-Roman faction among the Haedui. 17. Tum dēmum Liscus orātiōne Caesaris adductus quod antea tacuerat prōpōnit: Esse nōn nullōs quōrum auctōritās apud plēbem plūrimum valeat, quī prīvatim plūs possint quam ipsī magistrātūs. Hōs sēditiosā atque improbā orātiōne multitudinem dētērrere nē frumentum cōferant quod dēbeant: praestāre, sī iam prīncipātum Galliae obtinere nōn possint, Gallōrum quam Rōmānōrum 20 imperia perferre; neque dubitāre dēbere quīn, sī Helvētiōs superāverint Rōmānī, unā cum reliquā Galliā Haeduīs libertātem sint ēreptūrī. Ab iisdem nostra cōnsilia quaeque in castris gerantur hostibus ēnūntiārī; hōs ā sē coercērī nōn posse. Quīn etiam, quod necessāriam rem coactus Caesarī 25 ēnūntiārīt, intellegere sēsē quantō id cum periculō fēcerit, et ob eam causam quam diū potuerit tacuisse.

Dumnorix is the chief of this faction. 18. Caesar hāc orātiōne Liscī Dumnorīgem, Dīviciācī frātre, dēsīgnārī sentiēbat; sed, quod plūribus praesentibus eās rēs iactārī nōlēbat, 30 celeriter concilium dīmittīt, Liscum retinet. Quaerit ex sōlō ea quae in conventū dixerat; dicit liberius atque audācius. Eadem sēcrētō ab aliis quaerit; reperit esse vēra:

 Ipsum esse Dumnorīgem, summā audāciā, magnā apud plēbem propter liberālitātem grātiā, cupidum rērum novā-5 rum. Complūrēs annōs portōria reliquaque omnia Haedu-ōrum vectigālia parvō pretiō redempta habēre, proptereā quod illō licente contrā licērī audeat nēmō. Hīs rēbus et suam rem familiārem auxisse et facultātēs ad largiendum magnās comparāsse; magnum numerum equitātūs suō 10 sūmptū semper alere et circum sē habēre, neque solum domī sed etiam apud finitimās civitātēs largiter posse; atque huius potentiae causā mātrem in Biturigibus hominī illic nōbilissimō ac potentissimō conlocāsse; ipsum ex Hel-vētiis uxōrem habēre, sorōrem ex mātre et propinquās suās
 15 nūptum in aliās civitātēs conlocāsse. Favēre et cupere
 Helvētiis propter eam adfinitātem, ōdisse etiam suō nōmine Caesarem et Rōmānōs, quod eōrum adventū potentia eius dēminūta et Dīviciācus frāter in antīquum locum grātie atque honōris sit restitūsus. Sī quid accidat Rōmānīs, 20 summam in spem per Helvētiōs rēgnī obtinendī venire;
 imperiō populī Rōmānī nōn modo dē rēgnō, sed etiam dē eā quam habeat grātiā, dēspērāre.

Reperiēbat etiam in quaerendō Caesar, quod proelium equestre adversum paucīs ante diēbus esset factum, initium 25 fugae factum ā Dumnorīge atque eius equitibus, — nam equitātūi quem auxiliō Caesarī Haeduī miserant Dumnorix praeerat; eōrum fugā reliquum esse equitātum perterritum.

19. Quibus rēbus cōgnitīs, cum ad hās suspiciōnēs certissimae rēs accēderent, quod per finēs Sēquanōrum 30 Helvētiōs trādūxisset, quod obsidēs inter eōs dandōs

cūrasset, quod ea omnia nōn modo iniussū suō et cīvitātis sed etiam inscientibus ipsis fēcisset, quod ā magistrātū Haeduōrum accūsārētur, satis esse causae arbitrābātur quārē in eum aut ipse animadverteret aut cīvitātem ; animadvertere iubēret.

His omnibus rēbus ūnum repugnābat, quod Caesar pardons Dumnorix out of regard for his brother Diviciacus. Dīviciāci frātris summum in populum Rōmānum studium, summam in sē voluntātem, ēgregiam fidem, iūstitiam, temperantiam cōgnōverat; nam nē eius suppliciō Dīviciāci animum offenderet verēbātur. Itaque priusquam quicquam cōnārētur, Dīviciācum ad sē vocārī iubet et, cotidiānis interpretibus remōtis, per C. Valerium Troucillum, prīncipem Galliae prōvinciae, familiārem suum, cui summam omnium rērum 15 fidem habēbat, cum eō conloquitur; simul commonefacit quae ipsō praesente in conciliō dē Dumnorīge sint dicta, et ostendit quae sēparātīm quisque dē eō apud sē dixerit. Petit atque hortātur ut sine eius offēnsiōne animī vel ipse dē eō, causā cōgnitā, statuatur vel cīvitātem statuere iubeat.

20. Dīviciācus multīs cum lacrimīs Caesarem complexus obsecrāre coepit nē quid gravius in frātrem statueret: Scire sē illa esse vēra, nec quemquam ex eō plūs quam sē dōlōris capere, propterea quod, cum ipse grātiā plūrimum domī atque in reliquā Galliā, ille minimum propter adu- 25 lēscentiam posset, per sē crēvisset; quibus opibus ac nervīs nōn solum ad minuendam grātiā sed paene ad perniciem suam ūterētur. Sēsē tamen et amōre frāternō et exīstimātiōne vulgī commovērī. Quod sī quid eī ā Caesare gravius accidisset, cum ipse eum locum amicitiae 30 apud eum tenēret, nēminem exīstimātūrum nōn suā volun-tāte factum; quā ex rē futūrum utī tōtū Galliae animī ā sē āverterentur.

Haec cum plūribus verbīs flēns ā Caesare peteret, Caesar eius dextram prēndit; cōsōlātus rogat finem
5 orandī faciat; tantī eius apud sē grātiā esse ostendit utī et rei pūblicae iniūriam et suum dolōrem eius volūntātī ac precibus condōnet. Dumnorīgem ad sē vocat, frātre adhibet; quae in eō reprehendat ostendit; quae ipse intellegat, quae civitās querātur, prōpōnit; monet ut in 10 reliquum tempus omnēs suspiciōnēs vitet; praeterita sē Dīviciācō frātrī condōnāre dicit. Dumnorīgī custōdēs pōnit, ut quae agat, quibuscum loquātur, scīre possit.

Gallis magnō ad pugnam erat impedimentō quod, plūribus eōrum scūtis ūnō ictū pilōrum trānsfixis et conligātis, cum ferrum sē inflexisset, neque ēvellere neque sinistrā impeditā satis commodē pugnāre poterant, multī ut diū iactātō brachiō praeoptārent scūtum manū ēmittere et nūdō corpore pugnāre. Tandem vulneribus dēfessi et pedem referre et, quod mōns aberat circiter mille passūs, eō sē recipere coepērunt.

Captō monte et succēdentibus nostris, Bōi et Tulingī, qui 30 hominum millibus circiter xv agmen hostium claudēbant et novissimis praesidiō erant, ex itinere nostrōs ab latere apertō adgressī circumvenīre, et id cōspicātī Helvētīi, qui in montem sēsē recēperant, rūsus instāre et proelium redintegrāre coepērunt. Rōmānī conversa sīgna bipertitō 5 intulērunt; prīma et secunda aciēs, ut victīs ac summōtis resisteret, tertia, ut venientēs sustinēret.

26. Ita ancipitī proeliō diū atque ācriter pugnātum est. Diūtius cum sustinēre nostrōrum impetūs nōn possent, alterī sē, ut coeperant, in montem recēpērunt, alterī ad
 10 impedīmenta et carrōs suōs sē contulērunt. Nam hōc tōtō proeliō, cum ab hōrā septimā ad vesperum pugnātum sit, āversum hostem vidēre nēmō potuit. Ad multam noctem etiam ad impedīmenta pugnātum est, proptereā quod prō vāllō carrōs obiēcērant et ē locō superiōre in nostrōs veni-15 entēs tēla coniciēbant, et nōn nūllī inter carrōs raedāsque matarās ac trāgulās subiciēbant nostrōsque vulnerābant. Diū cum esset pugnātum, impedīmentīs castrisque nostrī potītī sunt. Ibi Orgetōrigis filia atque ūnus ē filiīs captus est.

27. Helvētīi omnium rērum inopiā adductī lēgātōs dē dēditiōne ad eum mīsērunt. Quī cum eum in itinere convēnissent sēque ad pedēs prōiēcissent suppliciterque locūtī essent suum adventum expectāre iussisset, pārūrunt. Eō postquam Caesar pervēnit, obsidēs, arma, servōs quī ad eōs perfūgissent, poposcit.

Six thousand Helvetii, endeavoring to escape to Germany, are put to death. Dum ea conquīruntur et cōferuntur, circiter hominum millia vi eius pāgī quī Verbigenus appellātur, sive timōre perterriti, nē armīs trāditīs suppliciō adficerentur, sive spē salūtis inducti, quod in tantā multitudīne dēditiciōrum suam fugam aut occultārī aut omnīnō ignōrārī posse existimārent, primā nocte ē castrīs Helvētiōrum ēgressi ad Rhēnum finēsque Germānōrum contendērunt.

28. Quod ubi Caesar rescit, quōrum per finēs ierant, hīs utī conquīrerent et redūcerent, sī sibi pūrgātī esse vellent, imperāvit; reductōs in hostium numerō habuit; The rest are ordered to return home. reliquōs omnēs obsidibus, armīs, perfugīs trāditīs in dēditōnem accēpit. Helvētiōs, Tulingōs, Latobrigōs in finēs suōs, unde erant profecti, revertī iussit; et, quod omnibus frūgibus āmissis domī nihil erat quō famem tolerārent, Allobrogibus imperāvit ut iīs frūmentī cōpiam facerent; ipsōs oppida vicōsque, quōs incenderant, restituere iussit.

Id eā maximē ratiōne fēcit, quod nōluit eum locum unde Helvētiū discesserant vacāre, nē propter bonitātem agrōrum Germānī, quī trāns Rhēnum incolunt, ex suis finibus in Helvētiōrum finēs trānsirent et finitimī Galliae prōvinciae Allobrogibusque essent. Bōiōs petentibus Haeduīs, quod ēgregiā virtūte erant cōgniti, ut in finibus suis conlocārent, concessit; quibus illi agrōs dedērunt, quōsque pōsteā in parem iūris libertātisque condiōnem atque ipsi erant recēpērunt.

29. In castris Helveticorum tabulae repertae sunt litteris Graecis confectae et ad Caesarem relatae, quibus in tabulis nominatim ratio confecta erat, qui numerus domo exisset eorum qui
 5 arma ferre possent, et item separatim quot pueri, senes mulieresque. Summa erat capitum Helveticorum millia CCLXIII, Tulingorum millia XXXVI, Latobrigorum XIII, Rauracorum XXIII, Boiorum XXXII; ex his, qui arma ferre possent, ad millia XCII. Summa omnium fuerunt ad millia

The Battle with the Nervii.

The Nervian assault throws the Romans into confusion.

19. Caesar equitātū praemissō subsequēbātur omnibus cōpiis; sed ratiō ordōque agminis aliter sē habēbat ac Belgae ad Nervios dētulerant. Nam quod hostibus appropinquābat, cōsuētūdine suā Caesar vi legiōnēs expeditās dūcēbat; post eās tōtius exercitūs impedimenta conlocārat; inde duae legiōnēs 10 quae proximē cōscriptae erant tōtum agmen claudēbant praesidiōque impedimentis erant. Equitēs nostrī cum funditōribus sagittāriisque flūmen trāngressī cum hostium equitātū proelium commiserunt. Cum sē illi identidem in silvās ad suos reciperent ac rursus ex silvā in nostrōs impetum facerent, neque nostrī longius quam quem ad finem porrēcta loca aperta pertinēbant cēdentēs insequī audērent, interim legiōnēs vi quae prīmae vēnerant opere dīmēnsō castra mūnīre coepērunt.

5 Ubi prīma impedīmenta nostrī exercitūs ab iīs quī in silvīs abditī latēbant vīsa sunt, quod tempus inter eōs committendī proelī convēnerat, ut intrā silvās aciem ordīnēsque cōstituerant atque ipsī sēsē cōfirmāverant, subito omnibus cōpiīs prōvolāvērunt impetumque in nostrōs equi-

Ipsī trānsire flūmen nōn dubitāverunt, et in locum inīquum prōgressī rūsus resistentēs hostēs redintegrātō proeliō in fugam coniēcērunt. Item allā in parte dīversae duae legiōnēs, undecima et octāva, prōfligātis Viromanduis, quibuscum erant congressae, ex locō superiōre, in ipsīs flūminis rīpīs proeliābantur. LIBER TERTIVS

1-6. WAR WITH ALPINE TRIBES; END OF 57 B.C.

1. Cum in Italiam proficiscerētur Caesar, Ser. Galbam cum legiōne duodecimā et parte equitātūs in Nantuātēs, Veragrōs Sedūnōsque mīsit, quī ā finibus Allobrogum et lacū Lemannō et flūmine Rhodanō ad summās Alpēs pertinent. Causa mittendī fuit quod iter per Alpēs, quō magnō cum periculō magnisque cum portōriis mercātōrēs ire cōsuērānt, patefierī volēbat. Huic permīsit, sī opus esse arbitrārētur, utī in hīs locīs legiōnem hiemandī causā conlocāret. Galba, secundis aliquot proeliis factis castellisque complūribus eōrum expugnātis, missis ad eum undique lēgātis obsidibusque datis et pāce factā, cōstituit cohortēs duās in Nantuātibus conlocāre et ipse cum reliquīs eius legiōnis cohortibus in vicō Veragrōrum, quī appellātur Octodūrus, hiemāre; quī vicus positus in valle, nōn magnā adiectā plānitiē, altissimīs montibus undique continētur. Cum hīc in duās partēs flūmine dividerētur, alteram partem eius vicī Gallīs concessit, alteram vacuam ab hīs relictam cohortibus ad hie-mandum attribuit. Eum locum vāllō fossāque mūnīvit.

5 *Uprising of subitō per explorātōrēs certior factus est ex eā parte vicī quam Gallīs concesserat omnēs noctū discessisse, montēsque quī impendērent ā maximā multitudīne 10 Sedūnōrum et Veragrōrum tenērī. Id aliquot dē causīs acciderat, ut subitō Gallī bellī renovandī legiōnisque opprimendae cōnsilium caperent: primum, quod legiōnem, neque eam plēnissimam, dētractis cohortibus duābus et complūri-bus singillātīm, quī commeātūs petendī causā missī erant, 15 absentibus, propter paucitātem dēspiciēbant; tum etiam, quod propter inīquitātem locī, cum ipsī ex montibus in vallem dēcurrerent et tēla conicerent, nē primum quidem impetum suum posse sustinērī existimābant. Accēdēbat quod suōs ab sē liberōs abstractōs obsidum nōmine dolēpetuae possessiōnis culmina Alpium occupāre cōnārī et ea loca finitimae prōvinciae adiungere sibi persuāsum habēbant.

opus hibernōrum mūnitiōnēsque plēnē essent perfectae neque dē frūmentō reliquōque commeātū satis esset prōvīsum, quod dēditōne factā obsidibusque acceptīs nihil dē bellō timendum existimāverat, cōnsiliō celeriter convocātō sententiās exquirere coepit.
30 Quō in cōnsiliō, cum tantum repentinī periculī praeter opiniōnem accidisset ac iam omnia ferē superiōra loca multitūdine armātōrum complēta cōspicerentur, neque subsidiō venīri neque commeātūs supportārī interclūsīs itineribus possent, prope iam dēspērātā salūte nōn nullae 5 eius modī sententiae dicēbantur, ut, impedimentīs relictīs ēruptiōne factā, īsdem itineribus quibus eō pervēnissent ad salūtem contenderent. Maiōri tamen partī placuit hōc reservātō ad extrēmum cāsum cōnsiliō interim rei ēventum experīri et castra dēfendere.

5. Cum iam amplius hōrīs vi continenter pugnārētur
 25 ac nōn solum vīrēs sed etiam tēla nostrōs dēficerent, atque hostēs ācrius īstārent languidiōribusque nostrīs vāllum scindere et fossās complēre coepissent, rēsque esset iam ad extrēmum perducta cāsum, P. Sextius Baculus, primī pīli centuriō, quem Nervicō proeliō complūribus cōnfectum 30 vulneribus diximus, et item C. Volusēnus, tribūnus mili-

tum, vir et cōnsilii magni et virtutis, ad Galbam accurrunt atque unam esse spem salutis docent, si eruptione facta extrēmum auxilium experirentur. Itaque convocatis centurionibus celeriter milites certiores facit paulisper intermitterent proelium ac tantummodo tela missa exciperent seque ex labore reficerent; post dato signo ex castris erumperent atque omnem spem salutis in virtute ponerent.

Though finally victorious, Galba retreats to the Province.

6. Quod iussi sunt faciunt, ac subito omnibus portis eruptione facta neque cognoscendi quid fieret neque sui colligendi hostibus facultatem relinquunt. Ita commutata fortuna eos qui in spem potiundorum castrorum venerant undique circumventos interficiunt; et ex hominum millibus amplius xxx, quem numerum barbarorum ad castra venisse constabat, plus tertia parte interfecta reliquos perterritos in fugam coniciunt ac ne in locis quidem superioribus consistere patiuntur. Sic omnibus hostium copiis fuis armisque exiis se intra munitiones suas recipiunt.

Quo proelio facto, quod saepius fortunam temptare Galba non lebat, atque alio se in hiberna consilio venisse meminerat, aliis occurrisse rebus viderat, maxime frumenti comestusque inopia permotus, postero die omnibus eius vicis aedificiis incensis in provinciam reverti contendit, ac nullo hoste prohibente aut iter demorante incolumem legionem in Nantuates, inde in Allobrogas perduxit ibique hiemavit.

nāvigātiōnem impeditam propter inscientiam locōrum paucitatemque portuum sciēbant, neque nostrōs exercitūs propter frūmentī inopiam diūtius apud sē morārī posse cōnfidēbant ; ac iam ut omnia contrā opīniōnem acciderent, 5 tamen sē plūrimum nāvibus posse, Rōmānōs neque ūllam facultātem habēre nāvium, neque eōrum locōrum ubi bellum gestūrī essent vada, portūs, insulās nōvisse ; ac longē aliam esse nāvigātiōnem in conclūsō marī atque in vāstissimō atque apertissimō Ōceanō perspiciēbant. Hīs initīs 10 cōnsiliīs oppida mūniunt, frūmenta ex agrīs in oppida comportant, nāvēs in Venetiam, ubi Caesarem primum bellum gestūrum cōnstābat, quam plūrimās possunt cōgunt. Sociōs sibi ad id bellum Osismōs, Lexoviōs, Namnetēs, Ambiliatōs, Morinōs, Diablintēs, Menapiōs adsciscunt ; 15 auxilia ex Britannīā, quae contrā eās regiōnēs posita est, arcessunt.

10. Erant hae difficultātēs bellī gerendī quās suprā ostendimus, sed tamen multa Caesarem ad id bellum incitābant : iniūria retentōrum equitum Rōmānōrum, rebellio 20 facta post dēditiōnem, dēfectiō datīs obsidibus, tot cīvitatū coniūratiō, in primīs nē hāc parte neglēctā reliquae nātiōnēs sibi idem licēre arbitrārentur. Itaque cum intellexeret omnēs ferē Gallōs novīs rēbus studere et ad bellum mōbilit̄er celeriterque exci- 25 tārī, omnēs autem hominēs nātūrā libertātī studere et condiōnem servitūtis ōdisse, priusquam plūrēs civitātēs cōspirārent, partiendum sibi ac lātius distribuendum exercitum putāvit.

Caesar's measures to prevent a spread of the defection.

11. Itaque T. Labiēnum lēgātum in Trēverōs, qui 30 proximī flūminī Rhēnō sunt, cum equitātū mittit. Huic mandat Rēmōs reliquōsque Belgās adeat atque in officiō contineat, Germānōsque, quī auxiliō ā Gallīs arcessitī dicēbantur, sī per vim nāvibus flūmen trānsire cōnentur, prohibeat. P. Crassum cum cohortibus legiōnāriis XII et magnō numerō equitātūs in Aquītāniam proficisci iubet, nē ex hīs nātiōnibus auxilia in Galliam mittantur ac tantae nātiōnēs coniungantur. Q. Titūrium Sabīnum lēgātum cum legiōnibus tribus in Venellōs, Coriosolitas, Lexoviōsque mittit, quī eam manum distinendam cūret. D. Brūtum adulēscētem classī Gallicis nāvibus, quās ex Pictonibus et Santonis reliquisque pācātis regiōnibus convenire iusserat, praeficit et cum primum possit in Venetōs proficisci iubet. Ipse eō pedestribus cōpiis contendit.

Situation of the Venetan towns. 12. Erant eius modi ferē sitūs oppidōrum ut posita in extrēmīs lingulis prōmunturiisque neque pedibus aditum habērent, cum ex altō sē aestus incitāvisset, quod accidit semper hōrārum XII spatiō, neque nāvibus, quod rūsus minuenta aestū nāvēs in vadis adfictārentur. Ita utrāque rē oppidōrum oppugnātiō impediēbātur; ac sī quandō, magnitūdine operis forte superātī, extrūsō marī aggere ac mōlibus atque hīs oppidī moenibus adaequātis, dēspērāre fortūnis suis coeperant, magnō numerō nāvium appulsō, cuius rei summam facultatem habēbant, sua dēportābant omnia sēque in proxima oppida recipiēbant; ibi sē rūsus isdem opportunitātibus locī dēfendēbant. Haec eō facilius magnam partem aestātis faciēbant, quod nostrae nāvēs tempestātibus dētīnēbantur, summaque erat vāstō atque apertō marī, magnīs aestibus, rārīs ac prope nullīs portibus, difficultās nāvīgandī.

13. Namque ipsōrum nāvēs ad hunc modum Comparison of the Venetian and the Roman ships. factae armātaeque erant: carīnae aliquantō plāniōrēs quam nostrārum nāvium, quō facilius vadā ac dēcessum aestūs excipere possent; prōrae
5 admodum ērēctae, atque item puppēs, ad magnitudinem fluctuum tempestātumque accommodatae; nāvēs tōtae factae ex rōbore ad quamvis vim et contumēliam perferendam; trānstra ex pedālibus in altitudinem trabibus, cōnfixa clāvis ferreis digitī pollicis crassitudine; ancorae prō fūni-10 bus ferreis catēnis revinctae; pellēs prō vēlis alūtaeque tenuiter cōnfectae, sive propter inopiam linī atque eius ūsūs inscientiam, sive eō, quod est magis vēri simile, quod tantās tempestātēs Ōceanī tantōsque impetūs ventōrum sustinēri ac tanta onera nāvium regī vēlīs nōn satis com-15 modē posse arbitrābantur.

Cum hīs nāvibus nostrae classī eius modī congressus erat ut unā celeritāte et pulsū rēmōrum praestāret; reliqua prō locī nātūrā, prō vī tempestātum, illis essent aptiōra et accommodātiōra. Neque enim iīs nostrae rōstrō nocēre
20 poterant (tanta in iīs erat firmitūdō), neque propter altitudinem facile tēlum adigēbātur, et eādem dē causā minus commodē cōpulīs continēbantur. Accēdēbat ut, cum saevire ventus coepisset et sē ventō dedissent, et tempestātem ferrent facilius et in vadīs cōsisterent tūtius et ab aestū
25 relictāe nihil saxa et cautēs timērent; quārum rērum omnium nostrīs nāvibus cāsus erat extimēscendus.

14. Complūribus expugnātis oppidīs Caesar, ubi intellexit frūstrā tantum labōrem sūmī, neque hostium fugam captīs oppidīs reprimī neque iīs nocēri posse, statuit ex-hostibus vīsa est, circiter CCXX nāvēs eōrum, parātissimae atque omnī genere armōrum ōrnātissimae, profectae ex portū nostrīs adversae cōstitērunt; neque satis Brūtō, quī classī praeerat, vel tribūnīs militum centuriōnibusque, quibus singulae nāvēs erant attribūtae, cōstābat quid agerent aut quam ratiōnem pugnae insisterent.

The War with the Veneti.

Rōstrō enim nocērī nōn posse cōgnōverant; turribus autem excitātīs, tamen hās altitūdō puppiū ex barbarīs nāvibus
 10 superābat, ut neque ex inferiōre locō satis commodē tēla adigī possent et missa ā Gallis gravius acciderent.

Ūna erat magnō ūsuī rēs praeparāta ā nostrīs, falcēs praeacūtāe insertae adfixaeque longuriīs, nōn absimili fōrmā mūrālium falcium. His cum fūnēs quī antemnās ad mālōs dēstinābant comprehēnsī adductique erant, nāvigiō rēmīs incitātō praerumpēbantur. Quibus abscīsīs antennae necessāriō concidēbant; ut, cum omnis Gallicīs nāvibus spēs

 5 in vēlīs armāmentisque cōsisteret, his ēreptīs omnis ūsus nāvium ūnō tempore ēriperētur. Reliquum erat certāmen positum in virtūte, quā nostrī militēs facile superābant, atque eō magis, quod in cōspectū Caesaris atque omnis exercitūs rēs gerēbātur, ut nūllum paulō fortius factum
 10 latere posset; omnēs enim collēs ac loca superiōra, unde erat propinquus dēspectus in mare, ab exercitū tenēbantur.

15. Dēiectīs, ut dīximus, antennīs, cum singulās bīnae ac ternae nāvēs circumsteterant, militēs summā vī trāscendere in hostium nāvēs contendēbant. Quod postquam
 15 barbarī fieri animadvertērunt, expugnātīs complūribus nāvibus, cum eī rei nūllum reperirētur auxilium, fugā salūtem petere contendērunt. Ac iam conversīs in eam partem nāvibus quō ventus ferēbat, tanta subitō malacia ac tranquillitās exstitit ut sē ex locō movēre nōn possent. Quae 20 quidem rēs ad negotium cōficiendum maximē fuit opportūna; nam singulās nostrī cōsectātī expugnāvērunt, ut perpaucae ex omnī numerō noctis interventū ad terram pervenirent, cum ab hōrā ferē quārtā usque ad sōlis occāsum pugnārētur.

He avoids an

17. Dum haec in Venetīs geruntur, Q. Titū-rius Sabīnus cum iis cōpiīs quās ā Caesare accēperat in finēs Venellōrum pervēnit. His praeerat Viridovīx ac summam imperī tenēbat 10 eārum omnium civitātum quae dēfēcērant, ex quibus exercitur magnāsque cōpiās coēgerat; atque his paucis diēbus Aulerci Eburovīcēs Lexoviique senātū suō interfectō, quod auctōrēs bellī esse nōlēbant, portās clausērunt sēque cum Viridovīce coniūnxērunt; magnaue praeterea multitudō 15 undique ex Galliā perditōrum hominum latrōnumque con-venerat, et quōs spēs praedandī studiumque bellandī ab agrī culturā et cotīdiānō labōre sēvocābat.

Sabīnus idōneō omnibus rēbus locō castrīs sēsē tenēbat, cum Viridovīx contrā eum duōrum millium spatiō cōnsēdis-20 set cotīdiēque prōductīs cōpiīs pugnandī potestātem faceret, ut iam nōn solum hostibus in contemptiōnem Sabīnus venīret, sed etiam nostrōrum mīlitum vōcibus nōn nihil carperētur; tantamque opīniōnem timōris praebuit ut iam ad vāllum castrōrum hostēs accēdere audērent. Id eā dē 25 causā faciēbat, quod cum tantā multitudīne hostium, praesertim eō absente quī summam imperī tenēret, nisi aequō locō aut opportūnitāte aliquā datā, lēgātō dīmicandum nōn exīstimābat.

18. Hāc cōfirmatā opīniōne timōris, idōneum By pretending fear he encourages the enemy to an attack. quendam hominem et callidum dēlēgit, Gallum, ex iis quōs auxiliī causā sēcum habēbat. Huic magnis praemiis pollicitatiōibusque persuādet
 5 utī ad hostēs trānseat, et quid fieri velit ēdocet. Quī ubi prō perfugā ad eōs vēnit, timōrem Rōmānōrum prōpōnit; quibus angustiis ipse Caesar ā Venetis premātur docet, neque longius abesse quā proximā nocte Sabīnus clam ex castris exercitum ēdūcat et ad Caesarem auxiliī ferendi
 10 causā proficiscātur. Quod ubi audītum est, conclāmant omnēs occāsionem negōtī bene gerendi āmittendam nōn esse; ad castra irī oportēre.

Multae rēs ad hoc cōsiliū Gallōs hortābantur; superiorum diērum Sabīnī cūctatiō, perfugae cōfirmatiō, inopiā
 15 cibariōrum, cui rei parum diligenter ab iis erat prōvisum, spēs Veneticī bellī, et quod ferē libenter hominēs id quod volunt crēdunt. Hīs rēbus adductī nōn prius Viridovicem reliquōsque ducēs ex conciliō dīmittunt quam ab iis sit concessum arma utī capiant et ad castra contendant. Quā
 20 rē concessā laetī ut explōrātā victōriā, sarmentis virgultisque collēctis quibus fossās Rōmānōrum compleant, ad castra pergunt.

19. Locus erat castrōrum ēditus et paulātīm His victory is followed by the surrender of all the rebellious states. ab imō acclivis circiter passūs mille. Hūc 25 magnō cursū contendērunt ut quam minimum spatī ad sē colligendōs armandōsque Rōmānīs darētur, exanimātique pervēnerunt. Sabīnus suōs hortātus cupientibus sīgnum dat. Impeditis hostibus propter ea quae ferēbant onera, subitō duābus portīs ēruptiōnem fieri iubet.
 30 Factum est opportūnitāte locī, hostium inscientiā ac dēfatīgātiōne, virtūte militum et superiōrum pugnārum exercitātiōne, ut nē primum quidem nostrōrum impetum ferrent ac statim terga verterent. Quōs integrīs vīribus milites nostrī cōsecūtī magnum numerum eōrum occidērunt; reliquōs 5 equitēs cōsectātī paucōs, quī ex fugā ēvāserant, reliquērunt.

Sic ūnō tempore et dē nāvālī pugnā Sabīnus et dē Sabīnī victōriā Caesar est certior factus, civitātēque omnēs sē statim Titūriō dēdidērunt. Nam ut ad bella suscipienda Gallōrum alacer ac prōmptus est animus, sic 10 mollis ac minimē resistēns ad calamitātēs perferendās mēns eōrum est.

20-27. THE CAMPAIGN IN AQUITANIA, 56 B.C.

Crassus is attacked by the Sotiates.

20. Eōdem ferē tempore P. Crassus, cum in Aquitāniam pervēnisset, quae, ut ante dictum est, et regiōnum lātitudīne et multītūdīne homi-
15 num est tertia pars Galliae aestimanda, cum intellexeret in iīs locīs sibi bellum gerendum ubi paucīs ante annīs L. Valerius Praecōnīnus lēgātus exercitū pulsō interfectus esset, atque unde L. Mānlius prōcōsul impedimentīs āmissīs profūgisset, nōn mediocrem sibi dīligentiam adhi-
20 bendam intellegēbat. Itaque rē frūmentāriā prōvisā, auxiliīs equitātūque comparātō, multīs praetereā virīs fortibus Tolōsā et Carcasōne et Narbōne, quae sunt civitātēs Galliae prōvinciae finitimae hīs regiōnibus, nōminātīm ēvocātīs, in Sōtiātium finēs exercitum intrōdūxit. Cuius adventū
25 cōgnitō Sōtiātēs magnīs cōpiīs coāctīs equitātūque, quō plūrimū valēbant, in itinere agmen nostrum adorti primum equestre proelium commisērunt; deinde, equitātū suō pulsō atque īnsequentibus nostrīs, subitō pedestrēs cōpiās, quās in convalle in insidiis conlocāverant, ostendērunt. Hi nostrōs disiectōs adortī proelium renovārunt.

Illī aliās ēruptiōne temp-tātā, aliās cuniculīs ad aggerem vineāsque āctis (cuius rei sunt longē perītissimī Aquitānī, proptereā quod multis locīs apud eōs aerāriae sectūraeque sunt), ubi dīligentiā 20 nostrōrum nihil hīs rēbus prōficī posse intellēxērunt, lēgātōs ad Crassum mittunt, sēque in dēditionem ut recipiat petunt.
 Quā rē impetrātā arma trādere iussī faciunt.

22. Atque in eam rem omnium nostrōrum Adiatunnus and his devoted followers.
 intentīs animīs, aliā ex parte oppidī Adiatunnus, 25 quī summam imperī tenēbat, cum de dēvōtīs, quōs illī ‘solduriōs’ appellant, — quōrum haec est condiciō, ut omnibus in vitā commodis unā cum iīs fruatur quōrum sē amicitiae dēdiderint ; sī quid hīs per vim accidat, aut eundem cāsum unā ferant aut sibi mortem 30 cōnsciscant ; neque adhūc hominum memoriā repertus est

quisquam quī, eō interfectō cuius sē amīctiae dēvōvisset, mortem recūsāret, — cum hīs Adiatunnus ēruptiōnem facere cōnātus, clāmōre ab eā parte mūnitiōnis sublātō, cum ad arma milītēs concurrissent vehementerque ibi pugnātum esset, repulsus in oppidum tamen utī eādem dēditiōnis condiciōne ūterētur ā Crassō impetrāvit.

Crassus determines to strike another blow before the enemy get too strong.

23. Armis obsidibusque acceptis, Crassus in finēs Vocātium et Tarusātium profectus est. Tum vērō barbarī commōtī, quod oppidum et nātūrā loci et manū mūnītum paucis diēbus quibus eō ventum erat expugnātum cōgnōverant, lēgātōs quōque versus dīmittere, coniūrāre, obsidēs inter sē dare, cōpiās parāre coepērunt. Mittuntur etiam ad eās cīvitātēs lēgātī quae sunt citeriōris Hispāniae finitimae Aquitāniae; inde auxilia ducēsque arcessuntur. Quōrum adventū magnā cum auctōritāte et magnā hominum multitudīne bellum gerere cōnantur. Ducēs vērō iī dēliguntur quī unā cum Q. Sertōriō omnēs annōs fuerant summamque scientiam rei milītāris habere existimābantur. Hī cōsuētūdīne populī Rōmānī loca capere, castra mūnīre, commeātibus nostrōs interclūdere instituunt. Quod ubi Crassus animadvertit suās cōpiās propter exiguitātem nōn facile didūci, hostem et vagārī et viās obsidēre et castris satis praesidī relinquere, ob eam causam minus commodē frūmentum commeātumque sibi supportārī, in diēs hostium numerum augērī, nōn cūctandum existimāvit quīn pugnā dēcertāret. Hāc rē ad cōnsilium dēlātā, ubi omnēs idem sentire intellēxit, posterum diem pugnae cōstituit.

24. Prīmā lūce prōductis omnibus cōpiis, duplici aciē institūtā, auxiliis in mediam aciem coniectis, quid hostēs cōnsili caperent exspectābat. Illi, etsi propter multitudinem et veterem belli glōriam paucitātemque nostrōrum sē tūtō dīmīcātūrōs exīstimābant, tamen tūtius esse arbitrābantur obsessis viis commeātū interclūsō sine ūllō vulnere victoriā potiri, et, si propter inopiam rei frūmentāriæ Rōmānī sēsē recipere coepissent, impeditōs in agmine et sub sarcinīs īnfirmiōrēs, animō adoriri cōgitābant. Hōc cōnsiliō probātō, ab ducibus prōductis Rōmānōrum cōpiīs, sēsē castrīs tenēbant. Hāc rē perspectā Crassus, cum suā 10 cūnctātiōne atque opīniōne timōris hostēs nostrōs milītēs alacriōrēs ad pugnandum effēcissent, atque omnium vōcēs audirentur exspectārī diūtius nōn oportere quā ad castra irētur, cohortātus suōs omnibus cupientibus ad hostium castra contendit.

The camp of the enemy is taken and three-fourths of them are slain.

15 25. Ibi cum aliī fossās complērent, aliī multīs tēlīs coniectīs dēfēnsōrēs vāllō mūnitiōnibusque dēpellerent, auxiliārēsque, quibus ad pugnam nōn multum Crassus cōnfidēbat, lapidibus tēlīsque sumministrandīs et ad aggerem caespitibus comportandīs speciem atque opīniōnem pugnantium 20 praebērent, cum item ab hostibus cōstanter ac nōn timidē pugnārētur tēlaque ex locō superiōre missa nōn frūstrā acciderent, equitēs circumitis hostium castrīs Crassō renūntiāvērunt nōn eādem esse diligentīā ab decumānā portā castra mūnīta facilemque aditum habēre.

25 26. Crassus equitum praefectōs cohortātus ut magnīs praemiīs pollicitātiōnibusque suōs excitārent, quid fieri vellet ostendit. Illi, ut erat imperātum, ēductis iīs cohortibus quae praesidiō castrīs relictāe intritae ab labōre erant et longiōre itinere circumductīs, nē ex hostium castrīs cōn-
 30 spicī possent, omnium oculīs mentibusque ad pugnam

intentis, celeriter ad eas quas diximus munitiones pervenerunt, atque his proutis prius in hostium castris constituerunt quam planē ab his vidēri, aut quid rei gereretur cognoscī posset. Tum verō clamore ab eā parte auditō nostrī redintegrātis viribus, quod plerumque in spē victōriæ accidere consuevit, acrius impugnare coeperunt. Hostes undique circumventi, desperatis omnibus rebus, se per munitiones deicere et fugā salutem petere contenderunt. Quos equitatus apertissimis campis consecutus, ex millium L numero, 10 quae ex Aquitaniā Cantabrisque convenisse constabat, vix quartā parte relictā, multā nocte se in castra recepit.

Most of the Aquitanian tribes submit. 27. Hāc auditā pugnā maxima pars Aquitaniae sese Crasso dedit obsidesque ultrō misit; quō in numero fuerunt Tarbelli, Bigerionēs, 15 Ptiāni, Vocātes, Tarusātes, Elusātes, Gatēs, Ausci, Garumni, Sibusātes, Cocosātes; paucae ultimae nationēs anni tempore confisae, quod hiems suberat, id facere neglexerunt.

28-29. EXPEDITION OF CAESAR AGAINST THE MORINI AND THE MENAPII, 56 B.C.

28. Eodem ferē tempore Caesar, etsi prope exacta iam aestas erat, tamen, quod omni Galliā pacatā Morini Mena- 20 piique supererant qui in armis essent neque ad eum umquam legatos de pace misissent, arbitratus id bellum celeriter confici posse, eō exercitum duxit; qui longē aliā ratione ac reliqui Galli bellum gerere coeperunt. Nam quod intellegebant maximas 25 nationēs quae proelio contendissent pulsas superatasque esse, continentēque silvas ac paludes habebant, eō se suaque omnia contulerunt. Ad quarum initium silvā-rum cum Caesar pervēnisset castraque mūnīre instituisset, neque hostis interim vīsus esset, dispersis in opere nostris, subitō ex omnibus partibus silvae ēvolāvērunt et in nostrōs impetum fēcērunt. Nostrī celeriter arma cēpērunt eōsque 5 in silvās reppulērunt et, complūribus interfectis, longius impeditiōribus locis secūtī paucōs ex suis dēperdidērunt.

29. Reliquīs deinceps diēbus Caesar silvās caedere instituit; et, nē quis inermibus imprudentibusque militibus ab latere impetus fieri posset, omnem eam māteriam quae 10 erat caesa conversam ad hostem conlocābat et prō vallō ad utrumque latus exstruēbat. Incrēdibilī celeritāte magnō spatiō paucis diēbus cōfectō, cum iam pecus atque extrēma impedimenta ā nostris tenērentur, ipsi dēnsiōrēs silvās peterent, eius modi 15 sunt tempestātēs cōsecūtae utī opus necessāriō intermitterētur et continuātiōne imbrium diūtius sub pelli- bus milites continēri nōn possent. Itaque vāstātis omnibus eōrum agrīs, vicis aedificiisque incēnsis, Caesar exercitum redūxit et in Aulercis Lexoviisque, reliquīs item civitatibus 20 quae proximē bellum fēcērant, in hibernis conlocāvit.

Caesar is forced by continuous rains to retire. He goes into winter quarters.

LIBER QVARTVS

1-19. CAMPAIGN AGAINST THE GERMANS, 55 B.C.

War with the Usipetes and Tencteri

*Supremacy of the Suebi in Germany.
Their customs.*

1. Eā quae secūta est hieme, quī fuit annus
Cn. Pompēiō, M. Crassō cōsulibus, Usipetēs
Germānī et item Tēncterī magnā multitudīne hominum flūmen Rhēnum trānsiērunt, nōn longē
5 ā marī quō Rhēnus influit. Causa trānseundī fuit quod ab Suēbīs complūrēs annōs exagitātī bellō premēbantur et agrī cultūrā prohibēbantur.

Suēbōrum gēns est longē maxima et bellicōsissima Germānōrum omnium. Hī centum pāgōs habēre dīcuntur, ex 10 quibus quotannīs singula millia armātōrum bellandī causā ex finibus ēdūcunt. Reliquī, quī domī mānsērunt, sē atque illōs alunt; hī rūsus in vicem annō post in armīs sunt, illī domī remanent. Sīc neque agrī cultūra nec ratiō atque ūsus belli intermittitur. Sed privātī ac sēparātī agrī apud 15 eōs nihil est, neque longius annō remanēre ūnō in locō colendī causā licet. Neque multum frūmentō, sed maxi-mam partem lacte atque pecore vivunt, multumque sunt in vēnātiōnibus; quae rēs et cibī genere et cotidiānā exercitātione et libertāte vitae, — quod ā pueris nullō officiō aut 20 disciplinā adsuēfactī nihil omnīnō contrā voluntātem faciunt, — et virēs alit et immānī corporum magnitudīne hominēs efficit. Atque in eam sē cōnsuētūdinem addūxērunt ut locis frigidissimis neque vestitūs praeter pellēs habērent quicquam, quārum propter exiguitātem magna est corporis pars aperta, et lavārentur in flūminibus.

5 2. Mercātōribus est aditus magis eō, ut quae bellō cēperint quibus vēndant habeant, quam quō ūllam rem ad sē importārī dēsiderent. Quīn etiam iūmentīs, quibus maximē Galli dēlectantur quaeque impēnsō parant pretiō, Germānī importātis nōn ūtuntur, sed quae sunt apud eōs
10 nāta, parva atque dēfōrmia, haec cotidiānā exercitātiōne summī ut sint labōris efficiunt. Equestribus proeliis saepe ex equīs dēsiliunt ac pedibus proeliantur, equōsque eōdem remanēre vēstigiō adsuēfēcērunt, ad quōs sē celeriter, cum ūsus est, recipiunt; neque eōrum mōribus turpius verōrum citātus fertur, et, ubi Ōceanō appropinquāvit, in plūrēs diffluit partēs multis ingentibusque insulis effectis, quārum pars magna ā ferīs barbarisque nātiōnibus incolitur, — ex quibus sunt qui piscibus atque ōvis avium vivere existimantur, — multisque capitibus in Ōceanum influit.

11. Caesar cum ab hoste nōn amplius passuum XII millibus abesset, ut erat cōstitutum, ad eum lēgātī revertuntur; quī in itinere congressī magnopere nē longius prōgrederētur

In eō proeliō ex equitibus nostrīs interficiuntur IIII et LXX, in hīs vir fortissimus, Pīsō Aquitānus, amplissimō genere nātus, cuius avus in civitāte suā rēgnum obtinuerat, amīcus ā senātū nostrō appellātus. Hīc cum frātrī interclūsō ab hostibus auxilium ferret, illum ex periculō ēripuit, ipse equō vulnerātō dēiectus, quoad potuit fortissimē restitit; cum circumventus multīs vulneribus acceptis cecidisset, atque id frāter, quī iam proeliō excesserat, procul animadvertisset, incitātō equō sē hostibus obtulit atque interfectus est.

Caesar delays his attack no longer. 13. Hōc factō proeliō Caesar neque iam sibi lēgātōs audiendōs neque condiciōnēs accipiendās arbitrābātur ab iīs quī per dolum atque insidiās, petitā pāce, ultrō bellum intulissent; expectāre vērō dum hostium cōpiaē augērentur equitātusque reverterētur, summae dēmentiae esse iūdicābat; et cōgnitā Gallōrum infirmitāte, quantum iam apud eōs hostēs unō proeliō auctōritātis essent cōsecūtī sentiēbat; quibus ad cōnsilia capiēda nihil spatī dandum exīstimābat. Reasons for the expedition.

16. Germānicō bellō cōfectō, multis dē causis Caesar statuit sibi Rhēnum esse trānseundum; quārum illa fuit iūstissima, quod, cum vidēret
10 Germānōs tam facile impellī ut in Galliam venīrent, suis quoque rēbus eōs timēre voluit, cum intellegerent et posse et audere populī Rōmānī exercitum Rhēnum trānsire.

Accessit etiam quod illa pars equitātūs Usipetum et Tēncterōrum, quam suprā commemorāvī praedandī frū-
15 mentandīque causā Mosam trānsisse neque proeliō interfuisse, post fugam suōrum sē trāns Rhēnum in finēs Sugambrōrum recēperat sēque cum his coniūnserat. Ad quōs cum Caesar nūtiōs mīsisset quī postulārent eōs quī sibi Galliaeque bellum intulissent sibi dēderent, re-
20 spondērunt: Populī Rōmānī imperium Rhēnum finīre; si sē invītō Germānōs in Galliam trānsire nōn aequum existimāret, cūr suī quicquam esse imperī aut potestātis trāns Rhēnum postulāret?

Ubiī autem, quī ūnī ex Trānsrhēnānis ad Caesarem lē-25 gātōs miserant, amicitiam fēcerant, obsidēs dederant, magnopere ōrābant ut sibi auxilium ferret, quod graviter ab Suēbīs premerentur; vel, si id facere occupātiōnibus rei publicae prohibērētur, exercitum modo Rhēnum trānsport-tāret; id sibi ad auxilium spemque reliquū temporis satis futūrum. Tantum esse nōmen atque opīniōnem eius exercitūs Ariovistō pulsō et hōc novissimō proeliō factō etiam ad ultimās Germānōrum nātiōnēs, utī opīniōne et amicitīā populī Rōmānī tūti esse possent. Nāvium magnam cōpiam ad trānsportandum exercitum pollicēbantur.

17. Caesar hīs dē causīs quās commemorāvī Rhēnum trānsire dēcrēverat; sed nāvibus trānsire neque satis tūtum esse arbitrābatur, neque
 10 suae neque populī Rōmānī dignitātis esse statuēbat. Itaque, etsī summa difficultās faciendī pontis prōpōnēbā-

Haec utraque insuper bipedalibus trabibus immissis, 10 quantum eōrum tignōrum iūnctūra distābat, binīs utrimque fibulīs ab extrēmā parte distinēbantur; quibus disclūsīs atque in contrāriam partem revīntīs, tanta erat operis firmitūdō atque ea rērum nātūra ut, quō maior vis aquae sē incitāvisset, hōc artius inligāta tenērentur.  in hīs locis, quod omnis Gallia ad septentrionēs vergit, mātūrae sunt hiemēs, tamen in Britan-25 niam proficiscī contendit, quod omnibus ferē Gallicis bellis hostibus nostris inde ministrāta auxilia intellegēbat, et, sī tempus ad bellum gerendum dēficeret, tamen magnō sibi ūsui fore arbitrābātur, sī modo īnsulam adisset, genus hominum perspēxisset, loca, portūs, aditūs cōgnōvisset; quae omnia ferē Gallis erant incōgnita. Neque enim temere praeter mercātōrēs illō adit quisquam, neque hīs ipsīs quicquam praeter ōram maritimam atque eās regiōnēs quae sunt contrā Galliās nōtum est. Itaque vocātis ad sē undique mercātōribus, neque quanta esset īnsulae magnitudō, neque quae aut quantae nātiōnēs incolerent, neque quem ūsum bellī habērent aut quibus īstitūtīs ūterentur, neque quī essent ad maiōrem nāvium multitudinem idōneī portūs, reperire poterat.

Volusenus is sent to reconnoitre. Envoys come from several states of Britain. 21. Ad haec cōgnōscenda, priusquam periculum faceret, idōneum esse arbitrātus C. Volusēnum cum nāvī longā praemittit. Huic mandat ut explorātis omnibūs rēbus ad sē quam primum revertātur. Ipse cum omnibus cōpiīs in Morinōs proficiscitur, quod inde erat brevissimus in Britanniam trāiectus. Hūc nāvēs undique ex finitimīs regiōnibus, et quam superiōre aestāte ad Veneticum bellum effēcerat classem, iubet convenire.

Interim cōsiliō eius cōgnitō et per mercātōrēs perlātō ad Britannōs, ā complūribus īnsulae civitātibus ad eum lēgātī veniunt quī polliceantur obsidēs dare atque imperiō populī Rōmānī obtemperāre. Quibus auditīs, liberāliter pollicitus hortātusque ut in eā sententiā permanērent, eōs domum remittit et cum iīs ūnā Commium, quem ipse Atrebātibus superātis rēgem ibi cōstituerat, cuius et virtūtem et cōsiliū probābat et quem sibi fidēlem esse arbitrābatur cuiusque auctōritās in hīs regiōnibus magnī habēbātur, mittit. Huic imperat quās possit adeat civitātēs hortētur-

22. Dum in hīs locis Caesar nāvium parandārum causā morātur, ex magnā parte Morinōrum ad eum lēgātī vērunt quī sē dē superiōris temporis cōnsiliō excūsarent, quod hominēs barbari et nostrae cōnsuetūdinis imperitī bellum populō Rōmānō fēcissent, sēque ea quae imperāset factūrōs pollicērentur. Hoc sibi Caesar satis opportunē accidisse arbitrātus, quod neque post tergum hostem relinquere volēbat neque bellī gerendī propter annī tempus facultātem habēbat neque hās tantulārum rērum occupātiōnēs Britaniae antepōnendās iūdicābat, magnum iīs numerum obsidum imperat. Quibus adductis eōs in fidem recipit.

24. At barbarī cōsiliō Rōmānōrum cōgnitō, praemissō equitātū et essedāriīs, quō plērumque genere in proeliīs utī cōsuērunt, reliquīs cōpiīs subsecūtī nostrōs nāvibus ēgredi prohibēbant. Erat ob hās causās summa difficultās, quod nāvēs propter magni-
 30 tūdinem nisi in altō cōstituī nōn poterant ; militibus

autem, ignōtis locis, impeditis manibus, magnō et gravi onere armōrum pressis, simul et dē nāvibus dēsiliendum et in fluctibus cōsistendum et cum hostibus erat pugnandum ; cum illi aut ex aridō aut paulum in aquam prōgressi, omnibus membrīs expeditis, nōtissimis locis, audācter tēla conicerent et equōs insuēfactōs incitārent. Quibus rēbus nostrī perterriti atque huius omninō generis pugnae imperiti nōn eādem alacritāte ac studiō quō in pedestribus ūti proeliis cōsuērant ūtēbantur.

10 25. Quod ubi Caesar animadvertit, nāvēs longās, quārum et speciēs erat barbaris inūsitiō et mōtus ad ūsum expeditior, paulum removēri ab onerariis nāvibus et rēmīs incitārī et ad latus apertum hostium cōstituī atque inde fundis, sagittis, 15 tormentis hostēs prōpellī ac summovēri iussit ; quae rēs magnō ūsui nostris fuit. Nam et nāvium figurā et rēmōrum mōtū et inūsitiō genere tormentōrum permōti barbari cōstitērunt ac paulum etiam pedem 20 rettulērunt.

Atque nostris militibus cūctantibus, maximē propter altitudinem maris, quī decimae legiōnis aquilam
25 ferēbat obtestātus deōs ut ea rēs legiōni fēliciter ēveniret, “ Dēsilite,” inquit, “ commilitōnēs, nisi vultis aquilam hostibus prōdere ; ego certē meum rei pūblīcae atque

FIG. 20. — The Eagle-bearer.

Hoc cum vōce magnā dīxisset, sē ex nāvī prōiēcit atque in hostēs aquilam ferre coepit. Tum nostrī cohortātī inter sē nē tantum dēdecus admitterētur, ūniversī ex nāvī dēsiluērunt. Hōs item ex proximīs nāvibus cum cōn-

After a hard struggle the Romans rout the enemy. 26. Pugnātum est ab utrisque ācriter. Nostrī tamen, quod neque ōrdinēs servāre neque firmiter insistere neque sīgna subsequī poterant, atque alius aliā ex nāvī quibuscumque sīgnīs occurrerat sē 10 adgregābat, magnopere perturbābantur; hostēs vērō, nōtis omnibus vadīs, ubi ex lītore aliquōs singulārēs ex nāvī ēgredientēs cōspēxerant, incitātis equīs impeditōs adoriēbantur, plūrēs paucōs circumsistēbant, aliī ab latere apertō in ūniversōs tēla coniciēbant. Quod cum animadvertisset
15 Caesar, scaphās longārum nāvium, item speculātōria nāvīgia, militibus complērī iussit, et quōs labōrantēs cōspēxerat hīs subsidia summittēbat. Nostrī, simul in āridō cōstitērunt, suīs omnibus cōsecūtīs in hostēs impetum fēcērunt atque eōs in fugam dedērunt; neque longius prōsequī
20 pōtuērunt, quod equitēs cursum tenēre atque insulam capere nōn potuerant. Hoc ūnum ad pristinam fortūnam Caesari dēfuit.

The Britons promise to submit. 27. Hostēs proeliō superātī, simul atque sē ex fugā recēpērunt, statim ad Caesarem lēgātōs dē 25 pāce mīsērunt; obsidēs datūrōs quaeque imperāsset factūrōs esse pollicitī sunt. Ūnā cum hīs lēgātīs Commius Atrebās vēnit, quem suprā dēmōnstrāveram ā Caesare in Britanniam praemissum. Hunc illi ē nāvī ēgressum, cum ad eōs ōrātōris modō Caesaris mandāta dēferret, com-
30 prehenderant atque in vincula coniēcērunt; tum proeliō factō remīsērunt, et in petendā pāce eius rei culpam in multitudinem contulērunt, et propter imprudentiam ut ignōscerētur petivērunt. Caesar questus quod, cum ultrō in continentem lēgātis missis pācem ab sē petissent, bellum sine causā intulissent, ignōscere imprudentiae dīxit obsidēsque imperāvit; quōrum illi partem statim dedērunt, partem ex longinquiōribus locis arcessitam paucis diēbus sēsē datūrōs dīxērunt. Intereā suōs remigrāre in agrōs iussērunt, prīncipēsque undique convenire et sē civitātēsque suās 10 Caesarī commendāre coepērunt.

28. His rēbus pāce cōfirmātā, post diem Caesar's fleet is almost destroyed by a storm. His perilous situation. quārtum quam est in Britanniam ventum, nāvēs xviii dē quibus suprā dēmōstrātum est, quae equitēs sustulerant, ex superiōre portū lēnī ventō
 15 solvērunt. Quae cum appropinquārent Britanniae et ex castris vidērentur, tanta tempestās subitō coōrta est ut nūlla eārum cursum tenēre posset, sed aliae eōdem unde erant profectae referrentur, aliae ad inferiōrem partem insulae, quae est propius sōlis occāsum, magnō suī 20 cum periculō dēicerentur; quae tamen ancoris iactis cum fluctibus complērentur, necessariō adversā nocte in altum prōvectae continentem petiērunt.

29. Eādē nocte accidit ut esset lūna plēna, quī diēs maritimōs aestūs maximōs in Oceanō efficere cōsuēvit, 25 nostrisque id erat incōgnitum. Ita ūnō tempore et longās nāvēs, quās Caesar in aridum subdūxerat, aestus complēbat, et onerāriās, quae ad ancorās erant dēligatae, tempestās adffictābat, neque ūlla nostris facultās aut administrandī aut auxiliandī dabātur. Complūribus nāvibus
 30 frāctīs, reliquae cum essent — fūnibus, ancoris reliquisque armāmentis āmissis — ad nāvīgandum inūtilēs, magna (id quod necesse erat accidere) tōtius exercitūs perturbātiō facta est. Neque enim nāvēs erant aliae quibus reportārī possent, et omnia deērānt quae ad reficiendās nāvēs erant 5 ūsuī, et, quod omnibus cōnstābat hiemārī in Galliā oportere, frūmentum in hīs locis in hiemem prōvisum nōn erat.

The Britons plan to take advantage of his distress. 30. Quibus rēbus cōgnitīs prīncipēs Britanniae, quī post proelium ad Caesarem convēnerant, inter sē conlocūtī, cum et equitēs et nāvēs
 10 et frūmentum Rōmānis deesse intellegerent et paucitātem militum ex castrōrum exiguitāte cōgnōscerent, — quae hōc erant etiam angustiōra, quod sine impedimentis Caesar legiōnēs trānsportāverat, — optimum factū esse dūxerunt, rebellione factā frūmentō commeatūque nostrōs prohibere
 15 et rem in hiemem prōducere; quod hīs superātis aut reditū interclūsīs nēminem postea bellī inferendī causā in Britanniam trānsitūrum cōfidēbant. Itaque rūsus coniūrātiōne factā paulātim ex castris discēdere et suōs clam ex agris dēducere coepērunt.

He repairs the fleet. 31. At Caesar, etsī nōndum eōrum cōnsilia cōgnōverat, tamen et ex eventū nāvium suārum et ex eō, quod obsidēs dare intermiserant, fore id quod accidit suspiciābātur. Itaque ad omnēs cāsūs subsidia comparābat. Nam et frūmentum ex agris cotīdiē in castra 25 cōferēbat, et quae gravissimē adflictae erant nāvēs, eārum materiā atque aere ad reliquās reficiendās utēbātur, et quae ad eās rēs erant ūsuī ex continentī comparārī iubēbat. Itaque cum summō studiō ā militibus administrārētur, XII nāvibus āmissis, reliquīs ut nāvīgārī satis commodē posset statiōne erant Caesarī nūntiāvērunt pulverem maiōrem quam cōsuētūdō ferret in eā parte vidērī quam in partem legiō iter fēcisset. Caesar id quod erat suspicātus, aliquid novī ā barbaris initum cōnsiliī, cohortēs quae in 10 statiōnibus erant sēcum in eam partem proficisci, ex reliquīs duās in statiōnem succēdere, reliquās armārī et cōnfestim sēsē subsequī iussit. Cum paulō longius ā castris prō-cessisset, suōs ab hostibus premī atque aegrē sustinēre et cōnfertā legiōne ex omnibus partibus tēla conici animad-15 vertit. Nam quod omnī ex reliquīs partibus dēmesso frūmentō pars ūna erat reliqua, suspicātī hostēs hūc nos-trōs esse ventūrōs noctū in silvis dēlituerant; tum di-spersōs dēpositis armīs in metendō occupātōs subitō adortī, stabilitātem peditum in proeliis praestant; ac tantum ūsē cotidiānō et exercitātiōne efficiunt utī in dēclivī ac praecipitī locō incitātōs equōs sustinēre et brevī moderārī ac flectere, et per tēmōnem percurrere et in iugō insistere et sē inde in currūs citissimē recipere cōsuērunt.

The Romans are relieved. Another attack is planned. 34. Quibus rēbus perturbātis nostrīs novitāte pugnae tempore opportunnissimō Caesar auxilium tulit; namque eius adventū hostēs cōstitērunt, nostrī sē ex timōre recēpērunt. Quō factō ad lacessendum hostem et committendum proelium aliēnum esse tempus arbitrātus, suō sē locō continuit et brevī tempore intermissō in castra legiōnēs redūxit. Dum haec geruntur, nostrīs omnibus occupātis, quī erant in agris reliquī discessērunt. Secūtae sunt continuōs com-
 15 plūrēs diēs tempestātēs quae et nostrōs in castris continērent et hostem ā pugnā prohibērent. Interim barbarī nūntiōs in omnēs partēs dimisērunt paucitātemque nostrōrum militum suis praedicāvērunt, et quanta praedae faciendae atque in perpetuum sui liberandī facultās darētur, sī
 20 Rōmānōs castris expulissent, dēmōnstrāvērunt. His rēbus celeriter magnā multitudīne peditātūs equitātūsque coactā ad castra vēnērunt.

The Britons are defeated and offer their submission. Caesar returns to Gaul. 35. Caesar, etsī idem quod superiōribus diēbus acciderat fore vidēbat, — ut, sī essent hostēs pulsī, celeritāte periculum effugerent, — tamen nactus equitēs circiter xxx, quōs Commius Atrebās, dē quō ante dictum est, sēcum trānsportāverat, legiōnēs in aciē prō castris cōstituit. Commissō proeliō diūtius nostrōrum militum impetum hostēs ferre 30 nōn potuērunt ac terga vertērunt. Quōs tantō spatiō secūti quantum cursū et viribus efficere potuerunt, complūrēs ex iis occiderunt; deinde omnibus longē lātēque aedificiis incēnsis sē in castra recēperunt.

36. Eōdem diē lēgātī ab hostibus missī ad Caesarem dē
 5 pāce vēnerunt. Hīs Caesar numerum obsidum quem ante imperāverat duplicāvit, eōsque in continentem addūcī iussit, quod propinquā diē aequinoctī infirmis nāvibus hiemī nāvigātiōnem subiciendam nō existimābat. Ipse idōneam tempestātem nactus paulō post mediam noctem nāvēs sed ex iis onerāriae duae eōdem portūs quōs reliquae capere nō potuerunt, et paulō infrā delātae sunt.

Caesar reaches Britain and lands his troops without opposition.

8. Hīs rēbus gestīs, Labiēnō in continentī cum tribus legiōnibus et equitum millibus duōbus relictō, ut portūs tuērētur et rei frūmentāriae prōvidēret, quaeque in Galliā gererentur cōgnōsceret, cōnsiliumque prō tempore et prō rē caperet, ipse cum v legiōnibus et parī numerō equitum quem in 15 continentī relinquebat, ad sōlis occāsū nāvēs solvit; et lēnī Africō prōvectus, mediā circiter nocte ventō intermissō, cursum nōn tenuit; et longius delātus aestū, ortā lūce sub sinistrā Britanniam relictam cōspēxit. Tum rūsus aestūs commūtātiōnem secūtus rēmīs contendit ut 20 eam partem insulae caperet quā optimum esse ēgressum superiōre aestāte cōgnōverat. Quā in rē admodum fuit militum virtūs laudanda, quī vectōriīs gravibusque nāvigiīs nōn intermissō rēmigandī labōre longārum nāvium cursum adaequārun. Accessum est ad Britanniam omnibus nāvibus 25 meridīānō ferē tempore; neque in eō locō hostis est vīsus, sed, ut postea Caesar ex captivīs cōgnōvit, cum magnae manūs eō convēnissent, multitudīne nāvium perterritae, quae cum annōtinīs privātisque, quās suī quisque commodī causā fēcerat, amplius DCCC ūnō erant vīsae

The fleet, damaged by a storm, is repaired and drawn up on shore.

10. Postridiē eius diēi māne tripertitō militēs equitēsque in expeditiōnem misit, ut eōs qui fūgerant persequerentur. His aliquantum itineris prōgressis, cum iam extrēmī essent in prōspectū, equitēs ā Q. Hīs rēbus cōgnitis Caesar legiōnēs equitātumque 15 revocārī atque in itinere resistere iubet, ipse ad nāvēs revertitur; eadem ferē quae ex nūntiis cōgnōverat cōram perspicit, sic ut āmissis circiter XL nāvibus reliquae tamen reficī posse magnō negotiō vidērentur. Itaque ex legiōnibus fabrōs dēligit et ex continentī aliōs arcessī iubet; Labi- 20 ēnō scribit ut quam plūrimās possit iis legiōnibus quae sint apud eum nāvēs instituat. Ipse, etsi rēs erat multae operae ac labōris, tamen commodissimum esse statuit omnēs nāvēs subdūci et cum castris unā mūnitiōne coniungī. In hīs rēbus circiter diēs x cōsūmit nē nocturnis quidem temporibus ad 25 labōrem militum intermissis.

Cassivellanus is appointed commander of the Britons.

Subductis nāvibus castrisque ēgregiē mūnitis eāsdem cōpiās quās ante praesidiō nāvibus relinquit, ipse eōdem unde redierat proficiscitur. Eō cum vēnisset, maiōrēs iam undique in eum 30 locum cōpiae Britannōrum convēnerant, summā imperi

 15 nostrīs atque occupātīs in mūnitiōne castrōrum, subitō sē ex silvīs eiēcērunt, impetūque in eōs factō quī erant in statiōne prō castrīs conlocātī, ācritēr pugnāvērunt; duābusque missīs subsidiō cohortibus ā Caesare, atque hīs primīs legiōnum duārum, cum eae perexiguō intermissō 20 locī spatiō inter sē cōnstitissent, novō genere pugnae perterritīs nostrīs, per mediōs audācissimē perrūpērunt sēque inde incolumēs recēpērunt. Eō diē Q. Laberius Dūrus, tribūnus militum, interficitur. Illi plūribus summissīs cohortibus repelluntur.

25 16. Tōtō hōc in genere pugnae, cum sub oculis omnium ac prō castrīs dīmīcārētur, intellēctum est nostrōs propter gravitātem armōrum, quod neque īsequī cēdentēs possent neque ab sīgnīs discēdere audērent, minus aptōs esse ad

huius generis hostem ; equitēs autem magnō cum periculō proeliō dīmicāre, proptereā quod illī etiam cōsultō plērumque cēderent et, cum paulum ab legiōnibus nostrōs remōvissent, ex essedis dēsilirent et pedibus dispari proeliō
 5 contenderent. Equestris autem proeli ratiō et cēdentibus et insequentibus pār atque idem periculum inferēbat. Accēdēbat hūc ut numquam cōfertī, sed rārī magnisque intervāllis proeliārentur statiōnēsque dispositās habērent, atque aliōs alii deinceps exciperent, integrīque et recentēs 10 dēfatigātis succēderent.

Caesar wins an important victory. 17. Posterō diē procul ā castrīs hostēs in colibus cōstitērunt, rārīque sē ostendere et lēnius quam prīdiē nostrōs equitēs proeliō lacessere coepērunt. Sed meridiē, cum Caesar pābulandī causā 15 legiōnēs atque omnem equitātum cum C. Trebōniō lēgātō mīsisset, repente ex omnibus partibus ad pābulātōrēs advolāvērunt, sic utī ab signīs legiōnibusque nōn absisterent. Nostrī ācritē in eōs impetū factō reppulērunt, neque finem sequendī fēcērunt quoad subsidiō cōfisi equitēs, cum post 20 sē legiōnēs vidērent, praecipitēs hostēs ēgērunt, magnōque eōrum numerō interfectō neque suī colligendī neque cōsistendī aut ex essedis dēsiliendī facultātem dedērunt. Ex hāc fugā prōtinus quae undique convēnerant auxilia discessērunt, neque post id tempus umquam summīs nōbiscum 25 cōpiīs hostēs contendērunt.

He crosses the Thames and ravages the country, but the enemy avoid a battle. 18. Caesar cōgnitō cōsiliō eōrum ad flūmen Tamesim in finēs Cassivellaunī exercitum dūxit ; quod flūmen ūnō omnīnō locō pedibus, atque hōc aegrē, trānsīrī potest. Eō cum vēnisset, 30 animadvertit ad alteram flūminis rīpam magnās esse cōpiās hostium instrūctās. Rīpa autem erat acūtis sudibus praefixisque mūnīta, eiusdemque generis sub aquā dēfixae sudēs flūmine tegēbantur. His rēbus cōgnitis ā captivīs perfugisque, Caesar praemissō equitātū cōnfestim legiōnēs subsequi iussit. Sed eā celeritāte atque eō impetū militēs iērunť, cum capite sōlō ex aquā exstārent, ut hostēs impetum legiōnum atque equitum sustinēre nōn possent rīpāsque dīmitterent ac sē fugae mandārent.

19. Cassivellaunus, ut suprā dēmōnstrāvīmus, omnī dē-
 10 positā spē contentiōnis, dīmissis ampliōribus cōpiis, millibus circiter IIII essedāriōrum relictis, itinera nostra servābat; paulumque ex viā excēdēbat locisque impedītis ac silvestribus sēsē occultābat atque iīs regiōnibus quibus nōs iter factūrōs cōgnōverat pecora atque hominēs ex agris in silvās
 15 compellēbat; et cum equitātus noster līberius praedandī vāstandīque causā sē in agrōs effunderet, omnibus viis sēmitisque essedāriōs ex silvis ēmittēbat et magnō cum periculō nostrōrum equitum cum his cōnfligēbat atque hōc metū lātius vagārī prohibēbat. Relinquēbātur ut neque 20 longius ab agmine legiōnum discēdī Caesar paterētur, et tantum agrīs vāstandis incendiis que faciendis hostibus nocērētur quantum in labōre atque itinere legiōnārii militēs efficere poterant.

20. Interim Trinovantēs, prope firmissima adulēscēns Caēsaris fidem secūtus ad eum in continentem vēnerat, — cuius pater in eā civitāte rēgnum obtinuerat interfectusque erat ā Cassivellaunō, ipse fugā mortem vitāverat, — lēgātōs ad Caesarem mittunt polliut Mandubracium ab iniuriā Cassivellaunī dēfendat, atque in civitātem mittat quī praesit imperiumque obtineat. Hīs Caesar imperat obsidēs XL frūmentumque exercituī, Mandubraciumque ad eōs mittit. Illī imperāta celeriter fēcērunt, obsidēs ad numerum frūmentumque misērunt.

21. Trinovantibus dēfēnsīs atque ab omnī militum iniuriā prohibītīs, Cēnimagnī, Segontiācī, Ancalitēs, Bibrocī, Cassī lēgatiōnibus missīs sēsē Caesari dēdunt. Ab hīs cōgnōscit nōn longē ex eō locō oppidum Cassivellaunī abesse silvīs palūdibusque mūnītum, quō satis magnus hominum pēcorisque numerus convēnerit. Oppidum autem Britannī vocant cum silvās impeditās vāllō atque fossā mūniērunt, quō incursiōnis hostium vitandae causā convenīre cōnsuērunt. Eō proficīscitur cum legiōnibus. Locum reperit ēgregiē nātūrā atque opere mūnītum; tamen hunc duābus ex partibus oppugnāre contendit. Hostēs paulisper morātī militum nostrōrum impetum nōn tulērunt sēsēque aliā ex parte oppidī eiēcērunt. Magnus ibi numerus pecoris repertus, multīque in fugā sunt comprehēnsī atque interfectī.

22. Dum haec in hīs locīs geruntur, Cassivellaunus ad Cantium, quod esse ad mare suprā dēmōnstrāvīmus, quibus regiōnibus IIII rēgēs praeerant, Cingetorix, Carvilius, Taximagulus, Segovax, nūntiōs mittit atque hīs imperat uti coactīs omnibus cōpiīs castra nāvālia dē imprōvisō adorianantur atque oppugnent. Hī cum ad castra vēnissent, nostrī ēruptiōne factā multis eōrum interfectīs, captō etiam nōbili duce Lugotorige, suōs incolumēs redūcērunt.

Cassivellaunus, hōc proeliō nūntiātō, tot dētrimentis acceptis, vāstātis fīnibus, maximē etiam permōtus dēfectiōne civitātum, lēgātōs per Atrebātem Commium dē dēditione ad Caesarem mittit. Caesar, cum cōstituisset hiemāre in 5 continentī propter repentinōs Galliae mōtūs, neque multum aestātis superesset, atque id facile extrahī posse intellegeret, obsidēs imperat, et quid in annōs singulōs vectigālis populō Rōmānō Britannia penderet cōstituit; interdicit atque imperat Cassivellaunō nē Mandubraciō neu Trino-

23. Obsidibus acceptis exercitum redūcit ad Caesar returns to Gaul. mare, nāvēs invenit refectās. His dēductis, quod et captivōrum magnum numerum habēbat et nōn nūllae tempestāte dēperierant nāvēs, duōbus comēatibus 15 exercitum reportāre instituit. Ac sic accidit utī ex tantō nāvium numerō tot nāvigātiōnibus neque hōc neque superiore annō ūlla omninō nāvis quae militēs portāret dēsiderārētur; at ex iīs quae inānēs ex continentī ad eum remitterentur priōris comēatūs expositis militibus, et quās 20 postēā Labiēnus faciendās cūrāverat numerō LX, perpaucae locum caperent, reliquae ferē omnēs reicerentur. 44. TWO BRAVE CENTURIONS

44. Erant in eā legiōne fortissimī virī, centuriōnēs, quī iam primīs ōrdinibus appropinquārent, T. Pullō et L. Vorēnus. Hī perpetuās inter sē contrōversiās habēbant uter alterī anteferrētur, omnibusque annis dē locō summīs simul-
 5 tātibus contendēbant. Ex hīs Pullō, cum ācerrimē ad mūnitiōnēs pugnārētur, “Quid dubitās,” inquit, “Vorēne? aut quem locum tuae probandae virtūtis exspectās? Hīc diēs dē nostrīs contrōversiīs iūdicābit.” Haec cum dīxisset, prōcēdit extrā mūnitiōnēs, quaeque pars hostium cōnfertissima
 10 est vīsa inrumpit. Nē Vorēnus quidem sēsē tum vāllō continet, sed omnium veritus exīstimātiōnem subsequitur. Mediocrī spatiō relictō Pullō pīlum in hostēs immittit atque ūnum ex multitudīne prōcurrentem trāicit; quō percussō et exanimātō, hunc scūtīs prōtegunt hostēs, in illum ūniversī

 20 hunc sē cōnfestim ā Pullōne omnis multitudō convertit; illum verūtō trānsfīxum arbitrantur. Gladiō cominus rem gerit Vorēnus atque ūnō interfectō reliquōs paulum prōpellit; dum cupidius īstat, in locum dēiectus īferiōrem concidit. Huic rūsus circumventō subsidium fert
 25 Pullō, atque ambō incolumēs complūribus interfectīs summā cum laude sēsē intrā mūnitiōnēs recipiunt.

Sīc fortūna in contentiōne et certāmine utrumque versāvit ut alter alterī inimīcus auxiliō salutīque esset, neque dīiūdicārī posset uter utrī virtūte anteferendus vidērētur.

11-24. CUSTOMS OF THE GAULS AND OF THE GERMANS

Customs of the Gauls

11. Quoniam ad hunc locum perventum est, nōn aliē-num esse vidētur dē Galliae Germāniaeque mōribus et quō differant hae nātiōnēs inter sēsē prōpōnere.

In Galliā nōn solum in omnibus civitātibus *Two parties

5 atque in omnibus pāgīs partibusque, sed paene etiam in singulis domibus factiōnēs sunt; eārumque factiōnum prīncipēs sunt quī summam auctōritātem eōrum iūdicīō habēre existimantur, quōrum ad arbitrium iūdiciumque summa omnium rērum cōnsiliōrumque redeat.
10 Idque eius rei causā antīquitus īnstitūtum vidētur, nē quis ex plēbe contrā potentiōrem auxili egēret; suōs enim quisque opprimī et circumvenīrī nōn patitur, neque, aliter sī faciat, ūllam inter suōs habeat auctōritātem. Haec eadem ratiō est in summā tōtīus Galliae; namque omnēs 15 civitātēs dīvisae sunt in duās partēs.

12. Cum Caesar in Galliam vēnit, alterius fac-

Proeliis vērō complūribus factis secundis atque omni nōbilitāte Haeduōrum interfectā, tantum potentiā antecesserant ut magnam partem clientium ab Haeduīs ad sē trādūcerent obsidēsque ab hīs principum filiōs acciperent, et pūblicē iūrāre cōgerent nihil sē contrā Sēquanōs cōnsiliī inītūrōs, et partem finitimī agrī per vim occupātam possidērent Galliaeque tōtius principātum obtinērent. Quā necessitāte adductus Diviciācus auxiliī petendī causā Rōmam ad senātum profectus infectā rē redierat.

- 10 Adventū Caesaris factā commūtātiōne rērum, obsidibus Haeduīs redditīs, veteribus clientēlis restitūtīs, novīs per Caesarem comparātīs, quod īī quī sē ad eōrum amicitiam adgregāverant meliōre condiōne atque aequiōre imperiō sē ūtī vidēbant, reliquīs rēbus eōrum grātiā dignitāteque

 20 ita et novam et repente collēctam auctōritātem tenēbant. Eō tamen statū rēs erat ut longē principēs habērentur Haeduī, secundum locum dignitātis Rēmī obtinērent.

13. In omni Galliā eōrum hominum quī ali- quō sunt numerō atque honōre genera sunt duo; nam plēbēs paene servōrum habētur locō, quae nihil audet per sē, nūllī adhibētur cōnsiliō. Plēriq̄ue, cum aut aere aliēnō aut magnitūdine tribūtōrum aut iniūriā potentiōrum premuntur, sēsē in servitūtem dicant nōbilibus; quibus in hōs eadem omnia sunt iūra quae 30 dominīs in servōs.

Sed dē hīs duōbus generibus alterum est druidum, alterum equitum. Illī rēbus dīvinīs intersunt, sacrificia pūblica ac prīvāta prōcūrant, religiōnēs interpretantur; ad eōs magnus
 5 adulēscēntium numerus disciplīnae causā concurrīt, magnōque hī sunt apud eōs honōre. Nam ferē dē omnibus contrōversiis pūblicis prīvātisque cōstituunt; et, sī quod est admissum facinus, sī caedēs facta, sī dē hērēditāte, dē finibus contrōversia est, idem dēcernunt, praemia poenāsque 10 cōstituunt; sī quī aut prīvātus aut populus eōrum dēcrētō nōn stetit, sacrificiis interdīcunt. Haec poena apud eōs est gravissima. Quibus ita est interdīctum, hī numerō impiōrum ac scelerātōrum habentur, hīs omnēs dēcēdunt, aditum eōrum sermōnemque dēfugiunt, nē quid ex contāgiōne in-15 commodī accipiant, neque iīs petentibus iūs redditur neque honōs ūllus commūnicātur.

Hīs autem omnibus druidibus praeest ūnus, quī summam inter eōs habet auctōritātem. Hōc mortuō, aut sī quī ex reliquīs excellit dignitāte, succēdit, aut, sī sunt plūrēs parēs, 20 suffrāgiō druidum, nōn numquam etiam armīs dē prīncipātū contendunt.

Hī certō annī tempore in finibus Carnutum, quae regiō tōtius Galliae media habētur, cōsīdunt in locō cōsēcrātō. Hūc omnēs undique quī contrōversiās habent conveniunt, 25 eōrumque dēcrētīs iūdicīisque pārent. Disciplīna in Britannīā reperta atque inde in Galliam trānslāta exīstimātur; et nunc quī diligentius eam rem cōgnōscere volunt plērumque illō discēndi causā proficīscuntur.

tātī praemiīs et suā sponte multī in disciplinam conveniunt et ā parentibus propinquisque mittuntur. Magnum ibi numerum versuum ēdiscere dīcuntur. Itaque annōs nōn nullī vicēnōs in disciplinā permanent. Neque fās esse existimant ea litterīs mandāre, cum in reliquīs ferē rēbus, pūblicis prīvātisque ratiōnibus, Graecis litterīs ūantur. Id mihi duābus dē causīs instituisse videntur, quod neque in vulgus disciplinam efferrī velint neque eōs qui discunt litterīs cōnfisōs minus memoriae studēre; quod 10 ferē plērisque accidit ut praesidiō litterārum diligentiam in perdiscendō ac memoriam remittant.

In primis hoc volunt persuādēre, nōn interīre animās, sed ab aliīs post mortem trānsīre ad aliōs; atque hōc maximē ad virtūtem excitārī putant metū mortis neglēctō. 15 Multa praetereā dē sīderibus atque eōrum mōtū, dē mundi ac terrārum magnitudīne, dē rērum nātūrā, dē deōrum immortālium vī ac potestāte disputant et iuventūti trādunt.

The knights are all warriors. 15. Alterum genus est equitum. Hī, cum est ūsus atque aliquod bellum incidit (quod ferē ante Caesaris adventum quotannis accidere solēbat, utī aut ipsī iniūriās inferrent aut inlātās prōpulsārent), omnēs in bellō versantur; atque eōrum ut quisque est genere cōpiisque amplissimus, ita plūrimōs circum sē ambactōs clientēsque habet. Hanc ūnam grātiā potentiam- 25 que nōvērunt.

Human sacrifices. 16. Nātiō est omnis Gallōrum admodum dēdita religiōnibus; atque ob eam causam qui sunt adfectī graviōribus morbīs, quīque in proeliīs periculisque versantur, aut prō victimis hominēs immolant aut 30 sē immolātūrōs vovent (administris que ad ea sacrificia druidibus ūtuntur), quod, prō vitā hominis nisi hominis vitā reddātur, nōn posse deōrum immortalium nūmen plācārī arbitrantur; pūblicēque eiusdem generis habent institūta sacrificia. Aliī immānī magnitūdine simulācra habent, quōrum contexta vīminibus membra vivīs hominibus complent; quibus succēnsīs circumventī flammā exanimantur hominēs. Supplicia eōrum quī in fūrtō aut latrōciniō aut aliquā noxiā sint comprehēnsī grātiōra dīs immortalibus esse arbitrantur; sed cum eius generis cōpia dēficit, etiam ad innocentium supplicia dēscendunt.

17. Deōrum maximē Mercurium colunt; huius The Gallic gods. sunt plūrima simulācra, hunc omnium inventōrem artium ferunt, hunc viārum atque itinerum ducem, hunc ad quaestūs pecūniae mercātūrāsque habēre vim maximam arbitrantur; post hunc Apollinem et Mārtem et Iovem et Minervam. Dē hīs eandem ferē quam reliquae gentēs habent opiniōnem: Apollinem morbōs dēpellere, Minervam operum atque artificiōrum initia trādere, Iovem imperium caelestium tenēre, Mārtem bella regere. Huic, cum proeliō dīmīcāre cōstituērunt, ea quae bellō cēperint plērumque dēvoent; cum superāvērunt, animālia capta immolant, reliquās rēs in ūnum locum cōferunt. Multis in civitātibus hārum rērum extrūctōs cumulōs locis cōsecrātis cōspicārī licet; neque saepe accidit ut neglēctā quispiam religiōne aut capta apud sē occultāre aut posita tollere audēret, gravissimumque eī rei supplicium cum cruciātū cōstitutum est.

18. Gallī sē omnēs ab Dīte patre prōgnātōs Reputed origin. Reckoning of time. praedicant idque ab druidibus prōditum dicunt. Filial respect.
30 Ob eam causam spatia omnis temporis nōn numerō diērum, sed noctium finiunt; diēs nātālēs et mēsum et annōrum initia sic observant ut noctem diēs subsequātur. In reliquīs vitae institūtis hoc ferē ab reliquīs differunt, quod suōs liberōs, nisi cum adolēverunt ut mūnus 5 militiae sustinēre possint, palam ad sē adire nōn patiuntur; filiumque puerilī aetate in pūblicō in cōspectū patris adsistere turpe dūcunt.

19. Virī, quantās pecūniās ab uxōribus dōtis nōmine accēpērunt, tantās ex suīs bonīs aestimātiōne factā cum dōtibus commūnicant. Huius omnis pecūniae coniūctim ratiō habētur fructūsque servantur; uter eōrum vitā superāvit, ad eum pars utriusque cum fructibus superiōrum temporum pervenit.

Virī in uxōrēs, sicutī in liberōs, vitae necisque habent
15 potestātem; et cum pater familiae inlūstriōre locō nātus dēcessit, eius propinquī conveniunt et dē morte, sī rēs in suspiciōnem vēnit, dē uxōribus in servilem modum quaestiōnem habent, et, sī compertum est, ignī atque omnibus tormentis excruciatās interficiunt.

20 Fūnera sunt prō cultū Gallōrum magnifica et sūmptuōsa; omniaque quae vīvīs cordī fuisse arbitrantur in ignem inferunt, etiam animālīa; ac paulō suprā hanc memoriam servī et clientēs, quōs ab iīs dilēctōs esse cōstābat, iūstis fūnebris cōfectis unā cremābantur.

Customs of the Germans

5 21. Germani multum ab hac consuetudine differunt. Nam neque druides habent qui rebus The gods. Social divinis praesint neque sacrificiis student. Deorum customs. numero eos solos ducunt quos cernunt et quorum apertae opibus iuvantur, Solem et Vulcanum et Lunam; 10 reliquos ne famam quidem acciperunt.

Vita omnis in venationibus atque in studiis rei militaris consistit; a parvis labori ac duritiae student. Qui diutissimae impuberis permanserunt maximam inter suos ferunt laudem; hoc alii statuerant, alii vires, nervosque confirmari 15 putant. Intra annum vero vicissimum feminae notitiam habuisse in turpissimis habent rebus; cuius rei nulla est occultatio, quod et promiscue in fluminibus perluuntur et pellibus aut parvis renonum tegumentis utuntur, magna corporis parte nuda.

20 22. Agri culturae non student, maiorque pars eorum victus in lacte, caseo, carne consistit. Tenure of lands.

Neque quisquam agri modum certum aut fines habet proprios; sed magistratus ac principes in annos singulos gentibus cognationibusque hominum, quique una coierunt, 25 quantum et quo loco visum est agri attribuunt, atque anno post alio transire cogunt. Eius rei multas adferunt causas: ne adsiduam consuetudine capti studium belli gerendi agri culturae commutent; ne latos fines parere studeant poten-tiōrēs atque humiliōrēs possessiōnibus expellant ; nē accūrātius ad frīgora atque aestūs vitandōs aedificent ; nē qua

23. Cīvitātibus maxima laus est quam lātissimē circum sē vāstātis finibus sōlitudinēs habēre.
Hoc proprium virtūtis existimant, expulsōs agrīs

Caesar desires to withdraw from Gergovia without appearance of flight.

43. Ipse maiōrem Galliae mōtum exspectāns, nē ab omnibus civitātibus circumsisterētur, cōsilia inībat quem ad modum ā Gergoviā discēderet ac rūsus omnem exercitum contraheret, nē profectiō nāta ab timōre dēfectiōnis similisque fugae vidērētur.

He learns that the enemy are engrossed in building a new line of defense.

44. Haec cōgitantī accidere vīsa est facultās bene gerendae rei. Nam cum in minōra castra operis perspiciendī causā vēnisset, animadvertit collem quī ab hostibus tenēbātur nūdātum hominibus, quī superiōribus diēbus vix prae multitudīne cernī poterat. Admīrātus quaerit ex perfugīs causam, quōrum magnus ad eum cotidiē numerus cōfluēbat. Cōstābat inter omnēs, quod iam ipse Caesar
15 per explorātōrēs cōgnōverat, dorsum esse eius iugī prope aequum, sed silvestre et angustum, quā esset aditus ad alteram partem oppidī; vehementer huic illōs locō timēre, nec iam aliter sentīre, unō colle ab Rōmānis occupātō, sī alterum amīsissent, quīn paene circumvallātī atque omnī

45. Hāc rē cōgnitā Caesar mittit complūrēs equitum turmās eō dē mediā nocte ; imperat ut paulō tumultuōsius omnibus locis pervagentur. Primā lūce magnum numerum impedimentōrum ex castris mūlōrumque prōdūci dēque hīs strā-
5 menta dētrahī mūliōnēsque cum cassidibus, equitum speciē ac simulātiōne, collibus circumvehī iubet. Hīs paucōs addit equitēs quī lātius ostentātiōnis causā vagentur. Longō circuitū eāsdem omnēs iubet petere regiōnēs.

10 Haec procul ex oppidō vidēbantur, ut erat ā Gergoviā dēspectus in castra ; neque tantō spatiō, certī quid esset, explorārī poterat. Legiōnem ūnam eōdem iugō mittit et paulum prōgressam inferiōre cōstituit locō silvisque occultat. Augētur Gallis suspiciō, atque omnēs illō ad mūni-15 tiōnem cōpiae trādūcuntur.

Vacua castra hostium Caesar cōspicātus, tēctis insigni-bus suōrum occultātisque signis militāribus, rārōs militēs, nē ex oppidō animadverterentur, ex maiōribus castris in minōra trādūcit, lēgātisque quōs singulis legiōnibus prae-20 fēcerat quid fierī velit ostendit ; in primīs monet ut con-tineant militēs nē studiō pugnandī aut spē praedae longius prōgrediantur ; quid inīquitās locī habeat incommodī prōpōnit ; hoc ūnā celeritāte posse vitārī ; occāsiōnis esse rem, nōn proeli. Hīs rēbus expositis sīgnum dat et ab dextrā 25 parte aliō ascēnsū eōdem tempore Haeduōs mittit.

46. Mūrus oppidi ā plānitiē atque initiō ascēn-sūs rēctā regiōne, sī nūllus ānfractus intercēderet, mcc passūs aberat ; quicquid hūc circuitūs ad molliendum clivum accesserat, id spatium itineris augēbat. Ā mediō 30 ferē colle in longitudinem, ut nātūra montis ferēbat, ex grandibus saxis vi pedum mūrum quī nostrōrum impetum tardāret praedūxerant Galli atque, inferiōre omni spatiō vacuō relictō, superiōrem partem collis usque ad mūrum oppidī dēnsissimis castris complēverant.

5 Militēs datō signō celeriter ad mūnitiōnem perveniunt eamque trāsgressī trīnis castris potiuntur; ac tanta fuit in castris capiendis celeritās ut Teutomatus, rēx Nitio- brogum, subitō in tabernāculō oppressus, ut meridiē con- quiēverat, superiōre parte corporis nūdā, vulnerātō equō 10 vix sē ex manibus praedantium militum ēriperet.

47. Cōsecūtus id quod animō prōposuerat, Caesar re- calls his men, but they strive to take the town.
Caesar receptū canī iussit; legiōnisque decimae, quācum erat, continuō signa cōstitērunt. At reliquārum legiōnum militēs nōn audītō sonō
15 tubae, quod satis magna vallēs intercēdēbat, tamen ā tribū- nīs militum lēgātisque, ut erat ā Caesare praeceptum, retinē- bantur; sed ēlātī spē celeris victōriae et hostium fugā et superiōrum temporum secundis proeliis nihil adeō arduum sibi existimābant quod nōn virtūte cōsequi possent; neque 20 finem prius sequendī fēcērunt quam mūrō oppidī portisque appropinquārunt.

Tum vērō ex omnibus urbis partibus ortō clāmōre, quī longius aberant repentinō tumultū perterriti, cum hostem intrā portās esse existimārent, sē ex oppidō eiēcērunt.
25 Mātrēs familiae dē mūrō vestem argentumque iactābant, et pectore nūdō prōminentēs passis manibus obtestābantur Rōmānōs ut sibi parcerent neu, sicut Avaricī fēcissent, nē ā mulieribus quidem atque infantibus abstinērent; nōn nullae dē mūrō per manūs dēmissae sēsē militibus tradē-

48. Interim iī quī ad alteram partem oppidi, ut suprā dēmōstrāvimus, mūnitiōnis causā convēnerant, primō exauditō clāmōre, inde etiam crēbris nūntiis incitātī oppidum ā Rōmānīs te-10 nērī, praemissīs equitibus magnō cursū eō contendērunt.
 Eōrum ut quisque primus vēnerat, sub mūrō cōsistēbat suōrumque pugnantium numerum augēbat. Quōrum cum magna multitudō convēnisset, matrēs familiae, quae paulō ante Rōmānīs dē mūrō manūs tendēbant, suōs obtestārī et 15 mōre Gallicō passum capillum ostentāre liberōsque in cōn-spectum prōferre coepērunt. Erat Rōmānīs nec locō nec numerō aequa contentiō ; simul et cursū et spatiō pugnae dēfatigātī nōn facile recentēs atque integrōs sustinēbant.

49. Caesar cum iniquō locō pugnārī hostiumque cōpiās 20 augērī vidēret, praemetuēns suis ad T. Sextium lēgātum, quem minōribus castrīs praesidiō reliquerat, misit ut co-hortēs ex castrīs celeriter ēdūceret et sub infimō colle ab dextrō latere hostium cōstitueret, ut, sī nostrōs locō dēpulsōs vīdisset, quō minus liberē hostēs insequerentur ter-45 rēret. Ipse paulum ex eō locō cum legiōne prōgressus ubi cōstiterat, ēventum pugnae exspectābat.

50. Cum ācerrimē comminus pugnārētur, hostēs locō et numerō, nostrī virtūte cōfiderent, subitō sunt Haedui vīsī ab latere nostrīs apertō, quōs Caesar ab dextrā parte aliō ascēnsū manūs distinendae causā miserat. Hī similitūdine armōrum vehementer nostrōs perterruerunt, ac tametsī dextrīs umerīs exsertis animadvertēbantur, quod insigne pactum esse cōnsuerat, tamen id ipsum suī fallendī causā militēs ab hostibus factum existimābant.

Eōdem tempore L. Fabius centuriō quīque ūnā mūrūm ascenderant circumventī atque interfectī de mūrō praecipitābantur. M. Petrōnius, eiusdem legiōnis centuriō, cum portās excidere cōnātus esset, ā multitudīne oppressus ac sibi dēspērāns, multis iam vulneribus acceptis, manipularibus suis quī illum secūtī erant, “Quoniam,” inquit, “mē ūnā vōbiscum servāre nōn possum, vestrae quidem certē vitae prōspiciam, quōs cupiditāte glōriae adductus in periculum dēdūxī. Vōs datā facultāte vōbīs cōnsulite.” Simul in mediōs hostēs inrūpīt duōbusque interfectis reliquōs ā portā paulum summōvit. Cōnantibus auxiliārī suis, “Frūstrā,” inquit, “meae vitae subvenire cōnāminī, quem iam sanguis vīrēsque dēficiunt. Proinde abīte, dum est facultās, vōsque ad legiōnem recipite.” Ita pugnāns post paulum concidit ac suis salūtī fuit.

51. Nostrī cum undique premerentur, XLVI Repulse of the Romans with heavy loss. centuriōnibus āmissis dēiectī sunt locō. Sed intolerantius Gallōs insequentēs legiō decima tardāvit, quae prō subsidiō paulō aequiōre locō cōnstiterat. Hanc rūsus tertiae decimae legiōnis cohortēs excēpērunt, quae ex castrīs minōribus ēductae cum T. Sextiō lēgātō cēperant locum superiōrem. Legiōnēs ubi primum plāntiis attigērunt, infestis contrā hostēs signis cōstitērunt. Vercingetorix ab rādīcibus collis suōs intrā mūnitiōnēs redūxit. Eō diē militēs sunt paulō minus dcc dēsiderātī.

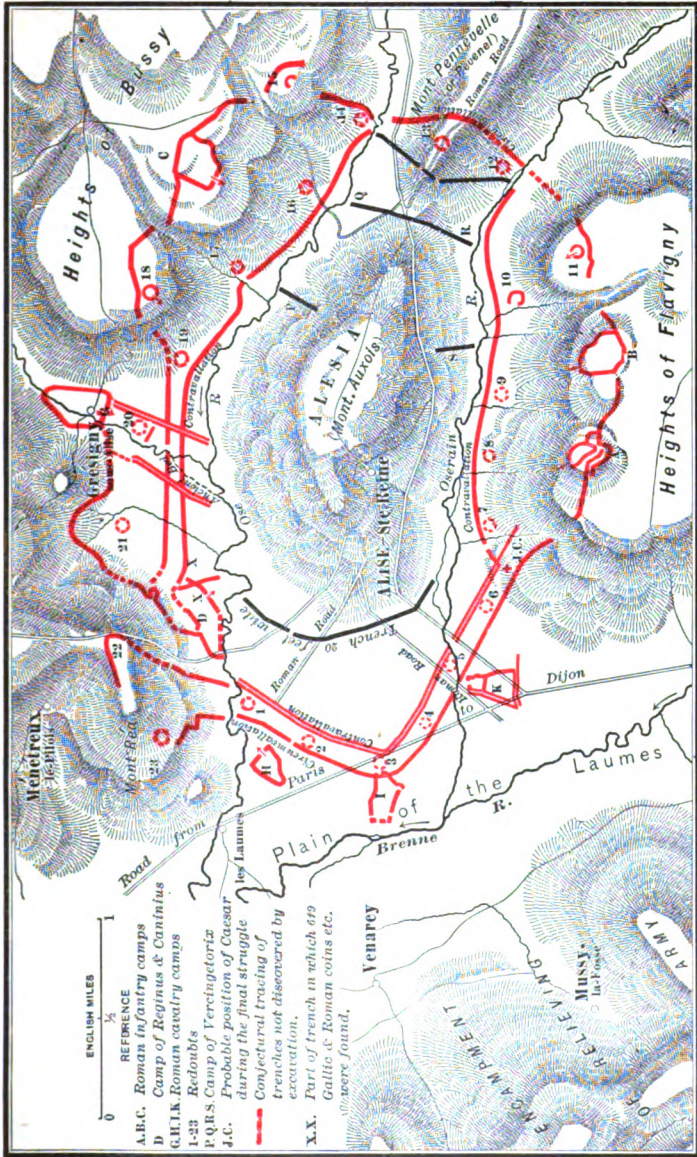

Caesar censures the rashness of his men though praising their valor.

52. Posterō diē Caesar cōntiōne advocātā temeritātem cupiditātemque militum reprehendit, quod sibi ipsi iūdicāvissent quō prōcēdendum aut quid agendum vidērētur, neque signō recipiendī datō cōstitissent, neque ā tribūnīs militum lēgātisque retinērī potuissent. Exposuit quid inīquitās locī posset, — quod ipse ad Avaricum sēnsisset, cum sine duce et sine equitātū dēprehēnsīs hostibus explorātā victōriam dīmīssisset nē parvum modo dētrimentum
10 in contentiōne propter inīquitātem locī accideret. Quāto opere eōrum animī magnitūdinem admirārētur, quōs nōn castrōrum mūnitiōnēs, nōn altitūdō montis, nōn mūrus oppidī tardāre potuisset, tantō opere licentiam adroganti- amque reprehendere, quod plūs sē quam imperātōrem dē 15 victōriā atque exitū rērum sentīre existimārent; nec minus sē ā milite modestiam et continentiam quam virtūtem atque animī magnitūdinem dēsiderāre.

After offering battle, which is refused by the enemy, Caesar retires into the Haeduan territory.

53. Hāc habitā cōntiōne et ad extrēmam orātiōnem cōfirmātīs militibus, nē ob hanc causam animō permovērentur neu, quod inīquitās locī attulisset, id virtūti hostium tribuerent, eadem dē profectiōne cōgitāns quae ante sēnserat, legiōnēs ex castrīs edūxit aciemque idōneō locō cōstituit. Cum Vercingetorix nihilō magis in 25 aequum locum dēscenderet, levī factō equestrī proeliō atque eō secundō, in castra exercitum redūxit. Cum hoc idem posterō diē fēcisset, satis ad Gallicam ostentātiōnem minuendam militumque animōs cōfirmandōs factum existimāns in Haeduōs mōvit castra.

THE SIEGE OF ALESIA

69-90. CONFLICT AT ALESIA WITH AN ALLIED ARMY OF ALL THE GAULS, 52 B.C.

Preparations of both sides for a decisive contest

Alesia. Defenses of the Gauls and of the Romans. 69. Ipsum erat oppidum in colle summō admodum ēditō locō, ut nisi obsidiōne expugnārī nōn posse vidērētur. Cuius collis rādīcēs duo duābus ex partibus flūmina subluēbant. Ante oppidum 5 plānitīēs circiter millia passuum III in longitūdinem patēbat; reliquīs ex omnibus partibus collēs, mediocri interiectō spatiō, parī altitūdinis fastigiō oppidum cingēbant. Sub mūrō, quae pars collis ad orientem sōlem spectābat, hunc omnem locum cōpiae Gallōrum complēverant, fossamque 10 et māceriam in altitūdinem vi pedum praedūxerant. Eius mūnitiōnis quae ab Rōmānīs instituēbātur circuitus XI millia passuum tenēbat. Castra opportūnis locīs erant posita VIII castellaque XXIII facta; quibus in castellīs interdiū statiōnēs pōnēbantur, nē qua subitō ēruptiō fieret; haec 15 eadem noctū excubitōribus ac firmīs praesidiīs tenēbantur.

The Romans win a cavalry engagement. 70. Opere institūtō fit equestre proelium in eā plānitīē quam intermissam collibus III millia passuum in longitūdinem patēre suprā dēmōnstrāvimus. Summā vī ab utrisque contenditur. Labōranti- 20 bus nostrīs Caesar Germānōs summittit legiōnēsque prō castrīs cōstituit, nē qua subitō inruptiō ab hostium pedītātū fiat. Praesidiō legiōnum additō nostrīs animus augētur; hostēs in fugam coniectī sē ipsī multitudine impediunt atque angustiōribus portīs relictīs coartantur. Germāni 25 ācrius usque ad mūnitiōnēs sequuntur. Fit magna caedēs; nōn nullī relictīs equīs fossam trānsire et māceriam trāscendere cōnantur. Paulum legiōnēs Caesar quās prō vällō cōstituerat prōmovērī iubet. Nōn minus quī intrā mūnitiōnēs erant Gallī perturbantur; venīrī ad sē cōnfestim existimantēs ad arma conclāmant; nōn nullī perteritī in oppidum inrumpunt. Vercingetorix iubet portās 5 claudī, nē castra nudentur. Multis interfectis, complūribus equis captis, Germānī sēsē recipiunt.

71. Vercingetorix, priusquam mūnitiōnēs ab Rōmānis perficiantur, cōnsilium capit omnem ab sē equitātum noctū dīmittere. Discēdentibus 10 mandat ut suam quisque eōrum civitātem adeat omnēsque quī per aetātem arma ferre possint ad bellum cōgant. Sua in illōs merita prōponit, obtestāturque ut suae salutis ratiōnem habeant, neu sē optimē dē commūnī libertāte meritum hostibus in cru- 15 ciātum dēdant. Quod sī indiligentiōrēs fuerint, millia hominum delēcta LXXX unā sēcum interitūra dēmōnstrat. Ratiōne initā frūmentum sē exiguē diērum xxx habēre, sed paulō etiam longius tolerārī posse parcendō.

Hīs datis mandātis, quā erat nostrum opus intermissum, 20 secundā vigiliā silentiō equitātum dīmittit. Frūmentum omne ad sē referrī iubet; capitis poenam iis quī nōn pāruerint cōstituit; pecus, cuius magna erat cōpia ā Mandubiis compulsa, viritim distribuit; frūmentum parcē et paulātim mētīrī instituit. Cōpiās omnēs, quās prō 25 oppidō conlocāverat, in oppidum recipit. Hīs ratiōnibus auxilia Galliae exspectāre et bellum administrāre parat.

72. Quibus rēbus cōgnitis ex perfugīs et captivīs, Caesar haec genera mūnitiōnis instituit. Fossam pedum xx dērēctis lateribus dūxit, ut 30 eius fossae solum tantundem patēret quantum

73. Erat eōdem tempore et māteriārī et frūmentārī et tantās mūnitiōnēs fierī necesse, dēminūtīs nostrīs cōpiis, quae longius ā castrīs prōgrediēbantur; ac nōn numquam opera nostra Gallī temptāre atque ēruptiōnem ex oppidō

Dum haec ad Alesiam geruntur, Galli An immense army is sent to the relief of Vercingetorix. conciliō principum indictō nōn omnēs quī arma ferre possent, ut cēnsuit Vercingetorix, convocandōs statuunt, sed certum numerum cuique civitātī imperandum, nē tantā multitudīne cōfūsā nec moderārī nec discernere suōs nec frūmentandī ratiōnem habēre possent. Imperant Haeduīs atque eōrum clientibus, Segusiāvīs, Ambivaretīs, Aulercīs Brannovicibus, millia xxxv; parem numerum Arvernīs, adiūctīs Eleutētīs, Cadūrcīs, Gabalīs, Vellāviīs, quī sub imperiō Arvernōrum esse cōnsuērunt; Sēquanīs, Senonibus, Biturīgibus, Santonīs, Rutēnīs, Carnutibus duodēna millia; Bellocacīs x; totidem Lemovicibus; octōna Pictonibus et Turonīs et Parisiīs et Helvētiīs; sēna Andibus, Ambiānīs, Mediomatricīs, Petrucoriīs, Nerviīs, Morinīs, Nitiobrogibus; v millia Aulercīs Cēnomanīs; totidem Atrebātibus; IIII Veliocassis; Aulercīs Eburovicibus III; Rauracīs et Bōīs bīna; x ūniversīs civitātibus quae Ōceanum attingunt quaeque eōrum cōnsuetūdine Aremoricae appellantur, quō sunt in numerō Coriosolitēs, Redonēs, Ambibariī, Caletēs, Osismī, Veneti, Lexoviī, Venellī. Ex hīs Bellocaci suum numerum nōn contulērunt, quod sē suō nōmine atque arbitriō cum Rōmānīs bellum gestūrōs dicerent neque cuiusquam imperiō obtemperātūrōs; rogātī tamen ā Commiō prō eius hospitio duo millia mīsērunt.

76. Huius operā Commī, ut antea dēmōstrāvimus, fideli atque ūtili superiōribus annīs erat ūsus in Britannīā Caesar; prō quibus meritis civitātem eius immūnem esse iusserat, iūra lēgēsque reddiderat atque ipsī Morinōs attribuerat. Tanta tamen ūniversae Galliae cōnsēnsiō fuit libertātis vindicandae et pristinae belli laudis recuperandae ut neque beneficiis neque amicitiae memoriā movērētur, omnēsque et animō et opibus in id bellum incumberent.

Coactis equitum millibus VIII et peditum circiter CCL, haec in Haeduōrum finibus recēnsēbantur, numerusque inibātur, praefecti cōstituēbantur; Commiō Atrebāti, Viridomārō et Eporēdorigī Haeduīs, Vercassivellaunō Arvernō, cōsobrīnō Vercingetorigis, summa imperī trāditur. Hīs dēlēcti ex civitatibus attribuuntur quōrum cōsiliō bellum administrārētur. Omnēs alacrēs et fidūciae plēni ad Alesiam proficiscuntur; neque erat omnium quisquam quī aspectum modo tantae multitudinis sustinēri posse arbitrārētur, praesertim ancipiti proeliō, cum ex oppidō ēruptiōne pugnārētur, foris tantae cōpiae equitātūs pedītātūsque cernerentur.

The besieged in Alesia are on the verge of starvation. A barbarous proposal for relief is rejected. The Mandubii are forced to leave the town.

77. At iī quī Alesiae obsidēbantur, praeteritā diē quā auxilia suōrum exspectāverant, cōsūmptō omni frūmentō, inscii quid in Haeduīs gererētur, conciliō coactō dē exitū suārum fortūnārum cōsultābant. Ac variis dictis sententiis, quārum pars dēditionem, pars, dum virēs suppetent, ēruptiōnem cēnsēbat, nōn praetereunda orātiō Critognātī vidētur propter eius singulārem et nefāriam crudelitātem.

Hīc summō in Arvernīs ortus locō et magnae habitus auctoritātis, "Nihil," inquit, "dē eōrum sententiā dictūrus sum quī turpissimam servitūtem dēditionis nōmine appellānt, neque hōs habendōs civium locō neque ad concilium adhibendōs cēnsēō. Cum hīs mihi rēs est quī ēruptiōnem probant; quōrum in cōsiliō omnium vestrum cōsēnsū pristinæ residere virtutis memoria videtur. Animi est ista mollitia, non virtus, paulisper inopiam ferre non posse. Qui se ultrò morti offerant facilius reperiuntur quam qui dolorem patienter ferant. Atque ego hanc sententiam

 5 probarem (tantum apud me dignitas potest), si nullam praeterquam vitae nostrae iacturam fieri viderem; sed in consilio capiendò omnem Galliam respiciamus, quam ad nostrum auxilium concitavimus. Quid, hominum millibus
 LXXX unò loco interfectis, propinquis consanguineisque
 10 nostris animi fore existimatis, si paene in ipsis cadaveribus proelio decertare cogentur? Nolite hos vestro auxilio exspoliare qui vestrae salutis causam suum periculum neglexerunt, nec stultitiam ac temeritatem vestram aut animi imbecillitate omnem Galliam prosternere et perpetuae servituti 15 subicere.

“An, quod ad diem non venerunt, de eorum fide constantiamque dubitatis? Quid ergo? Romanos in illis ulterioribus munitionibus animine causam cotidie exerceri putatis? Si illorum nuntiis confirmari non potestis omni 20 aditum praesaepitò, his utimini testibus appropinquare eorum adventum; cuius rei timore exterriti diem noctemque in opere versantur.

“Quid ergo mei consilii est? Facere quod nostri maiores nequaquam pari bello Cimbrorum Teutonumque fecerunt; qui in oppida compulsi ac simili inopia subacti,
 25 eorum corporibus qui aetate ad bellum inutilis videbantur vitam toleraverunt, neque se hostibus tradiderunt. Cuius rei si exemplum non haberemus, tamen libertatis causam institui et posteris prodi pulcherrimum iudicarem. Nam
 30 quid illi simile bello fuit? Depopulata Galliam Cimbrum, magnāque inlātā calamitāte, finibus quidem nostris aliquandō excessērunt atque aliās terrās petiērunt; iūra, lēgēs, agrōs, libertātem nōbis reliquērunt. Rōmānī vērō quid petunt aliud aut quid volunt, nisi invidiā adductī, 5 quōs fāmā nōbilēs potentēsque bellō cōgnōvērunt, hōrum in agris civitātibusque cōsidere atque hīs aeternam iniungere servitūtem? Neque enim umquam aliā condiciōne bella gessērunt. Quod si ea quae in longinquīs nātiōnibus geruntur ignōrātis, respicite finitimam Galliam, quae in 10 prōvinciam redācta, iūre et lēgibus commūtātis, secūribus subiecta perpetuā premitur servitūte."

78. Sententiis dictis cōstituunt ut iī quī valētūdine aut aetāte inūtilēs sint bellō oppidō excēdant, atque omnia prius experiantur quam ad Critognātī sententiam dēscen- 15 dant; illō tamen potius ūtendum cōsiliō, si rēs cōgat atque auxilia morentur, quam aut dēditiōnis aut pācis subeundam condiciōnem. Mandubiī, quī eōs oppidō recēperant, cum liberis atque uxōribus exire cōguntur. Hī cum ad mūnitiōnēs Rōmānōrum accessissent, flentēs omnibus 20 precibus ōrābant ut sē in servitūtem receptōs cibō iuvārent. At Caesar, dispositis in vāllō custōdiīs, recipi prohibēbat.

79. Intereā Commius reliquique ducēs, quibus The arrival of the relieving army brings hope to the besieged. 25 summa imperī permissa erat, cum omnibus cōpiis ad Alesiam perveniunt et colle exteriōre occupātō nōn longius mille passibus ā nostris mūnitiōnibus cōsidunt. Posterō diē equitātū ex castris ēductō omnem eam plānitiem quam in longitūdinem millia passuum III patēre dēmōstrāvimus complent, pedestrēsque cōpiās paulum ab eō locō abductās in locis 30 superiōribus cōstituunt. Erat ex oppidō Alesiā dēs-tus in campum. Concurrunt hīs auxiliis vīsīs; fit grātulātiō inter eōs, atque omnium animī ad laetitiam excitantur. Itaque prōductis cōpiīs ante oppidum cōsistunt et proximam fossam crātibus integunt atque aggere explent sēque

23-44. CURIO'S DISASTROUS CAMPAIGN IN AFRICA,
AUGUST, 49 B.C.

His first operations are successful

Curio's landing in Africa is unopposed.

23. Īsdem temporibus C. Cūriō in Āfricam profectus ex Siciliā, etiam ab initiō cōpiās P. Hīc locus abest ā Clupeā passuum XXII millia, habetque nōn incommodam aestāte statiōnem, et duōbus ēminentibus prōmunturiis continētur. Huius adventum L. Caesar filius cum X longīs nāvibus ad Clupeam praestōlāns, quās nāvēs Uticae ex praedōnum bellō subductās P. Attius reficiendās huius bellī causā cūrāverat, veritus nāvium multitūdinem ex altō refūgerat appulsāque ad proximum litus trirēme cōnstrātā et in litore relictā pedibus Hadrūmētum profūgerat. vēnerat, legiōnēsque eās trādūxerat Cūrio quās superiōribus temporibus Corfiniō recēperat Caeneu contrā eōs arma ferrent quī eādē essent ūsī fortunā eademque in obsidiōne perpressī, neu prō his pugnārent 15 ā quibus cum contumēliā perfugae appellārentur. Hūc pauca ad spem largitiōnis addidit, quae ab suā liberāli-tāte, sī sē atque Attium secūtī essent, expectāre dēbērent.

Hāc habitā ōrātiōne nullam in partem ab exercitū Cūriōnis fit signifiātīō, atque ita suās uterque cōpiās redūcit.

20 29. At in castrīs Cūriōnis magnus omnium incessit timor animīs; is variīs hominum sermōnibus celeriter augētur. Ūnusquisque enim opīniōnēs fingēbat et ad id quod ab aliō audierat suī aliquid timōris addēbat. Hoc ubi ūnō auctōre ad plūrēs permānāverat atque alius alii trādi-25 derat, plūrēs auctōrēs eius rei vidēbantur. Erat cīvile bellum; genus hominum cui quod libēret licēret facere, et sequī quod vellet; legiōnēs eae quae paulō ante apud adversāriōs fuerant (nam recentia Caesaris beneficia imminuerat mānsuētūdō quā cōferrentur in mūnicipia etiam dīversīs veniēbant et quī superiōre nocte perfūgerant et quī in contuberniis centuriōnēs militēsque remāserant. Nōn nūlli graviōra iactāverant. Sermōnēs militum dubiī dūrius accipiēbantur, nōn nūlla etiam ab iis quī diligentiorēs 5 vidēri volēbant fingēbantur.

30. Quibus dē causīs cōsiliō convocātō dē summā rērum dēliberāre incipit. Erant sententiae quae cōnandum omnibus modis castraque Vārī oppugnanda cēnsērent, quod huius modi
10 militum cōsiliīs otium maximē cōsentāneum esse arbitrārentur; postrēmō praestāre dicēbant per virtūtem in pugnā bellī fortunam experiri quam dēsertōs et circumventōs ab suis gravissimum supplicium perpeti. Erant quī cēnsērent dē tertiā

31. Cūriō utrumque improbāns cōsiliū,

32. Dīmissō cōsiliō cōntiōnem advocat mīlitum. Commemorat quō sit eōrum ūsus studiō ad Corfinium Caesar, ut magnam partem Italiae beneficiō atque auctōritāte eōrum suam fēcerit. “Vōs enim vestrumque factum,” inquit, “omnia deinceps mūnicipia sunt secūta, neque sine causā et Caesar amīcissimē dē vōbīs et illī gravissimē iūdicāvērunt:

Fingitur nova religiō, ut, eō neglectō sacramētō quō tenēminī, respiciātis illud quod dēditōne ducis et capitis dēminūtiōne sublātum est.

“At, crēdō, Caesarem probātis, in mē offenditis: quī dē meīs in vōs meritis praedicātūrus nōn sum, quae sunt adhūc et meā voluntāte et vestrā expectātiōne leviora; sed tamen suī labōris militēs semper ēventū bellī praemia petivērunt, quī quālis sit futūrus nē vōs quidem dubitātis; diligentiam quidem nostram aut, quem ad finem adhūc rēs prōcessit, fortunā cūr praeteream? 33. Quā orātiōne permōtī militēs crēbrō etiam dīcentem
 15 interpellābant, ut magnō cum dolōre infidēlitātis suspīcīōnem sustinēre vidērentur; discēdentem vērō ex cōtiōne ūniversī cohortantur magnō sit animō, neu dubitet proelium committere et suam fidem virtūtemque experīrī. Quō factō commūtātā omnium et voluntāte et opīniōne, cōnsēnsū
 20 suōrum omnium cōstituit Cūriō, cum primum sit data potestās, proeliō rem committere; pōsterōque diē prōductōs eōdem locō quō superiōre diē cōstitērat in āciē conlocat. Nē Vārus quidem Attius dubitat cōpiās prōdūcere, sive sollicitandī militēs 25 sive aequō locō dīmīcandī dētur occāsīō, nē facultātem praetermittat.

34. Erat vallis inter duās aciēs, ut suprā dēmōnstrātum est, nōn ita magna, at difficilī et arduō ascēnsū. Hanc uterque sī adversāriōrum cōpiae trānsire cōnārentur ex

Simul ab sinistrō cornū P. Attī equitātus omnis et ūnā levis armātūrae interiectī complūrēs, cum sē in vallem dēmitterent, cernēbantur. Ad eōs Cūriō equitātum et duās Marrūcīnōrum cohortēs mittit. Quōrum primum impetum
5 equitēs hostium nōn tulērunt, sed admissis equis ad suōs refūgērunt; relictī ab hīs quī ūnā prōcurrerant levis armā-tūrae circumveniēbantur atque interficiēbantur ab nostrīs.
Hūc tōta Vārī conversa aciēs suōs fugere et concīdi vidēbat. Tum Rebilus, lēgātus Caesaris, quem Cūriō sēcum 10 ex Siciliā dūxerat quod magnum habēre ūsum in rē militārī sciēbat, “Perterritum,” inquit, “hostem vidēs, Cūriō: quid dubitās ūtī temporis opportūnitāte?” Ille ūnum ēlocūtus, ut memoriā tenērent militēs ea quae prīdiē sibi cōfirmāssent, sequī sēsē iubet et praecurrit ante omnēs. Adeōque 15 erat impedita vallis ut in ascēnsū nisi sublevātī ā suis prīmi nōn facile ēniterentur. Sed praeoccupātus animus Attiānōrum militum timōre et fugā et caede suōrum nihil dē resistendō cōgitābat, omnēsque iam sē ab equitātū circumvenīrī arbitrābantur. Itaque priusquam tēlum abicī posset 20 aut nostrī propius accēderent, omnis Vārī aciēs terga vertit sēque in castra recēpit.

gladiō appetiit, paulumque āfuit quīn Vārūm interficeret;
30 quod ille pericūlum sublātō ad eius cōnātum scūtō vitāvit.

Fabius ā proximīs militibus circumventus interficitur. At fugientium multitudīne ac turbā portae castrōrum occupantur atque iter impeditur, plūrēsque in eō locō sine vulnere quam in proeliō aut in fugā intereunt; neque multum āfuit quān etiam castrīs expellerentur, ac nōn nulli prōtinus eōdem cursū in oppidum contendērunt. Sed cum loci nātūra et mūnitiō castrōrum aditum prohibēbat, tum quod ad proelium ēgressi Cūriōnis militēs iis rēbus indigēbant quae ad oppugnātiōnem castrōrum erant ūsuī. Itaque Cūriō exercitum in castra redūcit suis omnibus praeter Fabium incolumibus, ex numerō adversāriōrum circiter DC interfectis ac mille vulnerātis; quī omnēs discessū Cūriōnis multique praetereā per simulātiōnem vulnerum ex castris in oppidum propter timōrem sēsē recipiunt. Quā rē animadversā Vārus et terrōre exercitūs cōgnitō, būcinātore in castris et paucis ad speciem tabernāculis relictis, dē tertiā vigiliā silentiō exercitum in oppidum redūcit.

The towns-people are on the point of surrendering to Curio when word comes that Juba is approaching with strong reinforcements.

36. Posterō diē Cūriō obsidēre Uticam vāllōque circummūnīre instituit. Erat in oppidō multitudō insolēns bellī diūturnitāte otī, Uticēnsēs prō quibusdam Caesaris in sē beneficiis illi amīcissimī, conventus quī ex variis generibus cōstāret, terror ex superiōribus proeliis magnus. Itaque dē dēditiōne omnēs iam palam loquēbantur, et cum P. Attiō agēbant nē suā pertināciā omnium fortunās perturbārī vellet. Haec cum agerentur, nūntiī praemissi ab rēge Iubā vērērunt, quī illum adesse cum magnis cōpiis dicerent et dē custōdiā ac dēfēnsiōne urbis hortārentur. Quae rēs eōrum perterritōs animōs cōfirmāvit.

Annihilation of Curio's army by Juba

37. Nūntiābantur haec eadem Cūriōnī, sed aliquamdiū fidēs fierī nōn poterat; tantam habēbat suārum rērum fidūciam. Iamque Caesaris in Hispāniā rēs secundae in Āfricam nūntiis ac litteris perferēbantur. Quibus omnibus rēbus sublātus nihil contrā sē rēgem nīsūrum exīstimābat. Sed ubi certis auctōribus comperit minus v et xx millibus longē ab Uticā eius cōpiās abesse, relictis mūnitiōnibus sēsē in Castra Cornēlia recēpit. Hūc frūmentum comportāre, māteriam cōferre coepit, statimque in Siciliam mīsit, utī duae legiōnēs reliquusque equitātus ad sē mitterētur. Castra erant ad bellum dūcendum aptissima nātūrā locī et mūnitiōne et maris propinquitāte et aquae et salis cōpiā, cuius magna vīs iam ex proximis erat salinis eō congesta. Nōn māteria multitudīne arborum, nōn frūmentum, cuius erant plēnissimi agrī, dēficere poterat. Itaque omnium suōrum cōsēnsū Cūriō reliquās cōpiās exspectāre et bellum dūcere parābat.

38. His cōstitūtis rēbus probātisque cōsiliis ex perfugis quibusdam oppidānis audit Iubam revocātum finitimō bellō et contrōversiis Leptitānōrum restitisse in rēgnō, Saburram, eius praefectum, cum mediocribus cōpiis missum Uticae appropinquāre. His auctōribus temere crēdēns cōsiliū commūtat et proeliō rem committere cōstituit. Multum ad hanc rem probandam adiuvat adulēscentia, magnitudō animī, superiōris temporis prōventus, fidūcia rei bene gerendae. His rēbus impulsus equitatum omnem primam nocte ad castra hostium mittit ad flumen Bagradam. Quibus praeerat Saburra, de quo ante erat auditum; sed rex cum omnibus copiis sequeretur et vi millium passuum intervallum a Saburra considerat. Equites missi nocturnum iter conficiunt, imprudentes atque inopinantes hostes adgrediuntur. Numidae enim quadam barbaram consuetudine nullis ordinibus passim considerant. Hos oppressos somno et dispersos adorti magnum eorum numerum interficiunt; multi perterriti profugiunt. Quo facto ad Curionem equites revertuntur captivosque ad eum deducunt.

39. Curius cum omnibus copiis quartam vigiliam exierat cohortibus v castris praesidio relictis. Progressus millia passuum vi equites convenit, rem gestam cognovit. Eum captivus quaerit quis castris ad Bagradam praesit; respondent Saburram. Reliqua studio itineris conficiendi quaerere praetermittit, proximaque respiciens signa, "Videtisne," inquit, "militum, captivorum orationem cum perfugis convenire? abesse regem, exiguas esse copias missas, quae paucis equitibus pares esse non potuerint? Proinde ad praedam, ad gloriam properate, ut iam de praemiis vestris et de referenda gratia cogitare incipiamus." Erant per se magna quae gesserant equites, praesertim cum eorum exiguus numerus cum tanta multitudine Numidarum con- ferreretur; haec tamen ab ipsis inflatius commemorabantur, ut de suis homines laudibus libenter praedicant. Multa praeterea spolia praeferebantur, capti homines equique produebantur; ut, quicquid intercederet temporis, hoc omnibus victoriam morari videretur: ita spei Curionis militum studia non deerant. Equites sequi iubet sese iterque accelerat, ut quam maximē ex fugā perterritōs adoriri posset. At illi itinere tōtius noctis cōfecti subsequi nō poterant, atque alii aliō locō resistēbant. Nē haec quidem rēs Cūriōnem ad spem morābātur.

5 40. Iuba certior factus ā Saburrā dē nocturnō proeliō 11 millia Hispānōrum et Gallōrum equitum, quōs suae custōdiae causā circum sē habēre cōsuērat, et peditum eam partem cui maximē cōfidēbat Saburrae summittit; ipse cum reli-

 15 rem postulāre cōgnōvisset imperātūrum. Cūriō, ad superiōrem spem additā praesentis temporis opīniōne, hostēs fugere arbitrātus cōpiās ex locis superiōribus in campum dēdūcit.

41. Quibus ex locis cum longius esset prō-

5 Vibullius, who had been waiting at Corcyra for Pompey's return from eastern Macedonia, upon hearing of Caesar's arrival in Epirus, at once hastens to Pompey with the news.

11. Vibullius expositus Corcyræ nōn minus necessārium esse existimāvit dē repentinō adventū Caesaris Pompēium fierī certīorem, utī ad id cōnsilium capere posset, quam dē mandātis agī; atque ideō continuātō noctem ac diem itinere atque omnibus hospitīis mūtātis ad celebritatem iūmentis ad Pompēium contendit, ut adesse Caesarem nūntiāret. Pompēius erat eō tempore in Candāviā iterque ex Macedoniā in hiberna Apollōniam Dyrrachiumque habēbat.

15 Sed rē novā perturbātus maiōribus itineribus Apollōniam petere coepit, nē Caesar ōrae maritimae civitātēs occupāret. At ille expositis mīlitibus eōdem diē Ōricum proficiscitur.

20 Caesar marches to Oricum, which is surrendered without fighting.

Quō cum vēnisset, L. Torquātus, quī iussū Pompēi oppidō praeerat praesidiumque ibi Parthīnōrum habēbat, cōnātus portīs clausis oppidum dēfendere, cum Graecōs mūrum ascendere atque arma capere iubēret, illī autem sē contrā imperium populī Rōmānī pugnātūrōs negārent, oppidānī etiam suā sponte Caesarem recipere cōnārentur, dēspērātis omnibus auxiliis portās aperuit et sē atque oppidum Caesarī dēdidit, incolumisque ab eō cōservātus est.

30 Apollonia and other towns are surrendered to Caesar.

12. Receptō Caesar Ōricō nullā interpositā morā Apollōniam proficiscitur. Eius adventū auditō L. Staberius, quī ibi praeerat, aquam comportāre in arcem atque eam mūnīre obsidēsque ab Apollōniātibus exigere coepit. Illi vērō datūrōs sē negāre neque portās cōnsuli praeclūsūrōs, neque sibi iūdicium sūmptūrōs contrā atque omnis Italia populusque Rōmānus iūdicāvisset. Quōrum cōgnitā voluntāte clam profugit Apollōniā Staberius. Illi ad Caesarem lēgātōs mittunt oppidōque recipiunt. Hōs sequuntur Byllidēsēs et Amantīni et reliquae finitimae civitatēs tōtaque Ēpīros, et lēgātīs ad Caesarem missīs quae imperāret factūrōs pollicentur.

- 10 13. At Pompēius cōgnitis hīs rēbus quae erant Ōrici atque Apollōniae gestae, Dyrrachiō timēns diurnis eō nocturnisque itineribus contendit. Simul Caesar appropinquāre dicēbātur, tantusque terror incidit eius exercitūs, quod pro-
- 15 perāns noctem diēi coniūxerat neque iter intermiserat, ut paene omnēs ex Ēpīrō finitimisque regiōnibus signa relinquerent, complūrēs arma prōicerent ac fugae simile iter vidērētur. Sed cum prope Dyrrachium Pompēius cōstitisset castraque mētārī iussisset, perterritō
- 20 etiam tum exercitū prīnceps Labiēnus prōcēdit iūratque sē eum nōn dēsertūrum eundemque cāsū subitūrum, quemcumque ei fortūna tribuisset. Hoc idem reliquī iūrant lēgātī; hōs tribūnī militum centuriōnēsque sequuntur, atque idem omnis exercitus iūrat. Caesar, praeceptō itinere ad
- 25 Dyrrachium, finem properandī facit castraque ad flūmen Apsūm pōnit in finibus Apollōniātium, castellīs vicisque bene meritae civitatīs ut esset praesidiō; ibique reliquārum ex Italiā legiōnum adventum exspectāre et sub pellibus hiemāre cōstituit. Hoc idem Pompēius fēcit et trāns flūmen
- 30 Apsūm positīs castrīs eō cōpiās omnēs auxiliaque condūxit.

Quō cōgnitō sē in portum recipit nāvēsque omnēs revocat. Ūna ex hīs, quae persevēravit neque imperiō Calēnī obtemperāvit, quod erat sine militibus privātōque cōnsiliō administrābatur, dēlāta Ōricum atque ā Bibulo expugnāta est; quī dē servīs liberīsque omnibus ad impūberēs supplicium sūmit et ad ūnum interficit. Ita in exiguō tempore magnōque cāsū tōtius exercitūs salūs cōstitit.

*Privation on 15 Pompey's ships. Libo and Bibulus request an
with Caesar.*

15. Bibulus, ut suprā dēmōstrātum est, erat cum classe ad Ōricum, et sicutī marī portibusque Caesarem prohibēbat, ita ipse omnī terrā eārum regiōnum prohibēbatur: praesidiīs enim dispositis omnia litora ā Caesare tenēbantur, neque ligandi atque aquandi neque nāvēs ad terram dēligandi potestās fiēbat. Erat rēs in magnā difficultāte, summisque angustiīs rērum necessāriārum premēbantur, adeō ut cōgerentur sicutī reliquum commeātum ita ligna atque aquam Corcyrā nāvibus onerāriīs supportāre; atque etiam ūnō tempore accidit ut, difficiliōribus ūsī tempestātibus, ex pellibus 25 quibus erant tēctae nāvēs nocturnum excipere rōrem cōgerentur. Quās tamen difficultātēs patienter atque aequō animō ferēbant, neque sibi nūdanda litora et relinquendōs portūs exīstimābant.

Sed cum essent in quibus dēmōstrāvī angustiīs, ac sē 30 Libō cum Bibulō coniūnxisset, loquuntur ambō ex nāvibus cum M'. Aciliō et Stātiō Murcō lēgātīs, quōrum alter oppidis maritimīs, alter praesidiīs terrestribus praeerat, velle sē dē maximīs rēbus cum Caesare loquī, sī sibi eius rei facultās dētur. Hūc addunt pauca rei cōfirmandae causā, ut 5 dē compositionē āctūrī vidērentur. Interim postulant ut sint indūtiae, atque ab iīs impetrant. Magnum enim quod adferēbant vidēbātur, et Caesarem idem summē sciēbant cupere, et prōfectum aliquid Vibullī mandātīs existimābātur.

10 16. Caesar eō tempore cum legiōne unā profectus ad recipiendās ulteriōrēs civitatēs et rem frūmentāriam expediendam, quā angustā utēbātur, erat ad Būthrōtum, oppositum Corcyrae. Ibi certior ab Aciliō et Murcō per litterās factus
 15 dē postulātīs Libōnis et Bibuli legiōnem relinquit, ipse Ōricum revertitur. Eō cum vēnisset, ēvocantur illi ad conloquium. Prōdit Libō atque excūsatur Bibulum, quod is irācundiā summā erat inimicitiasque habēbat etiam privātās cum Caesare ex aedilitate et prae-
 20 tūrā conceptās: ob eam causam conloquium vitāsse, nē rēs maximae spei maximaeque utilitātis eius irācundiā impedirentur. Suam summam esse ac fuisse semper voluntatem ut compōnerētur atque ab armīs discēderētur, sed potestatem eius rei nullam habere, propterea quod dē cōsili
 25 sententiā summam bellī rērumque omnium Pompēiō permiserint. Sed postulātīs Caesaris cōgnitīs missūrōs ad Pompēium, atque illum reliqua per sē āctūrum hortantibus ipsīs. Interea manērent indūtiae dum ab illō redīri posset, nēve alter alterī noceret. Hūc addit pauca dē causā et dē 30 cōpiīs auxiliis que suis.

Libo proposes that negotiations for peace be opened with Pompey, and that meanwhile a truce be granted.

Caesar drops the negotiations, seeing that they are only a pretext for the sake of relieving the fleet.

17. Quibus dē rēbus neque tum respondendum Caesar existimāvit, neque nunc ut memoriae prōdantur satis causae putāmus. Postulābat Caesar ut lēgātōs sibi ad Pompēium sine periculō mittere licēret, idque ipsī fore recipere aut acceptōs per sē ad eum perducērent. Quod ad indūtiās pertinēret, sic bellī ratiōnem esse dīvisam ut illī classe nāvēs auxiliaque sua impedirent, ipse ut aquā terrāque eōs prohibēret. Sī hoc sibi remitti vellent, remitterent ipsī dē maritimīs custodiīs; sī illud tenērent, sē quoque id retentūrum. Nihilō minus tamen agī posse dē compositione, ut haec nōn remitterentur, neque hanc rem illī esse impedimentō. Libō neque lēgātōs Caesaris recipere neque periculum praestāre eōrum, sed tōtam rem ad Pompēium reicere unum, instāre dē indūtiīs vehementissimēque contendere. Quem ubi Caesar intellēxit praesentis periculī atque inopiae vitandae causā omnem orātiōnem instituisse neque ūllam spem aut condiōnem pācis adferre, ad reliquam cōgitātiōnem bellī sēsē recēpit.

Death of Bibulus on shipboard. Pompey's rejection of the peace proposals made through Vibullius.

18. Bibulus multōs diēs terrā prohibitus et graviōre morbō ex frīgore ac labōre implicitus, cum neque cūrārī posset neque susceptum officium dēserere vellet, vim morbī sustinēre nōn potuit. Eō mortuō ad nēminem unum summa imperī rediit, sed sēparatim suam quisque classem ad arbitrium suum administrābat. Vibullius sēdātō tumultū quem repentinus adventus Caesaris concitāverat, ubi primum ē rē vīsum est, adhibitō Libōne et L. Luccēiō et Theophane, quibuscum commūnicāre dē maximīs rēbus Pompēius cōnsueverat, dē mandātis

Caesaris agere instituit. Quem ingressum in sermōnem Pompēius interpellāvit et loquī plūra prohibuit. “Quid mihi,” inquit, “aut vitā aut civitāte opus est quam beneficiō Caesaris habēre vidēbor? Cuius rei opīniō tollī nōn poterit, cum in Italiam, ex quā profectus sum, reductus existimābor.” Bellō perfectō ab iis Caesar haec facta cōgnōvit quī sermōnī interfuērunt. Cōnātus tamen nihil minus est aliīs ratiōnibus per conloquia dē pāce agere.

19. Inter bīna castra Pompēi atque Caesaris
 10 ūnum flūmen intererat Apsus, crēbraque inter sē conloquia militēs habēbant, neque ūllum inte-

Libo blockades Caesar's fleet at Brundisium, and destroys a few of his ships.
10 23. Libō, profectus ab Ōricō cum classe cui praeerat nāvium L, Brundisium vēnit insulamque quae contrā portum Brundisīnum est occupavit, quod praestāre arbitrābātur ūnum locum, quā necessārius nostrīs erat ēgressus, quam omnia litora ac portūs custodiā classis tuērī. Ad hoc dētrīmentum accessit ut equitibus per ōram maritimam ab Antōniō dispositis aquārī prohibērentur. 41-72. CAESAR'S UNSUCCESSFUL BLOCKADE OF POMPEY NEAR DYRRACHIUM, APRIL-JULY, 48 B.C.

Circumstances leading to the blockade

41. Caesar postquam Pompēium ad Asparāgium esse cōgnōvit, eōdem cum exercitū profec-tus expugnātō in itinere oppidō Parthīnōrum, in quō Pompēius praesidium habēbat, tertiō diē ad 5 Pompēium pervēnit iūxtaque eum castra posuit, et postrīdiē ēductis omnibus cōpiis aciē instrūctā dēcernendī potestātem Pompēiō fēcit. Ubi il-lum suis locis sē tenēre animadvertit, reductō in castra exercitū aliud sibi cōsiliū capiendum exīstimā-10 vit. Itaque posterō diē omnibus cōpiis magnō circuitū difficili angustōque itinere Dyrrachium profectus est, spērāns Pompēium aut Dyrrachium compelli aut ab eō inter-clūdī posse, quod omnem commeātum tōtumque belli apparātum eō contulisset; ut accidit. Pompēius enim 15 primō ignōrāns eius cōsiliū, quod dīversō ab eā regiōne itinere profectum vidēbat, angustiis rei frūmentāriae com-pulsus discessisse exīstimābat; postea per explorātōrēs certior factus castra mōvit, breviore itinere sē occurrere eī posse spērāns. Quod fore suspicātus Caesar, militēs 20 adhortātus ut aequō animō labōrem ferrent, parvam par-tem noctis itinere intermissō māne Dyrrachium vēnit, cum primum agmen Pompēi procul cernerētur, atque ibi castra posuit.

atque eās ā quibusdam prōtegit ventis, castra commūnit. Eō partem nāvium longārum convenire, frūmentum commeātumque ab Asiā atque omnibus regiōnibus quās tenēbat comportārī imperat. Caesar longius bellum ductum irī exīstimāns et dē Italicis commeātibus dēspērāns, quod tantā diligentīā omnia litora ā Pompēianis tenēbantur, classēsque ipsius, quās hieme in Sicilia, Gallia, Italiā fēcerat, morābantur, in Ēpirum rei¹⁰ frūmentāriae causā Q. Tiliū et L. Canulēium lēgātum mīsit; quodque hae regiōnēs aberant longius, locis certis horrea cōstituit vectūrāsque frūmentī finitimis civitātibus discrīpsit. Item Lissō Parthīnisque et omnibus castellis quod esset frūmentī conquīrī iussit. Id erat perexiguum¹⁵ cum ipsius agrī nātūrā, quod sunt loca aspera ac montuōsa, ac plērumque frūmentō ūtuntur importātō, tum quod Pompēius haec prōviderat et superiōribus diēbus praedae locō Parthīnōs habuerat frūmentumque omne conquīsītum spoliātis suffossisque eōrum domibus per equitēs comportārat.

Difficulties of establishing and maintaining the blockade

43. Quibus rēbus cōgnitis Caesar cōnsilium capit ex loci nātūrā. Erant enim circum castra Pompēi permulti ēditī atque asperī collēs. Hōs primum praesidiis tenuit castellaque ibi commūniit; inde, ut loci cuiusque nātūra ferēbat, ex castellō in castellum²⁵ perductā mūnitiōne circumvallāre Pompēium instituit, haec spectāns: quod angustā rē frūmentāriā ūtēbatur quodque Pompēius multitudīne equitum valēbat, quō minōre periculō undique frūmentum commeātumque exercitūi suppor-tāre posset; simul, utī pābulātiōne Pompēium prohibēret equitātumque eius ad rem gerendam inūtilem efficeret; tertiō, ut auctōritātem, quā ille maximē apud exterās nātiōnēs nīti vidēbātur, minueret, cum fāma per orbem terrārum percrēbruisset illum ā Caesare obsidērī neque audēre proeliō dīmīcāre.

· 44. Pompēius neque ā marī Dyrrachiōque Pompey's defenses and his obstruction of Caesar's workers. discēdere volēbat, quod omnem apparātum bellī, tēla, arma, tormenta ibi conlocāverat frūmentumque exercituī nāvibus supportābat, neque mūnitiōnēs Caesaris prohibēre poterat, nisi proeliō dēcērtāre vellet; quod eō tempore faciendum nōn esse statuerat. Relinquēbātur ut extrēmam ratiōnem bellī sequēns quam plūrimōs collēs occupāret et quam lātissimās regiōnēs praesidiīs tenēret, Caesarisque cōpiās quam maximē posset distinēret; idque accidit. Castellis enim xxiiii effectīs xv millia passuum circumplexus hōc spatiō pābulābātur; multaque erant intrā eum locum manū sata, quibus interim iūmenta pāsceret. Atque ut nostrī perpetuā mūnitiōne prōvidēbant nē quō locō ērumperent Pompēiānī ac nostrōs post tergum adorirentur, ita illi interiōre spatiō perpetuās mūnitiōnēs efficiēbant, nē quem locum nostrī intrāre atque ipsōs ā tergō circumvenire possent. Sed illi operibus vincēbant, quod et numerō militum praestābant et interiōra spatia minōrem circuitum habēbant. Quārē cum erant loca Caesarī capiēda, etsī prohibēre Pompēius tōtis cōpiīs et dīmīcāre nōn cōstituerat, tamen suis locīs sagittariōs funditōrēsque mittēbat, quōrum magnum habēbat numerum, multique ex nostrīs vulnerābantur; magnusque incēserat timor sagittārum, atque omnēs ferē milītēs aut ex coactis aut ex centonibus aut ex coriis tunicas aut tegimenta fecerant, quibus tela vitarent.

* * * * *

Suffering in Caesar's army from lack of food. The brave spirit of his men. 47. Erat nova et inusitata belli ratio, cum tantō castellōrum numerō tantōque spatiō et tantis munitiōnibus et tōtō obsidiōnis genere, tum etiam reliquis rēbus. Nam quicumque alterum obsidēre cōnāti sunt, percussos atque infirmos hostēs aut proeliō superatos aut aliquā offēnsiōne permotos continuērunt, cum ipsi numerō equitum militumque praestarent; causa autem obsidiōnis haec ferē esse cōsuērat, ut frumentō hostēs prohiberent. At tum integras atque incolumēs cōpiās Caesar inferiōre militum numerō continēbat, cum illi omnium rērum cōpiā abundarent. Cotidiē enim magnus undique nāvium numerus conveniēbat, quae commeātum supportarent, neque ullus flāre ventus poterat quān aliquā ex parte secundum cursum haberent; ipse autem cōsumptis omnibus longē lātēque frumentis summis erat in angustiis. Sed tamen haec singulari patientiā milites ferēbant. Recordābantur enim eadem sē superiōre annō in Hispaniā perpressos labōre et patientiā maximum bellum cōfēcisse; meminerant ad Alesiam magnam sē inopiam perpressos, multo etiam maiorem ad Avaricum, maximārum sē gentium victōrēs discessisse. Nōn illi hordeum quān darētur, nōn legūmina recūsābant; pecus vērō, cuius rei summa erat ex Ēpirō cōpia, magnō in honōre habēbant.

A substitute for bread.

48. Est etiam genus radicis inventum ab iis qui convaluerant ex vulneribus, quod appellatur chara; quod admixtum lacte multum inopiam levabat. Id ad similitūdinem pānis efficiēbant. Eius erat magna cōpia. Ex hōc effectōs pānēs, cum in conloquiis Pompēiānī famem nostrīs obiectārent, vulgō in eōs iaciēbant, ut spem eōrum minuerent.

5 49. Iamque frūmenta mātūrēscere incipiēbant, atque ipsa spēs inopiam sustentābat, quod celeriter sē habitūrōs cōpiam cōfidēbant; crēbraeque vōcēs militum in circulis conloquiisque audiēbantur prius sē cortice ex arboribus

10 victūrōs quam Pompēium ē manibus dīmissūrōs. Libenter etiam ex perfugīs cōgnōscēbant equōs eōrum tolerārī, reliqua vērō iūmenta interfisse;

FIG. 37.—Coins of Pompey.

15 ūtī autem ipsōs valētūdine nōn bonā, cum angustiis locī et odōre taetrō ex multitūdine cadāverum et cotidiānīs labōribus insuētōs operum, tum aquae summā inopiā adfectōs. Omnia enim flūmina atque omnēs rīvōs quī ad mare pertinēbant Caesar aut āverterat aut magnīs operibus obstruxerat;

20 atque ut erant loca montuōsa et aspera, angustās vallium faucēs sublicīs in terram dēmissis praesaepserat terramque adgesserat, ut aquam continērent. Ita illi necessariō loca sequī dēmissa ac palūstria et puteōs fodere cōgēbantur, atque hunc labōrem ad cotidiānam operam

25 addēbant; quī tamen fontēs ā quibusdam praesidiīs aberant longius et celeriter aestibus exārēscēbant. At Caesaris exercitus optimā valētūdine ūtēbātur, cumque aquae cōpiā tum commeātūs. omnī genere praeter frūmentum abundābat; cui rei cotidiē melius occurrere tempus maiōremque

30 spem mātūritāte frūmentōrum prōpōnī vidēbant.

51. Interim certior factus P. Sulla, quem discēdēs castris praefēcerat Caesar, auxiliō cohorti vēnit cum legiōnibus duābus; cuius adventū facile sunt repulsi Pompēiāni. Aliae enim sunt lēgātī partēs atque imperātōris; alter omnia agere ad praescriptum, alter liberē ad summam rērum cōnsulere dēbet. Nam ante id tempus nēmō aut miles aut eques ā Caesare ad Pompēium trānsierat, cum paene cotidiē ā Pompēiō ad Caesarem perfugerent, vulgō vērō ūniversi in Ēpirō atque Aetoliā cōscripti milites eārumque regiōnum omnium quae ā Caesare tenēbantur. Sed hī cōgnitis omnibus rēbus, seu quid in mūnitiōnibus perfectum nōn erat, seu quid ā peritiōribus rei militāris dēsiderārī vidēbātur, temporibusque rērum et spatiis locōrum et custodiārum variā dīligentiā animadversā, prout cuiusque eōrum quī negotiis praeerant aut nātūra aut studium ferēbat, haec ad Pompēium omnia dētulerunt.

62. Quibus ille cōgnitis, ēruptiōnis iam ante captō cōsiliō, ut dēmōstrātum est, tegimenta galeis milites ex viminibus facere atque aggerem iubet comportāre. Hīs parātis rēbus magnum numerum levis armātūrae et sagittariōrum aggeremque omnem noctū in scaphās et nāvēs actuāriās impōnit; dē mediā nocte cohortēs LX ex maximis castris praesidiisque dēductās ad eam partem mūnitiōnum dūcit quae pertinēbat ad mare longissimēque ā maximis castris Caesaris aberat. Caesar, nē nāvibus nostrī circumvenirentur, duplicem eō locō fēcerat vāllum, ut, sī ancipitī proeliō dīmīcārētur, posset resistī. Sed operum magnitūdō et continēns omnium diērum labor, quod millia passuum in circuitū xvii mūnitiōne erat complexus, perficiendī spatium nōn dabat. Itaque contrā mare trānsversum vāllum, quī hās duās mūnitiōnēs coniungeret, nōndum perfēcerat. Quae rēs nōta erat Pompēiō, delāta per Allobrogas perfugās, magnumque nostrīs adlātūra erat incommodum. Nam ut ad mare II cohortēs nōnae legiōnis in excubiis erant, accessere

 5 subitō primā lūce Pompēiānī; simul nāvibus circumvecti milītēs in exteriōrem vāllum tēla iaciēbant fossāsque aggere complēbant, et legiōnariī interiōris mūnitiōnis dēfēnsōrēs, scālis admōtīs, tormentis cuiusque generis tēlisque terrēbant, magnaque multitudō sagittariōrum ab utrāque parte

 5 ad flūmen perdūxerat circiter passuum cccc, quō liberius ac minōre periculō militēs aquārentur. Sed is quoque mūtātō cōnsiliō quibusdam dē causis, quās commemorārī necesse nōn est, eō locō excesserat. Ita complūrēs diēs inānia mānserant castra; mūnitiōnēs quidem omnēs
 10 integræ erant.

67. Eō signa legiōnis lāta speculātōrēs Caesarī Caesar successfully attacks this camp with his left wing. renūtiārunt. Hoc idem vīsum ex superiōribus quīdam castellis cōfirmāvērunt. Is locus aberat ā novīs Pompēi castris circiter passūs quīngentōs.

15 Hanc legiōnem spērāns Caesar sē opprimere posse, et cupiēns eius diēi dētrimentum sarcīre, reliquit in opere cohortēs duās quæ speciem mūnientium præbērent; ipse dīversō itinere quam potuit occultissimē reliquās cohortēs, numerō xxxiii, in quibus erat legiō nōna multīs āmissis centuriōni-
 20 bus dēminūtōque militum numerō, ad legiōnem Pompēi castraque duplici aciē edūxit. Neque eum prīma opīniō fefellit. Nam et pervēnit priusquam Pompēius sentire posset, et tametsī erant mūnitiōnēs castrōrum magnæ, tamen sinistrō cornū, ubi erat ipse, celeriter adgressus
 25 Pompēiānōs ex vāllō dēturbāvit. Erat obiectus portæ ēricius. Hīc paulisper est pugnātum, cum inrumpere nostrī cōnārentur, illī castra dēfenderent, fortissimē T. Pullōne, cuius operā prōditum exercitum C. Antōnī dēmōnstrāvīmus, eō locō prōpugnante. Sed tamen nostrī virtūte
 30 vicērunt, excisōque ēriciō primō in maiōra castra, post etiam in castellum, quod erat inclūsum maiōribus castrīs, inrūpērunt, quod eō pulsa legiō sēsē recēperat, et nōn nullōs ibi repugnantēs interfēcērunt.

An error of his right wing and cavalry proves costly. 68. Sed fortūna, quae plūrimum potest cum in reliquīs rēbus tum praecipuē in bellō, parvīs mōmentīs magnās rērum commūtatiōnēs efficit; ut tum accidit. Mūnitiōnem enim, quam pertinēre ā castrīs ad flūmen suprā dēmōstrāvimus, dextrī Caesaris cornūs cohortēs ignōrantiā locī sunt secūtae, cum portam quaerent castrōrumque eam mūnitiōnem esse arbitrārentur. Quod cum esset animadversum coniūctam esse flūminī, prōrutis mūnitiōnibus dēfendente nullō trāscendērunt, omnisque noster equitātus eās cohortēs est secūtus.

Upon Pompey's arrival Caesar's men are panic-stricken and flee with heavy loss. 69. Interim Pompēius, hāc satis longā interiectā morā, eā rē nūntiātā v legiōnēs ab opere dēductās subsidiō suīs dūxit; eōdemque tempore equitātus eius nostrīs equitibus appropinquābat, et aciēs instrūcta ā nostrīs quī castra occupāverant cernēbātur; omniaque sunt subitō mūtāta. Pompēiāna legiō celeris spē subsidī cōfirmāta ab decumānā portā resistere cōnābātur atque ultrō in nostrōs impetum faciēbat; equitātus Caesaris, quod angustō itinere per aggerēs ascendēbat, receptuī suō timēns initium fugae faciēbat; dextrum cornū, quod erat ā sinistrō sēclūsum, terrōre equitum animadversō, nē intrā mūnitiōnem opprimerētur, eā parte quam prōruerat sēsē recipiēbat, ac plēriūque ex hīs, nē in angustiās inciderent, ex x pedum mūnitiōne sē in fossās praecipitābant, primīsque oppressis reliquī per hōrum corpora salūtem sibi atque exitum pariēbant; sinistrī cornūs militēs cum ex vāllō Pompēium adesse et suōs fugere cernerent, veritī nē angustiis interclūderentur, cum extrā et intus hostem habērent, eōdem quō vēnerant receptū sibi cōsulēbant, omniaque erant tumultūs, timōris, fugae plēna, adeō ut, cum Caesar signiferum quendam manū prēnderet, et cōsistere iubēret, alii, idem iussī, sequī eundem cursum contenderent, alii metū etiam signa dimitterent, neque quisquam omnīnō cōsisteret.

70. His tantis malis haec subsidia succurrēbant, quō minus omnis delērētur exercitus, quod
 10 Pompēius insidiās timēns, crēdō (quod haec praeter spem acciderant eius, quī paulō ante ex castris fugientēs suōs cōspēxerat), mūnitiōnibus appropinquāre aliquamdiū nōn audēbat, equitēsque eius angustiis atque hīs ā Caesaris militibus occupātis ad insequendum tardābantur. Ita par-
 15 vae rēs magnum in utramque partem mōmentum habuērunt. Mūnitiōnēs enim ā castris ad flūmen perductae, expugnātis iam castris Pompēi, propriam expeditamque Caesaris victōriam interpellāvērunt; eadem rēs celeritāte insequentium tardātā nostris salūtem attulit.

20 71. Duōbus hīs ūnius diēi proeliis Caesar dēsiderāvit militēs DCCCCLX et equitēs CC, in quibus Tūticanum Gallum senātōris filium, nōtōs equitēs Rōmānōs C. Fleginātem Placentiā, A. Grānium Puteolis, M. Sacrativirum Capuā, tribūnōs militum et centuriōnēs xxxii — sed 25 hōrum omnium pars magna in fossis mūnitiōnis et flūminis ripis oppressa suōrum terrōre ac fugā sine ūllō vulnere interit —; signaque sunt militāria āmissa xxxii.

Caesar retreats into Thessaly

25 Caesar urges his soldiers not to be disheartened. 73. Caesar ab superiōribus cōsiliīs dēpulsus omnem sibi commūtandam bellī ratiōnem existimāvit. Itaque ūnō tempore praesidiīs omnibus dēductis et oppugnātiōne dīmissā, coāctōque in ūnum locum exercitū cōntiōnem apud milītēs habuit; hortātusque est nē ea quae accidissent graviter ferrent, nēve hīs rēbus terrerentur, multisque secundis proeliis ūnum adversum et id

 15 Locum sē aequum ad dīmicandum dedisse, potitum sē esse hostium castris, expulisse ac superāsse repugnantēs. Sed sive ipsōrum perturbātiō sive error aliquis sive etiam fortūna partam iam praesentemque victōriam interpellāvisset, dandam omnibus operam ut acceptum incommodum virtūte

quendum, necesse erat adire Apollōniam. Sed hīs rēbus tantum temporis tribuit quantum erat properantī necesse; timēns Domitiō, nē adventū Pompēi praeoccupārētur, ad eum omnī celeritatē et studiō incitātus ferēbatur. Tōtius autem rei cōnsilium hīs ratiōnibus explicābat: ut, sī Pompēius eōdem contenderet, abductum illum ā marī, atque ab iīs cōpiis quās Dyrrachī comparāverat frūmentī ac commēātūs abstractum, parī condiōne belli 10 sēcum dēcertāre cōgeret; sī in Italiam trānsiret, coniūctō exercitū cum Domitiō per Īllyricum Italiae subsidiō proficīscerētur; sī Apollōniam Ōricumque oppugnāre et sē omnī maritimā ōrā excludere cōnārētur, obsessō Scīpiōne necessariō illum suis auxiliū ferre cōgeret. Itaque prae-15 missis nūntiis ad Cn. Domitium Caesar scripsit et quid fieri vellet ostendit, praesidiōque Apollōniae cohortium IIII, Lissī I, III Ōricī relictō, quique erant ex vulneribus aegrī dēpositis, per Ēpīrum atque Athamāniam iter facere coepit.

Pompēius quoque dē Caesaris cōnsiliō coniectūrā iūdicāns 20 ad Scīpiōnem properandum sibi existimābat: sī Caesar iter illō habēret, ut subsidium Scīpiōnī ferret; sī ab ōrā maritimā Ōriciāque discēdere nōllet, quod legiōnēs equitātumque ex Italiā spērāret, ipse ut omnibus cōpiis Domitium adgrederētur.

iunctis pristina omnium confirmatur opinio et spes victoriae augetur adeo ut, quicquid intercederet temporis, id morari reditum in Italiam videretur; et, si quando quid Pompeius tardius aut consideratius faceret, unius superesse negotium diei, sed illum delectari imperio et consularibus praetoribusque servorum habere numerum dicerent. Iamque inter se palam de praemiis ac de sacerdotiis contendebant, in annosque consulatum definiiebant, alii domos bonaque eorum qui in castris erant Caesaris petebant; 10 magnaque inter eos in consilio fuit controversia oportere Lucili Hirri, quod is a Pompeio ad Parthos missus esset, proximis comitiis praetoriis absentis rationem haberi, cum eius necessariis fidem implerent Pompei praestaret quod proficiscenti recepisset, ne per eius auctoritatem 15 deceptus videretur; reliqui in labore pari ac periculo ne unus omnem antecederet recusarent.

83. Iam de sacerdotio Caesaris Domitius, Scipio, Spintherque Lentulus cotidianis contentiōibus ad gravissimas verborum contumelias palam descendunt, cum Lentulus 20 aetatis honorem ostentaret, Domitius urbanam gratiam dignitatemque iactaret, Scipio adfinitate Pompei confideret. Postulavit etiam L. Afranium prōditionis exercitus Acutius Rufus apud Pompeium; et L. Domitius in consilio dixit placere sibi bello confecto ternas tabellas dari ad 25 iudicandum iis qui ordinis essent senatorii belloque una cum ipsis interfuissent, sententiasque de singulis ferri qui Romae remansissent quique intra praesidia Pompei fuissent neque operam in re militari praestitissent: unam fore tabellam qua liberandos omni periculo censerent; alteram 30 qua capitis damnarent; tertiam qua pecuniam multarent.

virtūte. Hīc signō datō, “Sequiminī mē,” inquit, “manipulārēs meī quī fuistis, et vestrō imperātōrī quam instituistis operam date. Ūnum hoc proelium superest; quō cōfectō et ille suam dignitātem et nōs nostram libertātem recuperābimus.” Simul respiciēns Caesarem, “Faciam,” inquit, “hodiē, imperātor, ut aut vivō mihi aut mortuō grātiās agās.” Haec cum dixisset, prīmus ex dextrō cornū prōcucurrit, atque eum laetī militēs circiter cxx voluntārii eiusdem centuriae sunt prōsecūtī.

¹⁰ Pompey awaits the attack without charging. 92. Inter duās aciēs tantum erat relictum spatī ut satis esset ad concursum utriusque exercitūs. Sed Pompēius suīs praedixerat ut Caesaris impetum exciperent neque sē locō movērent, aciemque eius distrahī paterentur; idque admonitū C. ¹⁵ Triārī fēcisse dicēbātur, ut prīmus incursus vīsque militum infringerētur aciēsque distenderētur, atque in suīs ordinibus dispositī dispersōs adorirentur; leviusque cāsūra pila spē-rābat in locō retentis militibus quam sī ipsī immissis pilīs occurrissent; simul fore ut duplicatō cursū Caesaris militēs ²⁰ exanimārentur et lassitudine cōnficerentur. Quod nobīs quidem nullā ratiōne factum ā Pompēiō vidētur, proptereā quod est quaedam animī incitātiō atque alacritās nātūrālīter innāta omnibus, quae studiō pugnae incenditur. Hanc nōn reprimere, sed augēre imperātōrēs dēbent; neque frūstrā ²⁵ antiquitus institūtum est ut sīgna undique concinerent clāmōremque ūniversī tollerent; quibus rēbus et hostēs terrēri et suōs incitārī existimāvērunt.

³⁰ The battle. Rout of the Pompeians. 93. Sed nostrī militēs datō signō cum infestīs pilīs prōcucurrissent atque animadvertissent nōn concurrī ā Pompēiānīs, ūsū peritī ac superiōribus pugnis exercitātī suā sponte cursum repressērunt et ad medium ferē spatium cōstitērunt, nē cōsūmptis vīribus appropinquārent ; parvōque intermissō temporis spatiō ac rūsus renovātō cursū pīla mīsērunt celeriterque, ut

 5 erat praeceptum ā Caesare, gladiōs strīnxērunt. Neque vērō Pompēiānī huic rei dēfuērunt. Nam et pīla missa excēpērunt et impetum legiōnum tulērunt et ōrdinēs suōs cōservārunt pīlisque missīs ad gladiōs rediērunt. Eōdem tempore equitēs ab sinistrō Pompēi cornū, ut erat imperā-
 10 tum, ūniversī prōcucurrērunt, omnisque multitudō sagittāriōrum sē profūdit ; quōrum impetum noster equitātus nōn tulit, sed paulātim locō mōtus cessit : equitēsque Pompēi hōc ācrius Instāre et sē turmātim explicāre aciemque nostram ā latere apertō circumīre coepērunt. Quod ubi Caesar
 15 animadvertit, quārtae aciēi, quam Instituerat VIII cohortium numerō, dedit sīgnum. Illae celeriter prōcucurrērunt infestisque sīgnis tantā vī in Pompēi equitēs impetum fēcērunt ut eōrum nēmō cōsisteret, omnēsque conversī nōn sōlum locō cēderent, sed prōtinus incitātī fugā 'montēs 20 altissimōs peterent. Quibus summōtis omnēs sagittārii funditōrēsque dēstitūtī suō praesidiō interfectī sunt. Eōdem impetū cohortēs sinistrum cornū, pugnantibus etiam tum ac resistantibus in aciē Pompēiānis, circumiērunt eōsque ā tergō sunt adortae.

25 94. Eōdem tempore tertiam aciem Caesar, quae quiēta fuerat et sē ad id tempus locō tenuerat, prōcurrere iussit. Ita cum recentēs atque integrī dēfessīs successissent, aliī autem ā tergō adorirentur, sustinēre Pompēiānī nōn potuerunt atque ūniversī terga vertērunt. Neque vērō Caesarem quārtā aciē conlocātae essent initium victōriae orerētur, ut ipse in cohortandis militibus prōnūntiāverat. Ab hīs enim primum equitātus est pulsus, ab isdem facta caedēs sagittariōrum ac funditorum, ab isdem aciēs Pompēiāna ā sinistra parte circumita atque initium fugae factum. Sed Pompēius ut equitātum suum pulsum vidit atque eam partem cui maximē cōfidēbat perterritam animadvertit, aliis quoque diffusus aciē excessit prōtinusque sē in castra equo contulit, et iis centuriōnibus quōs in statione ad praetōriam portam posuerat clārē, ut milites exaudirent, “Tuēminī,” inquit, “castra et dēfendite diligenter, sī quid dūrius acciderit. Ego reliquās portās circumeō et castrōrum praesidia cōfirmō.” Haec cum dixisset, sē in praetōrium contulit summae rei diffidēs et tamen ēventum expectāns.
 30 fefellit quīn ab iīs cohortibus quae contrā equitātum in

¹⁵ Pompey's camp is captured. 95. Caesar Pompēiānis ex fugā intrā vāllum compulsis nullum spatium perterritis dari oportere existimāns milites cohortātus est ut beneficiō fortunae ūterentur castraque oppugnarent. Quī, etsi magnō aestū (nam ad meridiem rēs erat prōducta), tamen ad omnem labōrem animō parātī imperiō pārūerunt. Castra ā cohortibus quae ibi praesidiō erant relictāe industriē dēfendēbantur, multō etiam ācrius ā Thrācibus barbarisque auxiliis. Nam quī ex aciē refūgerant milites, et animō perterriti et lassitudīne cōfecti, dīmissis plēriūque armis signisque militāribus magis dē reliquā fugā quam dē castrōrum dēfensiōne cōgitābant. Neque vērō diūtius quī in vāllō cōstitēbant multitudinē tēlōrum sustinēre potuerunt, sed cōfecti vulneribus locum reliquērunt, prōtinusque omnēs ducibus ūsī centuriōnibus tribūnisque militum in altissimōs montēs, quī ad castra pertinēbant, cōnfūgerunt.

96. In castris Pompēi vidēre licuit trichilās *Appearance of the camp. At hī miserrimō ac patientissimō exercitū Caesaris lūxuriam obiciēbant, cui saepe omnia ad 10 necessārium ūsum dēfuissent. Pompēius, cum iam intrā vāllum nostrī versārentur, equum nactus dētractis insignibus imperātōriīs decumānā portā sē ex castris ēiēcit prōtinusque equō citātō Lārisam contendit. Neque ibi cōnstitit, sed eādē celeritāte paucōs suōs ex fugā nactus, nocturnō 15 itinere nōn intermissō, comitātū equitum xxx ad mare pervēnit nāvemque frūmentāriam cōnscendit, saepe, ut dicēbātur, querēns tantum sē opīniōnem fefellisse ut, ā quō genere hominum victōriam spērāsset, ab eō initiō fugae factō paene prōditus vidērētur.

NOTES

BOOK FIRST

Campaign of 58 B.C. — While Caesar was still at Rome making preparations to leave for his province, in March, 58 B.C., news came of the intention of the Helvetii, a Celtic people occupying the modern Switzerland, to migrate at once with all their possessions to western Gaul. It was important for the welfare of Rome and of Italy to prevent this plan; for not only would the Roman province (Provincia, see Introd. § 8) be endangered both by the passage through it of a warlike people, who were, moreover, hereditary foes of Rome, and by their settlement not far from its western border; but, furthermore, if Helvetia should be occupied by the Germans, who had already made frequent forays into the country and had entered Gaul in large numbers, there was no doubt that they would next cross the Alps and ravage Italy. Consequently Caesar hastened without delay to Geneva; but while he succeeded in thwarting the Helvetian project of marching through the Roman province, he could not, with the force at his command, prevent a passage through the country of the Sequani. He accordingly obtained additional troops from Cisalpine Gaul (northern Italy) and set out in pursuit of the enemy. In two battles he completely defeated them, and compelled the survivors, less than a third of the number who had marched forth so confidently, to return to their homes.

[Next to be dealt with were the Germans, who, at the invitation of the Sequani, had come into Gaul three years before under Ariovistus, and had humbled the Haedui, a people enjoying the friendship of the Romans. Exaggerated stories were current of the size and prowess of the Germans; and Caesar's soldiers, becoming frightened, refused to enter on a campaign against them. He shamed his men into submission, however, by declaring that if necessary he would go alone attended only by the trusty tenth legion. In a single battle he almost annihilated the enemy, but Ariovistus and a few of his followers escaped across the Rhine.]

PAGE 51, LINE 1. CHAPTER 1. Gallia: Transalpine Gaul exclusive of the Roman province (Provincia, see Introd. § 8).—est . . . divisa: a common use of the perf. pass. to denote a present state ('is divided') resulting from the action of the perfect ('has been divided')¹; dividitur would denote a present action ('is being divided').—omnis: 'as a whole.'—unam: partem was as easily supplied in thought by the Roman as 'part' is by us in the translation.

51, 2. Belgae: their territory included northeastern France as well as modern Belgium. Form the habit at the outset of consulting the map (see frontispiece) for all places and peoples mentioned in the text.—aliam: 'another,' not 'a second,' which would be alteram. See both words in the Vocab.—qui = ii qui; ii is a third subject of incolunt. The antecedent of a rel. pron. is often omitted if it can be readily understood from the context.² In translating unam . . . qui, the Latin order of thought may be preserved by making the accusatives the subjects, 'one is inhabited by the Belgae, another by the Aquitani, the third by those who,' etc.—lingua: abl. of means.³

51, 3. Celtae: the Celts formed an important division of the Aryan or Indo-European group of nations. The Britons and North Italians were Celts, as are the Irish and Highland Scotch of to-day. The English belong to the Teutonic or Germanic division of the Indo-European family.—lingua: abl. of specification.⁴ The Celts spoke Celtic, the Belgae a corruption of Celtic and German, while among the Aquitanians, who were not of the Indo-European family, some tribes probably spoke Iberian, and some Basque. This latter language still survives in northwestern Spain.

51, 4. inter se: 'from each other.'⁵ Latin has no reciprocal pronoun ('each other, one another'), but expresses the reciprocal idea most commonly by inter with the personal pronouns.—Gallos: this word, as its position at the beginning of the sentence shows,¹ is more important in the thought than Garumna. Preserve this emphasis in translation by making it the subject; see on qui, l. 2. — ab Aquitanis . . . a Belgis: observe that before vowels ab is always used, while before consonants a is usual.

51, 5. Garumna flumen: compare this order with flumen Rhenum in l. 18, and with the omission of flumen with Matrona and Sequana. English has the same variety of usage, as, 'the Ohio River, the River Rhine or the Rhine, the Potomac.' — dividit: the verb is singular² because the two rivers form one continuous boundary.

51, 6. Horum: partit. gen. with a superlative.³ This word stands first in its sentence, not for emphasis, but to make clear the connection of the thought with the preceding sentences.⁴

51, 7. cultu: 'civilization,' referring to outward characteristics, dress, deportment, etc. — humanitate, 'refinement,' applying to the mind or feelings. — Doubtless the province owed some of its civilization to the Romans, who had governed it since 120 B.C.; but probably more was due to the influence of Marseilles (Massilia), which had been founded by Greek colonists about 600 B.C., and had for centuries been an important commercial center. It was not subject to Rome, but had been a faithful ally for two hundred years. — minime . . . saepe: 'very seldom.'

51, 8. mercatores: Massiliot traders.

51, 9. ad effeminandos animos pertinent: 'tend to weaken character,'⁵ lit., 'to the character to-be-weakened'; ad belongs with animos, which is limited by the gerundive. The principal import was wine, of which the natives were so passionately fond that for a jar of it they would even trade a child.

51, 10. quibuscum: cum always follows a rel. in Caesar. In other writers it sometimes precedes.⁶

51, 11. Qua: 'this';⁷ a rel., equivalent to a dem., and never to be translated literally, is very frequent at the beginning of a sentence, being due to the tendency of Latin to preserve closely the connection of the thought. See on horum, l. 6. — causa: i.e. owing to the proximity to Germany. — Helvetii: a people of Celtic blood dwelling in what is now Switzerland.

51, 12. reliquos: compare in the Vocab. the difference in meaning of alius, ceteri, reliquus. — virtute: 'bravery,' see Vocab. For the abl., see on lingua, l. 3.

51, 13. proeliis: 'skirmishes,' as is implied by cotidianis. The abl. denotes manner.¹ — cum . . . gerunt: this clause does not define the time of the main verb contendunt, but simply adds a fact; cum = et tum (cf. qui = et is, etc.). — suis: observe the difference in meaning between suis and eorum. These words are emphasized by their contrast, hence they precede their substantives.² — finibus: abl. of separation.³

51, 15. Eorum: refers not to the Helvetii, but to the peoples mentioned in l. 2 f. Latin frequently names the people where English speaks of the country. — quam: obj. of obtinere, which is a main verb of indir. disc. depending on dictum est.⁴ When the verb of saying or thinking is passive and impersonal, its subject is the infinitive (with its subject accusative if it has one, here Gallos) of the indirect quotation.⁵ — obtinere: 'occupy,' cf. in the Vocab. with occupo. Be cautious about translating a Latin word by the corresponding English word.

51, 16. a: 'at'; the Latin point of view is often that of the place from which, where the English is that of the place at which.⁶ The idea is the same in ab ('on the side of') Sequanis, l. 17, and ab . . . finibus, l. 19.

51, 18. vergit: observe on the map the direction of the rivers.

51, 19. extremis: 'farthest,' from the province. — Galliae: the district just described, not Gallia omnis (l. 1).

52, 1. spectant in, etc.: 'lie towards the northeast.' This statement, made with reference to the province, is no more exact than the similar statement about Aquitania in l. 4 f. We must remember that Caesar had no such accurate maps at his disposal as we have to-day.

52, 4. ad Hispaniam: 'near,' etc., the regular meaning with verbs of rest. — spectat inter: like spectant in above.

52, 7. CHAPTER 2. M.: = Marco. Always read and translate an abbreviation in Latin by the word for which it stands, and in reading observe carefully what case is required. In the designation of dates by the names of consuls no connective is used.

52, 8. consulibus: abl. abs.¹ with the proper names, 'in the consulship of,' = 61 B.C. The year was usually expressed in this way, or was reckoned from the assumed date (753 B.C.) of the founding of Rome. — regni: obj. gen. — cupiditate: abl. of cause.²

52, 9. nobilitatis: a collective abstract for concrete; so Eng. 'nobility' for 'nobles.' — civitati: see on nobilitatis. Persuadeo takes an indir. obj.³ of the person persuaded; while the dir. obj. is either that which he is persuaded to do, expressed by a substantive clause of purpose with ut or ne,⁴ here ut . . . exirent, or that which he is persuaded is a fact, expressed by a clause of indir. disc.,⁵ here perfacile esse, or by a neuter pronoun, as id . . . persuasit in l. 11 f. In translation introduce the substantive clause by 'to,' the indir. disc. by 'that,' 'he persuaded the nation to emigrate . . . : that it was perfectly easy,' etc.

52, 10. cum omnibus copiis: 'bag and baggage.' — exirent: the imperf. is used, rather than the pres., because the action is past,⁶ depending on the perf. persuasit; and since purpose clauses, from their very nature, express action not completed at the time of the main act, the imperf. (its name signifies incompletion) is used rather than the plpf., which denotes action completed in the past. The plural is used because civitati implies civibus.⁷ — perfacile: predicate with esse, agreeing⁸ with the subject potiri.

52, 11. omnibus: essential complement or indir. obj. of an intr. compound verb.⁹ — praestarent: subj. with causal cum.¹⁰ The tense (representing a pres. subj. of dir. disc.) depends on persuasit (see on exirent, l. 10), the subordinate verbs of a quotation being thrown into the past by a past introductory verb. Cf. Eng. 'he says that he is going if he can,' but 'he said that he was going if he could.' Observe, however, that while in Eng. the main verb of a quotation also follows the sequence of the introductory verb ('says that he is, said that he was'), the Latin infin. is not thus changed, but remains in its original tense (perfacile esse representing perfacile est). — imperio: abl. of means,¹ serving as obj. of potiri. — Id: 'of this,' dir. obj. of persuasit, see on civitati, l. 9. For its position, see on horum, 51, 6.

52, 12. hoc (lit., 'on this account'²) facilius . . . quod: 'more easily from the fact that'; the causal clause is in apposition with hoc. The indic. is used because Caesar states this as his own reason. — undique: 'on (lit., 'from') all sides'; see on a, 51, 16, and cf. una ex parte, 'on one side.'

52, 14. altera: not 'another'; see on aliam, 51, 2.

52, 17. nostram: cf. nostra, 51, 3. — His rebus fiebat: 'the result of this was' (lit., 'because of these things it was being brought about'). Note the imperfects in the rest of this chapter, describing a state of things.

52, 18. ut . . . vagarentur: substantive clause of result, subject of fiebat.³ — minus late: 'not as widely as they desired.' — finitimis: essential complement or indir. obj. of a transitive compound verb⁴; cf. omnibus, l. 11.

52, 19. qua ex parte: 'and on this point.' — homines, etc.: 'being men fond of warfare'; in predicate apposition with the subject. — bellandi: obj. gen. with an adj. of desire.⁵

52, 20. Pro multitudine hominum: 'for (= in proportion to) their great population,' given as 263,000, see 71, 7. The Swiss, in a somewhat larger territory, number about 3,000,000; but they are a peaceable nation.

52, 21. belli, etc.: 'for bravery in war.' Latin sometimes uses two nouns with a conj. instead of one noun limited by the other; this is called hendiadys. The gens. are subjective,¹ being the source of the renown (gloria).

52, 22. millia passuum: 'miles.' The sing. 'mile' is mille passus = 4854½ Eng. feet, thus being about ¾ of an Eng. mile (5280 ft.). Passuum is partit. gen.² — CCXL: ducenta quadraginta. Always use the Latin words in reading numerals.

52, 23. CLXXX: centum octoginta. As this dimension is about a hundred miles too large, it is probable that Caesar wrote LXXX, and that the reading of the Mss. is due to a scribe's mistake, arising perhaps from the influence of the previous number.

52, 24. CHAPTER 3. auctoritate: 'influence,' not 'authority.'

52, 25. ea quae: 'such things as,' a meaning regularly followed by the subj. of characteristic. — proficiscendum: compare this verbal substantive (the gerund) with the verbal adjective (the gerundive) effeminandos in 51, 9. Observe that the gerund has no object, while the gerundive agrees with its apparent object.³ — pertinerent: subj. in a rel. sentence of characteristic,⁴ regularly introduced by the idea 'such as, of a sort that,' etc. Cf. ea quae . . . pertinent, 51, 8 f., 'things which tend,' not 'of a sort that tend.' — comparare, etc.: complementary infin.,⁵ obj. of constituerunt.

52, 26. quam maximum: 'the greatest possible.'⁶

52, 27. ut . . . suppeteret: pure purpose,⁷ not an obj. clause like ut . . . exirent, l. 9 f.

53, 3. sibi: dat. of interest or reference⁸ with satis esse. — in: with acc. of temporal expressions = 'for.'

53, 4. lege: 'a resolution,' passed in a public assembly. — confirmant: 'fix,' pres. of vivid narration or hist. pres.⁹

53, 5. dux: predicate nom.¹⁰ — Is: with slight emphasis, 'this man.' Unless the subject changes, it is usually not expressed except for emphasis.

53, 6. civitates: states, or clans, of Gaul whose aid he wished to gain. — Observe the annalistic (a subdivision of historical) presents,¹ beginning with deligitur and recurring throughout this chapter. They give, as it were, a memorandum of the efforts and success of Orgetorix.

53, 8. obtinerat: see on obtinere, 51, 15.

53, 9. amicus: The Roman senate sometimes voted this honor to rulers as a reward for past services or as an incentive to future favors. — ut . . . occuparet: cf. ut . . . exirent, 52, 9 f., and see note on civitati, ib. The sequence² depends on persuadet, the action of which is past, although stated as present. — regnum: 'the power of a king.' Monarchy had been abolished in most of the Gallic states.

53, 10. ante: 'at an earlier time'; cf. the force of the tense in obtinerat, implying that he no longer possessed it. — habuerit: Caesar intimates by the use of the subjunctive that the clause quod . . . habuerit is indirectly quoted from the actual instructions of Orgetorix to Casticus. The force of the quotation can be given in translation thus, 'which, as he said, his father had held.' Such a quotation, merely indicated by the subjunctive, and not dependent on a formal verb of saying, may be called implied, or informal, indirect discourse.³ The pluperfect tense might be expected, in secondary sequence with occuparet, but the present and perfect subjunctive are sometimes used in secondary sequence to preserve the tense (not the mood) of the direct statement.⁴

53, 11. qui: refers, not as usual to the person last named, but to the more prominent one. — principatum: 'chief prominence,' not implying official authority. Officially the Haeduan state was in alliance with Rome, but at this time, owing to the failure of Rome to aid the Haeduan against their oppressors, the anti-Roman party, headed by Dumnorix, was predominant. Diviciacus was a leader of the party favorable to Rome, and was one of Caesar's most trusted allies. Three years before, he had been in Rome, and Cicero implies in his work On Divination (I, 41, 90) that he had conversed with him about Gallic religious customs.

53, 12. plebi (dat. with the adj.⁵) acceptus: 'popular with the masses.'

53, 14. Perfacile . . . esse . . . perficere: cf. perfacile esse . . . potiri, 52, 10 f. — factu: supine,¹ best omitted here in translation. — illius probat: 'he shows them.'

53, 16. obtenturus esset: 'he was intending to be in possession of';² for the sequence, dependent on probat (not on *esse*³), cf. occuparet, l. 10. — esse: dependent on the idea of saying implied in probat; 'adding that,' etc. — dubium: predicate adj., the subject of esse being the clause quin . . . possent. — Galliae: partit. gen.⁴ with plurimum.

53, 17. possent: the mood depends on quin,⁵ the tense (possint in the direct form) on probat.

53, 18. regna: 'the power of kings'; pl., referring to a regnum in each state. — conciliaturum: the fut. infin. often omits esse.

53, 19. fidem et ius iurandum: 'their promise and oath.' — regno occupato: abl. abs. expressing time,⁶ 'after seizing royal power.' — per . . . populos: limits potiri, and refers to the states to which these three plotters belonged.

53, 20. firmissimos: 'most stable.' — Galliae: the only instance in Caesar of a gen. with potiri;⁷ for the usual construction, see imperio, 52, 11.

53, 22. CHAPTER 4. res: 'plot'; vary the translation of res according to the context.

53, 24. damnatum, etc.: 'if convicted, the punishment was to befall him of being burned with fire.' Damnatum, used with conditional force,⁹ limits an implied cum, the obj. of sequi, but an unemphasized pron. limited by an adj. or part. is commonly omitted. Poenam is the subject of sequi, and poenam sequi is the subject of oportebat.¹ Ut . . . cremaretur is a subst. clause of result in apposition with poenam.²

53, 25. igni: Caesar appears not to have used igne.³ Burning was not an uncommon punishment among the Gauls; see 139, 6. — Die: abl. of time when; note the gender.⁴ — causae: obj. gen. with dictionis, which itself is poss. gen. with die.

53, 26. familiam: 'slaves.' — ad . . . decem: this phrase is in apposition with familiam, ad being an adv. — hominum: for the gen., see note on millia passuum, 52, 22.

53, 27. clientes: these were free supporters, but the obaerati had been enslaved for debt; cf. 136, 27 ff.

53, 28. eodem: adv.

53, 29. ne . . . eripuit: 'he escaped standing trial';⁵ by the crowd of retainers he overawed the court. — Cum . . . conaretur: 'when . . . was endeavoring'; observe carefully this very common construction.⁶ With cum, 'when,' the imperf. and plpf. subj. describe subordinate circumstances under which a past main action occurred. The imperf. represents the subordinate circumstance as going on, the plpf. as completed, at the time of the main action.

53, 30. ius: the right of punishing traitors.

54, 2. neque abest suspicio: 'and there is not wanting ground for believing.' As this is equivalent to 'and there is not much doubt,' the dependent clause (appositive, cf. ut igni cremaretur, 53, 25) is introduced by quin; see on possent, 53, 17.

54, 3. ipse: in Latin idiom the intensive pron. emphasizes the subject, in English the object. — consciverit: note the tense, representing the suicide as complete at the time of the present verb abest.⁷

54, 4. CHAPTER 5. nihilo: abl. of the amount of difference.⁸ — id . . . facere: 'to carry out the resolution which they had formed.'

expressing result.¹ The reasons for migrating, given in 52, 12-23, were just as strong now as before the death of Orgetorix. Perhaps, too, the Helvetii were getting the worst of it in their constant conflicts with the Germans; see 51, 12 f.

54, 6. Ubi: 'when,' commonly takes the perf. indic.;² cf. cum . . . conaretur, 53, 29 f., and see note. — rem: 'move.'

54, 7. numero: abl. of specification; see on lingua, 51, 3. — ad: cf. ad . . . millia, 53, 26 f. — vicos: 'villages,' without fortifications.

54, 10. ad . . . subeunda: see on proficiscendum, 52, 25.

54, 11. essent: cf. the sequence with that of exant, l. 5, the latter depending on the tense of conantur, a pres. of vivid narration (hist. pres.), and not on the actual time of its action, which is past. See on ut . . . occuparet, 53, 9. — trium mensum: gen. of quality,⁴ 'a three months' supply of.' — sibi quemque: forms of the pers. or poss. reflexive used with quisque regularly precede it.⁵

54, 12. domo:⁶ cf. domum, l. 9. — Rauracis, etc.: northern neighbors of the Helvetii.

54, 13. uti: old form of ut, not to be confused with the infin. of utor. — usi and exustis: in translation coördinate these participles with proficiscantur, 'to adopt . . . , to burn up . . . , and to set out' Latin uses subordination much more than English. — consilio: see on imperio, 52, 11.

54, 14. exustis: parallel with usi, both participles by their tense expressing action prior to that of the principal verb proficiscantur; but,

54, 16. oppugnarent: a contracted form.³ — receptos, etc.: with Boios, 'the Boii . . . they take into their own number (ad se) and adopt as their (sibi) allies.' — sibi: dat. of interest or reference.⁴

54, 18. CHAPTER 6. itineribus: Caesar frequently repeats the antecedent with the relative;⁵ it may be omitted in translation.

54, 22. prohibere: 'prevent a passage.' — possent: pure result.⁸ — alterum: this route presented fewer physical difficulties, but it necessitated crossing the Rhone and marching through the territory of the Allobroges, who were included in the Roman Province.

54, 25. nuper: the Allobroges had been made subject to Rome in 121 B.C. A revolt in 61–60 B.C. led to their complete subjugation.

54, 26. is: see on is, 53, 5. — locis: locative abl.⁹ — vado: 'by ford.'¹⁰ — transitur: 'can be crossed,' the potential use of the verb. At present this part of the Rhone is fordable in but one place.

eyes. Cf. the modern use of 'town' by people living near large cities, as, 'I've been in town.'—Caesar was outside the city (as is shown by ab, not ex), for as proconsul (see Introd. § 8), with full military powers, he could not legally enter Rome. This law was a safeguard against usurpation of tyranny by a military commander.

55, 9. quam maximis potest: 'by the longest possible'; cf. quam maximum, 52, 26, without potest.—itineribus: abl. of manner.—ulteriorem: of Transalpine Gaul, to distinguish it from Gallia citerior or Cisalpinga, in the plain of the Po.

55, 10. ad: note this use with the name of a town.¹—pervenit: Plutarch, Life of Caesar, ch. 17, says that he arrived on the eighth day. The rapidity of this first move of Caesar in his Gallic campaigns is thoroughly characteristic of him; see Introd. § 16.

55, 11. imperat: 'makes requisition for,' with dir. obj. of what is required, and indir. obj. of that on which the demand is made.

55, 12. legio: the tenth, which became Caesar's favorite corps. On the Roman legion, see Introd. § 27.

55, 13. rescindi: with its subject pontem it forms the obj. of iubet.² Most verbs of ordering take the subjunctive.

55, 14. Ubi: see on ubi, 54, 6.

55, 15. nobilissimos: appositive to legatōs.

55, 17. qui: the antecedent is legatos, the clause cuius . . . obtinebant being parenthetical.—dicerent: 'to say,' rel. clause of purpose, like convenient, l. 5;—sibi (possessor³) esse in animo, etc.: 'that they proposed to march,' lit. 'that to march was to them in mind'; facere is subject of esse.

55, 19. nullum: somewhat emphasized, not by virtue of being at the end of the clause, which is ordinarily not a place of emphasis in the Latin sentence, but partly owing to its separation from iter, and partly because it is unusual to have an adj. at the end of a sentence.⁴ Its unusual position gives it prominence, whereas a verb at the end is not at all emphasized because that is its commonest place.—rogare: sc. se as subject; the purpose clause ut . . . liceat is the obj.⁵

55, 20. voluntate: 'with his approval,' specification.¹—liceat: not changed in mood or tense² from its direct form; but haberent is subj. merely because it is in a subordinate clause of an indir. quotation, and its tense follows the sequence of dicerent.³ In translating a passage of shifting sequence do not imitate the change. Here make rogare and liceat conform to esse and haberent, 'they asked that they might be permitted'; not 'they ask that they may be permitted.' The actual words of the envoys were: Nobis est in animo . . . habemus nullum; rogamus ut tua voluntate id nobis facere liceat.—memoria (abl. of means) tenebat: takes indir. disc. like a verb of knowing.

55, 22. Helvetiis: i.e. the Tigurini, one of the four cantons of the Helvetians. This disaster occurred in 107 B.C.—sub iugum: the yoke consisted of two spears set in the ground and a third fastened across them at the tops. To be sent under the yoke was the greatest humiliation a Roman soldier could suffer. On this occasion the officer who signed the degrading terms of capitulation was convicted of treason by the home government.—concedendum: sc. esse; so with occisum, etc., just before. The construction is impers., 'did not think concession should be made' ('it should be conceded').

55, 23. animo: abl. of quality used attributively; cf. animo, l. 1.—data facultate: abl. abs., expressing a condition,⁴ 'if an opportunity should be given.'

55, 24. faciundi: gerundives of the third and fourth conjugations often end in -undus.⁵—iniuria: stronger than 'injury.'

55, 26. dum: 'until,' with the subj. expressing purpose,⁶ 'until the men should assemble.'

55, 27. diem: 'time.'

55, 28. vellent: subj. for the same reason as haberent, l. 19; the tense depends on reverterentur, which itself depends on respondit.—reverterentur: for an imperative⁷ of the original statement, which was, Diem ad deliberandum sumam; si quid vultis, ad Idus Apriles reverterimini.

56, 1. CHAPTER 8. legione, militibus: abl. of instrument.

56, 5. millia: acc. of extent of space.—XVIII: to be read undeviginti; this is the distance, following the windings of the river, from Geneva to the Pas de l'Écluse: see on unum, 54, 19.—murum . . . fossamque: the defenses of Caesar were on the left (south) bank of the Rhone, where traces of them have been found. Only five places, aggregating some three miles in length, required artificial fortification. Elsewhere the abruptness and height of the bank made it hopeless for the Helvetian wagon trains to attempt a passage. At these five places the gentler slope was cut down from the top so as to form a nearly perpendicular wall sixteen feet high, and the dirt being thrown down the bank left a ditch at the foot of the wall. It is estimated that not over three or four days were required for this work.—pedum: gen. of quality limiting murum; cf. mensum, 54, 11.

56, 6. praesidia: 'garrisons,' stationed in the forts (castella), which were built near the places liable to be attacked.

56, 7. quo, etc.: 'that the more easily.'¹—se invito: 'against his will,' abl. abs.; se is indir. reflexive.²

56, 8. conarentur: subj. of attraction³; its sequence is due to posset, which depends on annalistic (hist.) presents.⁴

56, 9. dies: note the gender; see on die, 53, 25.

56, 10. negat se . . . posse: 'said that he could not' (not 'denied that he could').—more: abl. of cause, 'owing to,' etc.

56, 12. conentur: do not preserve the primary sequence⁴ in translation, 'if they attempted (not 'attempt') . . . he would (not 'will') prevent' (dir. disc., si . . . conabimini, prohibebo).—ea spe delecti: 'disappointed in (lit., 'cast down from') that hope.'⁵

56, 15. si . . . possent: indir. question⁶ depending on conati, which, though a participle, may be translated as a finite verb, 'tried to see if they could.' Begin the next clause with 'but.'

56, 16. operis munitione: 'by the strength (lit., 'defending') of the works.'

56, 17. conatu: for the constr., cf. spe, l. 12.

56, 19. Sequanis invitis: used like data facultate, 55, 23.—angustias: see 54, 19.

56, 20. His: for its position, see on horum, 51, 6.—sua sponte: 'by themselves.'

57, 2. plurimum poterat: cf. plurimum possent, 53, 16 f.

57, 4. filiam, etc.: see 53, 13.

57, 5. novis rebus: 'revolution,' essential complement or indir. obj. of an intr. verb.⁴

57, 6. beneficio: abl. of cause.

57, 7. rem: 'mission.'

57, 8. impetrat ut . . . patiantur: 'obtains permission for the Helvetii to go,' etc. (lit., 'obtains that they permit,' etc.); the dir. obj. of impetrat is the clause with ut.⁵ So uti . . . dent is the obj. of perficit.

57, 9. obsides: obj. of dent; note its emphatic position, see on Gallos, 51, 4.

57, 10. Sequani, Helvetii: in apposition with the subject of dent.

57, 11. ne . . . prohibeant, ut . . . transeant: pure purpose, depending on dent. With the sequence after the annalistic presents, l. 9 ff., cf. 56, 8.—itinere: abl. of separation.

57, 15. CHAPTER 10. Helvetiis . . . animo: cf. sibi esse in animo, 55, 17 f.

57, 18. non longe: about 125 miles, no great distance for a migratory and warlike people to travel, especially when the intervening country was open and easily crossed. To be sure Helvetia was much nearer the province, but the mountains and the Rhone, with its steep banks, made the eastern part of the Roman territory more secure.—Tolosatum: the modern Toulouse preserves the name of the ancient city

Tolosa; so Narbonne comes from Narbo, Marseilles from Massilia. But more commonly it is an old tribal name that is preserved in a modern town name, as Parisii in Paris, Santones in Saintes (and in the name of the old province Saintonge), Carnutes in Chartres, etc.

57, 19. quae civitas: not 'which state,' but 'a state which,' or, beginning a new sentence, 'This state.'

57, 20. si fieret: indir. disc., depending on the secondary tense intellegebat.¹ The condition is fut., as the apodosis (fut. infin. futurum) shows, but the context alone makes it clear² that it is of the form which states the future supposition distinctly and vividly, and so had in the dir. disc. the fut. indic.³

57, 22. ut . . . haberet: subst. clause of result, subject of futurum [esse].⁴ The subject of haberet is implied from provinciae. The tense is due to intellegebat,⁵ being habeat in Caesar's original thought.

57, 23. locis: see on locis, 54, 26.

57, 25. munitioni: essential complement or indir. obj. of a transitive cpd. verb.⁶—Labienum: Caesar's most capable lieutenant throughout the Gallic War. At the outbreak of the Civil War he joined Pompey. — legatum: see Introd. § 32.

57, 26. Italiam: = Cisalpine Gaul, between the Rubicon and the Alps, which, after the subjection of the Celts (222 B.C.), had been rapidly Romanized, and was already considered a part of Italy, although not formally annexed until 43 B.C.

57, 27. circum: the soldiers, in accordance with Roman custom, were quartered for the winter near, not within, the city. — Aquileiam: an important military and commercial center at the head of the Adriatic. It was destroyed by the Huns under Attila in 452 A.D., the very year in which Venice was founded by fugitives who were seeking refuge from the barbarians.

57, 29. per Alpes: he apparently took the Mt. Genève pass.

58, 3. extremum: sc. oppidum.

58, 6. trans Rhodanum: Caesar crossed the Rhone above its junction with the Saône (Arar), and consequently was east of the Saône and north of the Rhone. The Segusiavi occupied territory on both sides of the Saône. It is estimated that Caesar had taken some fifty or sixty days for his journey to Italy. He now had an army of six legions, aggregating probably not far from 25,000 men (see Intro. § 27), and an unknown number of provincial soldiers (55, 10 f.).

58, 7. CHAPTER 11. angustias: the narrow pass of the Écluse (54, 19).

58, 8. in Haeduum fines: not all of the Helvetii had yet crossed the Saône (Arar) and entered the Haeduan country, for a fourth part of them are cut to pieces on the east bank (l. 30 ff.). While their long emigrant train, plundering as it advanced, had gone some 100 miles, Caesar had been to the head of the Adriatic and back, and had levied two new legions in the meantime.

58, 11. possent: introduced by causal cum.²

In translation supply 'saying' or a similar word.—Ita se . . . de populo . . . meritos esse: 'that they have served the people so well.' The Haedui had been allies of Rome since about 123 B.C., and they also claimed kinship with the Romans.

58, 14. nostris: with exercitus.—vastari . . . debuerint: 'ought not to have been ravaged.'⁴

58, 15. debuerint: result clauses often take the perf.,⁵ even in violation of sequence, to emphasize the result as an accomplished fact. With meritos esse a secondary sequence would be regular.⁶ Of the 58, 17. depopulatis: perf. participles of deponent verbs are sometimes used passively.¹ Observe that the perf. denotes an action complete at the time of prohibere.

58, 18. Allobroges: they were subjects of Rome. The Ambarri were allies of the Haedui and therefore friendly to Rome. On these three peoples the Helvetii doubtless inflicted as much injury as they could. They appear to have observed faithfully their agreement with the Sequani (57, 12).

58, 20. sibi: possessor. — solum: note the ð.

58, 27. Id: not emphatic, but it serves to connect the thought closely with the previous sentence; cf. his, 56, 20.

58, 28. transibant: probably at a point near Trévoux, about half-way from the junction with the Rhone to Mâcon (Matisco). Note the imperf. tense; the crossing took twenty days (59, 21). — Ubi: see on 54, 6.

58, 29. tres partes: 'three fourths': so quattuor partes, 'four fifths,' etc. — partes, flumen: objs. of a transitive verb compounded with trans, flumen belonging closely with the prep.⁷

old man. If the Helvetii had desired to make terms with Caesar, they would hardly have sent this former conqueror of the Romans, puffed up as he was by his ancient victory.

59, 24. Si, etc.: Divico's speech is indirectly quoted. — Si . . . faceret . . . ituros: same constr. as si fieret . . . futurum, 57, 20.

59, 25. pacem: the contrast between the policies of peace and of war is emphasized by the position of pacem and bello.

59, 26. partem: sc. Galliae; they of course had no thought of returning home after having emigrated in spite of Caesar.

59, 27. constituisset: 'should settle'; the idea is evidently fut., — for Caesar has not yet settled the Helvetii anywhere, — and the plpf. represents a completed act in a secondary sequence; consequently the dir. disc. had fut. perf. indic.¹ — perseveraret: like faceret, l. 25.

59, 28. reminisceretur: 'let him (or 'he had better') recall to mind'; for imper.² reminiscere of dir. disc. — incommodi: obj. of a verb of remembering.³

59, 29. Quod . . . adortus esset: 'as to his having attacked'; for quod . . . adortus es of the actual speech.⁴

59, 30. transissent: in the perf. system of eo, wherever ii precedes s, contracted forms⁵ were preferred; forms with v were generally avoided. The subj. is due merely to subordination in indir. disc.

60, 1. possent: like intellegerent, 59, 22, hence not changed in indir. disc.; and it would not change even if the introductory verb egit were² a primary tense. — ne . . . tribueret: differs from reminisceretur, 59, 28, only in being negative; noli tribuere was the dir. form.⁶

60, 2. magnopere . . . tribueret: 'ascribe too much,' etc.

60, 3. ut . . . contenderent: pure result⁷ of ita didicisse. — virtute, dolo, etc.: means. 'That they had learned such doctrines (ita) from their fathers and ancestors that they contended by means of valor more than they relied on trickery or ambushes.'

60, 4. Quare, etc.: 'Accordingly he had better not give occasion for that place . . . to take,' etc. — ne committeret: like ne tribueret, l. 1 f.

60, 5. ut . . . caperet: result, obj. of committeret.¹ — constitissent: for fut. perf. of dir. disc., since they had not yet taken their position for battle. — Divico's speech directly quoted would be: Si . . . faciet, . . . ibunt atque ibi erunt Helvetii ubi eos tu, Caesar, constitueris atque esse volueris; sin . . . perseverabis, reminiscere . . . Quod . . . adortus es, cum ii qui flumen transierant suis . . . possent, noli . . . aut tuae . . . tribuere aut nos despiciere; *nos . . . maioribusque nostris didicimus ut . . . contendamus*² quam . . . nitamur. Quare noli committere ut is locus ubi constiterimus . . . nomen capiat aut memoriam prodat.

60, 8. CHAPTER 14. Caesar's answer is likewise indirectly quoted. — eo: 'on that account,' explained by the appositive causal clause quod . . . teneret.

60, 9. dubitationis: partit. gen.³ with minus, 'that less hesitation was allowed him from the fact that (eo quod) he remembered,' etc.

60, 10. eo . . . quo: amount of difference.⁴

60, 11. ferre: sc. se as subject. — merito: cf. moribus, 53, 23. 'He was the more annoyed by them, the less they had happened in accordance with the deserts,' etc.

60, 12. qui (see on qua, 51, 11) si: 'for if they' (i.e. the Roman people). — alicuius: 'some,' less indefinite than cuius, 'any.' — iniuriae: obj. gen. with an adj. of knowing; cf. bellandi, 52, 19. — fuisse: past condition of action non-occurrent or contrary to fact.⁵ — non fuisse: 'it would not have been'; for *non fuit*⁶ of dir. disc.

60, 13. eo . . . quod: as in l. 8 f. — deceptum [esse]: sc. eum (= populum Romanum) as subject. — commissum [esse] a se . . . quare timeret: 'that occasion had been given by them for fearing' ('wherefore they should fear,' rel. clause of result⁷).

60, 15. Quod (adverbial acc.,⁸ 'as to which') si: 'but if.' — contumeliae: see on incommodi, 59, 28. — vellet: 'he (or 'they') were willing,' for vellem (or vellet) of dir. disc.⁹ Whether the subject still remains the Roman people, or shifts to Caesar, is not certain. There is the same ambiguity in eo invito.

60, 16. iniuriarum: obj. gen. with memoriam, l. 18. — *quod . . . vexasset*¹: substantive clauses in apposition with iniuriarum, having indic. in dir. disc.²

60, 18. posse: a purely rhetorical question, not expecting an answer, if it is of the first or third person, is treated in indir. disc. like a declarative sentence and takes the infin.³ with subject acc. (here se implied). 'But if he were willing to forget the old affront, could he also set aside the memory of the fresh wrongs, their having forcibly attempted ('the fact that they had,' etc.) a journey through the province against his will, their having harried the Haedui, the Ambarri, the Allobroges?'

60, 19. Quod . . . gloriarentur, etc.: cf. quod . . . adortus esset, 59, 29 f. The subject is Helvetii implied. — victoria: of 107 B.C.

60, 20. eodem pertinere: 'as for their boasting, etc., . . . it all tended to the same issue' (as the old affront and the fresh wrongs), i.e. to the overthrow of the Helvetii. "Whom the Gods would destroy they first make mad." Caesar doubtless hoped by the bit of moralizing which he indulges in here to increase the confidence of his own soldiers, and to dispirit the enemy.

60, 21. consuesse: 'are accustomed.'⁴ — quo: see on quo, 56, 7.

60, 22. doleant: 'may suffer,' preserve in translation the primary sequence of the rest of Caesar's speech. — quos . . . velint; the rel. clause, as often, precedes its antecedent (his); 'to grant unusual prosperity for a season and longer impunity (than would be expected) to those whom,' etc.

60, 24. Cum: in reading Latin the meaning of cum must be held in suspense until the context makes clear whether it is a preposition or a conjunction, and if the latter, whether it is copulative (cum . . . tum, 'not only . . . but also'), temporal, causal, or concessive. Tamen following points to concession. — sint: not changed from dir. disc.⁵

60, 25. dentur: see on si fieret, 57, 20. — ea: obj. of facturos [esse], the subject of which is eos implied.

60, 26. Haeduis, Allobrogibus: indir. objs. of the intr. verb satisfaciant. — ipsis: = the Haedui; indir. obj. of a transitive cpd. verb.

Caesar's speech in dir. disc.: Eo mihi . . . datur quod eas res quas vos, legati Helvetii, commemorastis memoria teneo, atque eo gravius fero quo . . . acciderunt; qui si . . . fuisset, non fuit . . .; sed eo deceptus est quod . . . intellegebat . . . putabat. 60, 30. consuerint: not changed from its dir. form; see on l. 5, fn. 2. — eius . . . testem: a parting taunt on the disaster of 107 B.C.

61, 6. CHAPTER 15. coactum habebat: it was from the use of habeo with a perf. part. that the modern perf. with 'have' arose; but in Caesar's time habeo in this combination had its full force, 'have, hold'; so here, 'he held, collected from the province.'¹

61, 7. qui videant: 'to see,' rel. clause of purpose; ² pl., referring to a collective antecedent. — quas . . . faciant: indir. quest., obj. of videant.

61, 8. cupidius: 'too eagerly.'³ — alieno: 'unfavorable,' i.e. 'another's'; opposite of suo, 'one's own,' hence 'favorable.'

61, 9. loco: see on locis, 54, 26.

61, 10. pauci, etc.: the rest took to flight led by Dumnorix; see 63, 25. — proelio: cause.

61, 11. equitibus, agmine: cf. legione and militibus, 56, 1 f.

61, 13. proelio: manner, cf. proeliis, 51, 13.

61, 15. rapinis: separation. — prohibere: obj. of habebat. satis serving as pred. acc.,⁴ 'he deemed it sufficient to hinder,' etc. — Ita . . . uti: 'in such manner that.'

61, 17. primum [agmen]: 'van.' — amplius: neuter comp. adj. used as a subst., subject of interesset. — quinis: i.e. five miles each day. — millibus: abl. of comparison.⁵

61, 19. CHAPTER 16. cotidie: emphatic from its position; interim is not emphatic, but serves to connect the thought with what precedes. — Haeduos frumentum: both are objs.¹ of flagitare.

61, 20. essent . . . polliciti: implied indir. disc. (see on habuerit, 53, 10), representing as the original demand, 'Give the grain which you have promised' (estis polliciti). — flagitare: infin. of intimation or hist. infin.,² intimating, but not distinctly declaring, repeated or persistent action. 'Meanwhile every day Caesar kept dunning the Haedui for the grain which, as he said, they had promised in the name of the state.'

61, 21. frigora: 'cold weather,' 'cold spells';³ Caesar was used to the early springs of Italy. The climate of Gaul may have been colder than it is now, owing to the great extent of its forests and marshes.

61, 22. frumenta: 'grain crops'; the pl. is regularly used of standing grain.

61, 23. matura, etc.: it must have been towards the end of June, too early for the harvest in the latitude of Gaul. — pabuli: the lack of green fodder was due less to the weather than to the ravages of the Helvetian emigrant train which had just passed over this same route.

61, 24. frumento: abl. of means with uti.⁴ — flumine: see on qua, 56, 18.

61, 26. avertent: westward towards the Santones. At what point they left the Saône is not certain.

61, 27. Diem: duration of time. — ducere: 'kept putting him off,' cf. flagitare, l. 20. Dicere is the same constr. — conferri, etc.: sc. frumentum; 'that it was being collected, was being brought up, was already here.'

62, 1. diutius: cf. cupidius, 61, 8. — die: cf. itineribus, 54, 18, and see note.

62, 2. frumentum: obj. of metiri, which is itself subject⁵ of oporteret, 'the distribution of grain to the soldiers was due.' See Introd. § 41. — oporteret: note the sequence, depending not on instare, but on the verb (intellexit) which introduces the indir. disc.⁶

62, 4. Diviciaco, Lisco: appositives with principibus. — magistratui: essential complement or indir. obj. of an intr. cpd. verb.¹

62, 5. quem: 'this official,' although the antecedent means 'office.' This shift in meaning by the use of a mere relative is easier in Latin than in English, because magistratus = both 'magistrate' and 'magistracy.' — quem vergobretum: the pron. is dir. obj., the subst. is pred. obj., of appellant; ² cf. Haeduos frumentum, 61, 19.

62, 6. in suos: 'over his people.'

62, 7. quod . . . sublevetur: implied indir. disc., representing Caesar's charge, as accuso quod . . . non sublevor. — possit: as with conferri, 61, 27, the subject is easily implied.

62, 10. susceperit: changed only in person, from susceperim.³ Observe that the pres. possit, l. 7, denotes an action incomplete, while the perf. susceperit denotes an action complete, at the time of the main verb.⁴ — multo: cf. eo, 60, 10.

62, 13. CHAPTER 17. quod: rel. pron., its antecedent being the implied obj. (id) of proponit.

62, 15. privatim: 'as private citizens.' — plus possint: cf. plurimum . . . possent, 53, 16 f.

62, 17. ne . . . conferant: 'from bringing in'; for the pl., cf. videant, 61, 7.

62, 18. praestare . . . erepturi: indir. disc. in apposition with oratione; 'saying that it is better,' etc.

62, 20. debere: sc. eos as subject, referring to the same persons as multitudinem, l. 17. — quin . . . sint erepturi: observe that subordinate quin is used only in dependence upon negative expressions of doubting,⁶ etc.; cf. non esse dubium quin, 53, 16. The periphrastic form expresses more definitely than the pres. subj. the futurity of the action.

62, 21. superaverint: perf. subj. for fut. perf. indic. of the dir. disc., 'shall succeed in overpowering.' — una: adv., cf. 54, 14. — Haeduis: dat. of the optional complement, denoting disadvantage; ⁷ render here by 'from.'

63, 2. vera: pred. adj. with esse, of which the subject is the indir. disc., ll. 2–22; 'he finds the facts to be.'

63, 3. Ipsum: emphatic, 'that Dumnorix is positively the man' (cf. designari sentiebat, 62, 28).—summa audacia: 'of the utmost daring'; the abl. of quality always has a limiting adj. or gen.¹

63, 4. rerum: see on bellandi, 52, 19.

63, 5. portoria: 'customs duties,' including not only taxes on imports and exports, but also tolls on all merchandise passing through the country.

63, 6. vectigalia: 'revenues' of all sorts, comprising the customs duties and also taxes on land, buildings, mines, and various industries.—redempta: the Haedui apparently, like the Romans, sold at auction the privilege of collecting taxes. The highest bidder paid a lump sum into the state treasury, and then through his agents extorted all he could from the people. The publicans of the New Testament were tax collectors of this sort.—habere: 'he has held' ('and still holds' implied); with an expression of duration of time (here complures annos) the pres. has the force of a continuing, not of a completed, perfect.² Dumnorigem continues to be the subject throughout the indir. disc.

63, 8. ad largiendum: gerund denoting purpose,³ 'for bribery.'

63, 11. domi: loc.⁴—largiter posse: cf. plus possint, 62, 15.

63, 18. Diviciacus: see on principatum, 53, 11.

63, 19. sit: belongs with both deminuta and restitutus, but as usual in such cases is expressed but once. — Si quid accidat: 'if anything should happen,' implying misfortune; a fut. supposition in the less vivid form,³ quoted without change in a primary sequence (depending on reperit, l. 2, a pres. of vivid narration or hist. pres., which, like proponit, 62, 13, is followed by primary sequence⁴ throughout the quotation). The podosis venire represents pres. indic. of dir. disc., 'he has the greatest hope.'

63, 20. obtinenti: cf. this gerundive, which is a verbal adj. limiting regni (lit., 'of a king's power to be obtained,' which we translate 'of obtaining a king's power'), with the gerund largiendum, l. 8, which is a verbal subst.

quotes facts with which he was acquainted at the time he is describing; 'that (as he knew) he had led,' etc.; see on habuerit, 53, 10.

63, 30. dandos curasset: 'had effected an exchange of'; for the constr., see on pontem . . . faciendum curat, 59, 18. For the fact, see 57, 9 f.

64, 2. ipsis: Caesar and the Haedui. — magistratu: Liscus, the vergobret.

64, 3. accusaretur: observe the change of tense, 'was,' not 'had been.' — satis . . . causae (partit.): 'reason enough.'

64, 4. quare . . . animadverteret: 'for him either to take action himself against him' (lit., 'why he should,' etc.), a characteristic clause,² changed only in tense (originally pres.) from the dir. disc.

64, 6. unum: 'just one (see on 56, 18) consideration,' explained by the clause with quod in apposition.

64, 8. studium: 'devotion.'

64, 9. cognoverat: 'was acquainted with.'³

64, 10. ne . . . offenderet: complementary or subst. clause, obj. of a verb of fearing.⁴ — eius: 'of Dumnorix'; pronouns, owing to their variety, are clearer in Latin than in English, and frequently may be best translated by proper names. — animum: 'feelings.'

64, 11. priusquam . . . conaretur: before attempting.⁵

64, 13. principem: 'a (not 'the') leading man.'

64, 14. omnium rerum: 'in all matters'; the gen. is the case to express dependence of one subst. upon another, but in English such dependence is often not expressed by 'of.'

64, 15. eo: Diviciacus; so ipso in l. 16.

64, 16. sint dicta: indir. quest.

64, 17. apud se: 'before him,' Caesar.

64, 19. causa cognita, statuatur: 'he may come to a decision after looking into the case.'

64, 20. CHAPTER 20. complexus: he falls at Caesar's feet, embracing his knees.

64, 21. ne quid, etc.: 'not to come to any too severe (see on cupidius, 61, 8) decision against his brother.' Observe that verbs of asking and urging (cf. l. 18 f.) take an obj. clause of purpose, with ut or ne and the subj.,¹ but not with the infin. as in English.—Scire se: 'saying that he knew' (not 'knows,' see on praestarent, 52, 11). Observe the sequence of the subjs., which take their time from coepit,² not from obsecrare or any of the infins. within the quotation.

64, 22. ex eo: neuter.—plus . . . doloris: cf. satis . . . causae, l. 3.

64, 23. ipse: used like the reflexives (ll. 22, 25, etc.) to refer to the speaker.

64, 24. ille: 'Dumnorix,' subject of the next three verbs.

64, 25. posset: see on cum . . . conaretur, 53, 29.—crevisset: with propterea quod.—quibus . . . nervis: abl. of means.³

64, 27. fraterno: equivalent to an obj. gen.⁴

64, 28. si quid . . . accidisset: the apodosis existimaturum shows that the condition is fut., and the tense, denoting completed action, represents accordingly an original fut. perf. indic.⁵—ei: 'Dumnorix.'

64, 29. cum ipse . . . teneret: in dir. disc. cum ego teneo of pres. definite time,⁶ or cum ego teneam of cause (cf. susceperit, 62, 10).

65, 1. futurum uti: 'it would result that'; the subject of futurum is the result clause.

65, 3. pluribus verbis: 'at greater length.'

65, 5. faciat: coördinated with rogat, 'begs him cease his entreating,' and equiv. to an obj. clause subordinated by ut.⁷—tanti . . . esse: 'that his friendship with him is so highly prized.'⁸

65, 6. eius voluntati . . . condonet: 'he will overlook . . . out of regard for his wish' (lit., 'will give up . . . to his wish,' indir. obj.).

65, 8. reprehendat: cf. sint dicta, 64, 16.

65, 10. suspiciones: 'suspicious actions,' the pl. being less abstract than the sing., cf. frigora, 61, 21.

65, 11. condonare: Caesar's leniency with Dumnorix was possibly in part due to his desire to gratify Diviciacus, but doubtless still more to the effect which he hoped to produce on the Gauls in general.

65, 15. CHAPTER 21. esset : indir. quest. depending on cognoscerent.

65, 16. in circuitu : 'all around' ; Caesar's scouts were to reconnoitre the mountain on all sides, except of course where the enemy were encamped, and to discover the best means of reaching the heights above the enemy without being observed by them. — qui cognoscerent misit : 'sent men to find out' ; rel. clauses of purpose¹ often have an indef. antecedent which is so easily understood that it need not be expressed ; see on qui, 51, 2.

65, 17. esse : sc. ascensum.

65, 18. pro praetore : 'with the rank of commander,' i.e. invested with the right to exercise military command in the full authority of a general. A lieutenant would exercise this right only at his commander's pleasure. See Intro. § 32.

65, 19. ducibus : 'as guides,' appositive.

65, 20. consili sit : 'pertains to his plan,'² viz. that Labienus should swoop down on the enemy from the hill while he himself engaged them in front.

65, 22. rei : obj. gen. with an adj. of knowing.³

65, 23. Sullae : against Mithridates, 88–84 B.C.

65, 24. in, etc. : 'in that of,' etc. — Crassi : against Spartacus, 71 B.C.

65, 26. CHAPTER 22. teneretur : cf. this tense, which denotes action still going on. with cognitus esset, 66, 1, which denotes action completed, at the time of the main action accurrit.

65, 27. passibus : better explained as abl. of amount of difference⁴ with abesset than as abl. of comparison with longius.⁵

66, 3. a . . . insignibus : 'from . . . ornaments,' such as plumes and horns on the helmets.

66, 5. erat . . . praeceptum : impers., 'orders had been given,' the subject being the purpose clause with ne.⁶

66, 9. visae essent : see on habuerit, 53, 10, and si quid . . . accidisset, 64, 28.

66, 11. fieret : pure purpose.

66, 18. timore perterritum : 'panic-stricken.'

66, 19. quod: the implied antecedent is obj. of renuntiavisse. — pro viso: 'as seen.'

66, 21. quo consuerat intervallo: = *eo intervallo*¹ quo consuerat (sequi), 'at the usual distance,' i.e. five or six miles; see 61, 17.

66, 23. CHAPTER 23. diei: poss. gen. limiting postridie, which was originally a substantive (lit., 'on that day's following day').

66, 24. cum: 'before' (lit., 'when'). — frumentum, etc.: see on 62, 2. — oporteret: 'was due,' implied indir. disc., Caesar's thought at the time being, biduum superest cum . . . oportet.

66, 25. a Bibracte: names of towns take a prep. when they denote the place from which distance is measured.²

66, 26. millibus: see on passibus, 65, 27.

66, 27. XVIII: = duodeviginti.

66, 28. prospiciendum [esse]: impers., 'provision must be made.' — avertit: he goes northward.

66, 29. fugitivos: 'runaway slaves'; deserters are perfugae (70, 15) or transfugae.

67, 2. existimarent: not stated as Caesar's reason, which he is willing to vouch for (with the indic., the mood of facts), but as the reason of the Helvetii which he quotes,³ the subj. intimating that the statement is a quotation (implied indir. disc.). — eo magis: cf. eo gravius, 60, 10. — superioribus, etc.: abl. abs. expressing concession, 'although they had seized,' etc.

67, 3. eo quod: 'from the fact that,' cf. eo sibi . . . quod, 60, 8 f. — re: abl. of separation.

67, 4. posse: sc. Romanos as subject.

67, 5. itinere converso: 'turned back,' to follow Caesar. — a: 'on,' see on a, 51, 16.

67, 7. CHAPTER 24. animum advertit: has the same meaning and takes the same constructions as the far commoner compound animadverto (64, 4 f.). Id is the obj.

67, 9. qui sustineret: cf. qui cognoscerent misit, 65, 16.

67, 10. in colle medio:⁴ 'half-way up the hill.' — triplicem aciem: see Introductio. § 46.

67, 11. quattuor: the one legion which Caesar found in further Gaul on his first arrival (55, 12), and the three legions which he brought later from Aquileia (57, 27). — summo: 'top of.'¹

68, 3. ab iis: i.e. the two legions of raw recruits from hither Gaul (57, 26 f.) and the auxiliary forces (Introd. § 29). Caesar was doubtless afraid to trust these troops in a pitched battle.

68, 4. muniri: in 1886 the remains of an ancient intrenchment were discovered on the hill of Armecy, southeast of Mont Beuvray on which Bibracte stood, and answering to the only indication given by Caesar of the site of the battle, viz. that it was within eighteen Roman miles from Bibracte (66, 25 ff.). In 1889 nine other trenches were discovered containing ashes, charcoal, and crumbling bones; and still more recently fragments of bones, armor, and weapons, have been found near by. The intrenchment is in the shape of a crescent, 300 yards wide from tip to tip, and was evidently hurriedly made to serve only a temporary purpose. There is no doubt that this is the site of Caesar's fortifications.

68, 5. confertissima acie: the Gauls fought in close masses, and were thus always at a disadvantage with the open, flexible battle line of the Romans.

68, 6. phalange: as they advanced in close order, the men in the front line held their shields before them so that they overlapped, forming an unbroken defense against the enemy's spears.

68, 8. CHAPTER 25. suo: sc. equo remoto. — omnium: i.e. of all his officers and staff, not of his cavalry. Caesar's willingness to share danger on an equal footing with his men shows us one reason for their unflinching loyalty to him. See Introd. § 16.

68, 10. cohortatus: before a battle a Roman officer regularly addressed words of encouragement to his army.

68, 12. pilis: javelins were generally thrown when the enemy were some 75 or 100 feet distant, and with such force and accuracy that the enemy's line was often broken. When the armies came together, the sword was used. See Introd. § 39.

68, 16. Gallis . . . impedimento quod: 'the Gauls (dat. of interest?) were greatly hampered ('it was for a great hindrance,' dat. of tendency or service¹) in fighting by the fact that,' etc. The clause with quod is subject of erat.²

68, 20. inflexisset: with causal cum.³

68, 21. sinistra, etc.: abl. abs. expressing cause, 'as the left hand (on which the shield was carried) was hampered.'

68, 23. multi: 'a great many,' emphasized by its position before ut; see on vix qua, 54, 20. — iactato bracchio: abl. abs. expressing time, 'after tossing the arm about,' in the effort to disentangle the shields.

68, 24. manu: abl. of separation.

68, 25. nudo: 'unprotected.' — corpore: abl. of manner.

68, 28. passus: acc. of extent. — eo: 'thither.'

68, 29. Capto . . . et succedentibus: observe the difference in tense, 'after they had reached the mountain and while our troops were coming up after them.'

69, 1. novissimis (= novissimo agmini) praesidio: cf. Gallis . . . impedimento, 68, 16 f. — ex itinere: 'right from their march,' without waiting to form a line of battle. — ab latere aperto: 'on the exposed flank.' This must have been the left flank here; see plan, p. 67. The flanks of the legionary troops were usually protected by auxiliaries or cavalry.

69, 2. circumvenire: depends on coeperunt, l. 4.

69, 4. conversa signa, etc.: 'changed front and charged in two divisions' (lit., 'bore their turned standards on' the enemy). Conversa signa applies only to the third line, as is clear from the next statement; the first and second lines continued to fight with the Helvetii in front, who had already been driven back from their first position (summotis), but had returned to the attack as soon as they saw the Boii and Tulingi coming up (venientes).

69, 7. CHAPTER 26. ancipiti proelio: abl. of manner, 'with a battle of two fronts.' — diu, etc.: 'there was long and sharp fighting'; cf. the translation of erat praeceptum, 66, 5.

69, 9. alteri . . . alteri: 'one party' (the Helvetii) . . . 'the other' (the Boii, etc.); observe the pl., used of two groups. — se . . . receperunt . . . contulerunt: used of orderly marching, not of a rout.

69, 11. proelio: time when.¹—hora septima: about one o'clock; see hora in Vocab.—pugnatum sit: with concessive cum.²

69, 12. aversum: 'turned in flight.' Caesar generously praises the bravery of the Helvetii; see also 51, 11 f.

69, 13. pro . . . obiecerant: 'they had drawn their carts up in front as a rampart.'

69, 14. loco superiore: they stood in the carts.—venientes: 'as they came up,' with nostros.

69, 16. subiciebant: 'hurled' (from below).

69, 17. impedimentis: see on imperio, 52, 11.

69, 18. captus est: agrees with the nearer subject.³

69, 20. nocte: abl. expressing duration.⁴—Lingonum: north of the Haedui.

69, 21. vulnera, sepulturam: evidently Caesar's victory had been dearly bought.

69, 22. potuissent: with causal cum.

69, 23. Lingonas: cf. Allobrogas, 60, 18; this is a Greek acc. ending,⁵ and was frequently applied by the Romans to any foreign name, whether Greek or not.—ne . . . iuvarent: 'that they were not to aid,' indir. quotation⁶ of Caesar's message, nolite . . . iuvare.

69, 24. qui si iuvisent: 'and if they should,' for si iuveritis, fut. perf., of dir. disc.; see on si quid . . . accidisset, 64, 28.—se, etc.: = se eodem loco ('on the same footing') Lingonas habiturum quo Helvetios haberet.

70, 1. essent: implied indir. disc. (see on habuerit, 53, 10), representing estis in Caesar's order.—iussisset: sc. Caesar, an abrupt change of subject, as in 63, 1.

70, 2. eo: as in 68, 28; for its position, see on horum, 51, 6.—pervenit: observe the perf. indic. with postquam.⁷—servos: the fugitivi of 66, 29.

70, 14. vellent: cf. essent, l. 1. — in . . . habuit: a euphemism; they were put to death or sold into slavery.

70, 16. in deditionem accepit: they thus became not only the subjects, but the wards of Rome. — Helvetios, etc.: of the tribes named in 54, 12 ff., only the Rauraci are not accounted for. Possibly their name has fallen out of the Mss.

70, 19. tolerarent: characteristic.⁷

70, 20. facerent: 'furnish.' — ipsos: the Helvetii, etc., in distinction from the Allobroges.

70, 22. ea . . . ratione: 'on this account.'

70, 23. ne . . . transirent: neg. clause of pure purpose.

70, 26. Boios: contrasted with the tribes that returned home, hence occupying the most prominent place in the sentence. It is obj. of conlocarent. — petentibus Haeduis: 'to the request of the Haedui,' indir. obj. of concessit.

70, 29. parem . . . atque ipsi erant: 'same . . . as¹ they themselves enjoyed.'

71, 1. CHAPTER 29. tabulae: 'tablets,' much like folding slates, but made of wood. The inner surface was coated with wax to hold the writing.

71, 2. litteris: 'letters'; the words were Celtic. The Gauls in general knew nothing of Greek, as we see from Caesar's use of it in a secret despatch to one of his officers. The druids were acquainted with the alphabet at least (138, 6); and inscriptions in the Celtic language, but with Greek letters, have been found in southern Gaul. — et: connects reperitae and relatae. As usual, the copula (sunt) is expressed with only one participle.

71, 4. qui: interrog. adj.² pron. introducing an indir. quest.

71, 5. possent: characteristic. — pueri, etc.: sc. exissent.

71, 6. capitum: 'souls,' depending on millia.

71, 8. ex his: sc. summa erat eorum (antecedent of qui).

71, 9. ad millia CCCLXVIII: ad must be an adv. here, as millia is pred. nom., governing the number of the verb.³ Generally with numerals ad may be taken as a prep.

BOOK SECOND

Campaign of 57 B.C. — [In the winter of 58–57 B.C., while Caesar was holding court and attending to other civil duties of his governorship in Cisalpine Gaul, numerous reports reached him that the Belgic tribes, afraid that the Roman arms would next be turned upon them, had all joined a conspiracy against him. With the same rapidity of action which he had shown in the previous year against the Helvetii, Caesar raised two new legions in his Cisalpine province, and at the opening of the campaigning season led his army, now consisting of eight legions and an uncertain number of cavalry and auxiliaries, over the Marne (Matrona) into the territory of the Remi. This tribe at once submitted and became a faithful ally. Bibrax, an important Roman town, was relieved by Caesar from a vigorous assault of the confederate Belgae, who a few days later suffered such a disastrous defeat on the Aisne (Axona) that they dispersed to their homes, soothing their pride with the agreement to rally for the defense of any district that might be invaded by the Romans. In quick succession Caesar entered the countries of the Suessiones, Bellovaci, and Ambiani, all of whom surrendered with hardly a show of opposition.]

In the Nervii, however, Caesar met a foe worthy of his steel, who not only scorned all thought of submission and declared that they would not accept any terms of peace, but fought so valiantly on the banks of the Sambre (Sabis) that they all but won a decisive victory from his veteran legions, and Caesar himself was obliged to enter the battle before the day was finally saved. Having lost a large proportion of their army in this battle, the Nervii immediately surrendered, and were kindly treated by Caesar, who warmly admired their splendid courage and ability as warriors.

[The Atuatuca were next attacked. Terrified by the sight of the Roman siege engines, they offered their submission, but making a treacherous assault on the Romans the next night, they were overpowered, and all of them, numbering 53,000 men, women, and children, were sold as slaves. At the same time several maritime tribes of northwestern Gaul were subdued by Crassus, and a number of German states, impressed by the uninterrupted successes of Caesar, sent envoys to promise obedience to all his commands.]

In Italy his victories aroused great enthusiasm, and the senate decreed him the unprecedented honor of a thanksgiving service for fifteen days.]

PAGE 72, LINE 1. CHAPTER 15. Eorum := the Ambiani, whose surrender had just been related. This word stands first in the sentence, not for emphasis, but to connect the thought with the preceding sentence.¹—quorum := eorum,² 'their'; a rel., equivalent to a dem., and never to be translated literally, is very frequent at the beginning of sentences, being due to the tendency, which is much stronger in Latin than in English, to preserve the connection of the thought.

72, 3. sic: 'the following facts'; related in indir. disc., which is introduced in Eng. by 'that.'—esse . . . mercatoribus (dat. of poss.¹): 'traders had'; for the fact, cf. 51, 8 f.

72, 4. pati: sc. eos; the subject of an infin. is not infrequently to be implied from the context, provided its omission causes no ambiguity.—vini: partit. gen. with nihil.²

72, 6. animos: 'character.'—existimarent: subj. in a subordinate clause of a quotation,³ representing the pres. indic.⁴ of dir. disc. The tense depends on the past introductory verb⁵ reperiebat, and denotes action not completed⁶ at the time of the main verb. Observe that, contrary to Eng. idiom, the infins. in a quotation do not follow the sequence of the introductory verb, but keep the tense they had in dir. disc.; see on praestarent, 52, 11.—esse: the eos implied with pati is still the subject.

72, 7. magnae virtutis: gen. of quality,⁷ equiv. to an adj. and so united to feros by -que.

72, 8. qui . . . deditissent: 'for having surrendered,' a rel. clause expressing cause;⁸ hence it had the subj. in dir. disc. The tense, originally perf., follows the sequence of reperiebat, and denotes action completed⁹ at the time of the main verb.

72, 9. patriam: adj.—sese: subject of the following infins., referring to the implied subject (eos) of confirmare.

72, 10. missuros: indir. disc. depending on confirmare. The tense represents a fut. indic. of their actual declaration. In the fut. infin. esse is often omitted.

Caesar's information directly quoted would be: Nullus est aditus ad eos mercatoribus; nihil patiuntur vini . . . inferri, quod . . . existimant; sunt homines ferri magnaeque virtutis; increpitant atque purpose.¹ Cf. the primary sequence,² depending on a pres. of vivid narration (hist. pres.³), with that of occuparet, 53, 10. — castris idoneum: see Intro. § 43.

73, 3. Cum . . . facerent: 'inasmuch as several . . . were following Caesar and marching along with him.' The subj. is regularly used with causal cum.⁴ The part., as often, is best translated by a verb. — ex . . . Gallis: equivalent to a partit. gen. with com- plures.⁵

73, 5. ut: observe that the indic. follows, hence it does not mean 'that.'

73, 6. eorum . . . perspecta: 'having observed our army's way of marching in those days'; the Latin gen. is often not to be expressed by 'of,' and the abl. abs. should not be translated literally.

73, 7. nocte: abl. of time when.⁶

73, 8. singulas: 'each two' (as they marched along one by one).

73, 9. numerum: 'amount.'

73, 10. negoti: cf. vini, 72, 4. — castra: used inexactly of the place selected for the camp. — venisset, abessent: for fut. perf. and fut. indic.⁷ of dir. disc.; for the subj., see on existimarent, 72, 6.

73, 11. spatium: extent of space.⁸ — hanc: the prima legio. — sub sarcinis: i.e. before the soldiers could lay down their packs and equip themselves for fighting.

73, 12. qua . . . direptis: abl. abs. expressing condition, equivalent to fut. perf. indic., 'if this should be routed,' etc.; the apodosis is futurum, 'the result would be.' — ut . . . auderent: subst. clause of result, subject of futurum,⁹ taking its sequence from demonstrarunt, l. 8.

73, 13. Adiuvabat, etc.: the subject is the subst. clause quod . . . effecerant:¹⁰ 'there was support, too, for the plan of those who reported the matter in the fact that the Nervii,' etc.

73, 15. equitatu: abl. of specification.¹—nihil possent: 'had no strength'; for the mood, cf. facerent, l. 4.—neque enim: 'and in fact . . . not.'

73, 16. rei: 'branch of the service'; res often refers to a preceding subst., here to equitatu. The dat. is essential complement or indir. obj. of an intr. verb; cf. his, 72, 16.—quicquid . . . copiis: 'whatever strength they have lies in their foot-forces.'

73, 17. quo . . . impedirent: 'in order to hamper'; quo is the regular final particle if there is a comparative in the purpose clause.²—prae-dandi: gerund; see on proficiscendum, 52, 25.

73, 18. venissent: subj. of implied indir. disc.,³ i.e. not depending on a formal verb of saying or thinking, but implying by the mood that it is an indirect quotation of the thought in the minds of the Nervii when they formed their purpose, which was, 'In order to hamper the cavalry of our neighbors in case they come (lit., 'shall have come') against us, we will construct hedges.' As the plpf. tense expresses completed action and the thought is future, the original tense must have been fut. perf.;⁴ cf. venisset, l. 10.—teneris, etc.: 'they cut into young trees and bent them over, and as the branches grew out thickly on the sides (lit., 'in width') and bramble-bushes and briars were planted between the trees, they had produced the result that these hedges,' etc.

73, 20. ut . . . praeberent: complementary or subst. clause of result, obj. of effecerant.⁵—instar: in apposition with munimentum.

73, 21. quo: 'through which' (lit., 'into which' = in quod, cf. 72, 20).—intrari, perspicri: impers. passives.

73, 22. posset: rel. clause of result,⁶ 'so that through it not only no entrance could be made, but no view even could be gained.' Similar hedges may be seen to-day in the neighborhood of the Sambre.

73, 23. sibi: dat. of agent with the gerundive.⁷—consilium: the plan of attack suggested in ll. 9-12.

73, 25. CHAPTER 18. haec: 'as follows.'—locum: see on itineribus, 54, 18.

73, 26. aequaliter declivis: 'with even decline.' This is the hill of Neuf-Mesnil on the north bank of the Sambre. The site of the battle is fixed by the fact that no other part of the river corresponds to all the details given by Caesar.

73, 27. quod: agrees with flumen; cf. 52, 14 and 16, where the pron. agrees with the proper name. — supra, in 72, 13.

73, 28. pari acclivitate: 'of like ascent,' abl. of quality¹ limiting collis, equiv. to an adj. 'equally steep'; cf. magnae virtutis, 72, 7. Note that both the gen. and the abl. of quality require a limiting adj. or its equivalent. — adversus, etc.: 'facing this (the hill of Neuf-Mesnil) and opposite to it,' on the south bank of the river.

73, 29. passus CC [= ducentos]: cf. spatium, l. 11. — infirmus 'at the foot,'² contrasted with ab (see on a, 51, 16) superiore parte, 'on the upper part.'

73, 30. perspici: impers. as in l. 22. — posset: pure result.³

74, 2. secundum: preposition.

74, 3. Fluminis: the change of subject from the hill to the river is made clear at once by putting this word first. If altitudo preceded, a Roman reader would be expecting a measurement of the mountain. Latin puts at the beginning of sentences either emphasized words (as here) or phrases which unite the thought closely with what precedes; see on eorum and quorum, 72, 1. — pedum: gen. of quality, used predicatively like magnae virtutis, 72, 7.

74, 5. CHAPTER 19. omnibus copiis: the abl. of accompaniment⁴ may be used without cum in military phrases when there is a limiting adj. — aliter se habebat ac: 'was different from what,' etc. (lit., 'had itself otherwise than'⁵; with this use of ac cf. parem . . . atque, 70, 29). The verb is sing. because the subjects form one unit; see on dividit, 51, 5.

74, 7. hostibus: essential complement or indir. obj. of an intr. cpd. verb.⁶ — consuetudine: cf. moribus, 53, 23.

74, 8. expeditas: i.e. not impeded by the slowly moving baggage train; but the soldiers carried their individual packs (sarcinae). See Introd. §42.

74, 9. conlocarat: cf. the form¹ with demonstrarunt, 73, 8. Beware of confusing this verb with colligo.

74, 10. proxime: the XIIIth and XIVth legions had been levied by Caesar in Cisalpine Gaul in the spring of this year. As in the battle with the Helvetii, the raw recruits are kept in the background; cf. 68, 1 ff., and see on abiis, 68, 3.

74, 11. praesidio: dat. of tendency or service,² accompanied as usual by a dat. of interest, 'were a protection to the baggage.' On the Roman order of march, see Introd. § 45.

74, 13. Cum . . . recipere, etc.: note the imperf., expressing action going on at the time of the main verb coeperunt; see on cum . . . conaretur, 53, 29. The Roman cavalry and light-armed troops, by keeping the enemy occupied on the south side of the river, thwarted the plan of attacking immediately the first legion to arrive; see 73, 10 ff.

74, 14. silvas, silva: probably denoting by the pl. the different parts of the woods into which the enemy ran, and by the sing. the whole woods collectively.

75, 1. quem ad finem: 'to the limit to which,' the antecedent standing only in the rel. clause. Cf. 73, 25, where the antecedent (loci) is repeated in the rel. clause.

75, 2. porrecta, etc.: 'the stretch of (lit., 'stretched') open ground.' — cedentes: 'as they retreated,' agreeing with the implied obj. (eos) of insequi.

75, 3. opere dimenso, etc.: 'marked out the works and began,' etc. (lit., 'the works having been marked out they began'). For the pass. use of a dep. perf. part., see on depopulatis, 58, 17. Cf. this perf. part., denoting action complete at the time of coeperunt, with the pres. cedentes, which expresses action going on at the time of auderent.

75, 5. Ubi: see on 54, 6. — prima: 'the first part of,' see on infimus in 73, 29.

75, 6. quod tempus: 'the time which.'

75, 7. committendi proeli: 'for beginning battle,' limits tempus; see on eorum . . . perspecta, 73, 6. — ut: 'just as,' expressing manner.

75, 8. sese confirmaverant: 'had resolved.'

75, 18. vexillum: a large red banner was displayed at the general's quarters as a signal for battle.

75, 19. signum: the signal for "falling in."

75, 20. opere: as in l. 14.

75, 21. paulo: amount of difference.³—longius: 'too far.'⁴—aggeris: 'materials for the rampart' of the camp; an unusual meaning.—potendi: 'of searching for materials' (lit., 'of materials to be sought'), gerundive, attributive with aggeris; the other gerundives of this sentence are predicative, but all are equiv. to verbal adjs.,⁵ agreeing with their substantives. See on proficiscendum, 52, 25.

75, 22. causa: 'for the sake of,' so regularly when following a gen.—arcessendi [erant]: the subject is the implied antecedent (ii) of qui; see on qui, 51, 2.

75, 24. cohortandi: see on cohortatus, 68, 10.—signum: for beginning battle.

76, 2. et quod, etc.: the second of the two helpful circumstances.—ab opere, etc.: 'the several lieutenants . . . from the works and their several legions.' Each legion was under the immediate command of a lieutenant. See Intro. § 32.

76, 5. nihil: adverbial acc.,¹ equiv. to an emphasized non, 'they did not wait any longer at all' (iam with a neg. = 'no longer').

76, 7. CHAPTER 21. necessarii, etc.: 'having given only the necessary orders.'

76, 9. decucurrit: sc. in eam partem. For the antecedent standing only in the rel. clause, cf. quem ad finem, 75, 1. — ad . . . decimam: for the position of the armies at the beginning of the battle see the plan, p. 74. This was Caesar's favorite legion, as he himself says elsewhere.

76, 10. non longiore oratione (abl. of means) . . . quam uti: 'in a speech not longer than merely that,' etc.

76, 11. uti . . . sustinerent: complementary or subst. clauses, objs. of cohortatus.²

76, 12. animo: loc. abl.³ — que: 'but.'

76, 13. quam quo: 'than a distance to which'; cf. quo, 72, 20. — posset: characteristic. See on esset, 72, 21.

76, 16. pugnantibus: 'already fighting'; for the omission of the pronoun (is), cf. cedentes, 75, 2. For the case, see on hostibus, 74, 7.

76, 17. hostium: poss. gen. with animus.

76, 18. insignia: 'ornaments,' such as the crests of the helmets, which may have served to distinguish the legions, and doubtless indicated the rank of the wearer; also metal decorations for valor, worn on the breast and arms. These had been stowed away during the march.

76, 19. galeas: on the march the soldier carried his helmet suspended on his breast. The shield, which was often highly ornamented, was kept in a leather case when not in use.

76, 20. scutis: abl. of separation.⁴

76, 21. defuerit: pure result; for the tense, see on debuerint, 58, 15. — Quam . . . in partem: 'to whatever place.'

76, 22. quaeque, etc.: 'and whatever standards he caught sight of first, by these he took his position.'

76, 23. suis: sc. signis; each maniple had its standard. See Introd. § 40. — dimitteret: neg. clause of pure purpose.⁵

76, 24. CHAPTER 22. ut: cannot mean 'that' with the indic.

76, 26. cum . . . resisterent . . . impediretur: cf. cum . . . facerent, 73, 3 f. — diversae: 'separately.'¹ — aliae alia in parte: 'some in one place, some in another,' the regular meaning of alius when repeated in different cases.

76, 27. ante: see 73, 18 ff.

76, 28. interiectis: with saepibus, abl. abs. expressing cause. — neque . . . poterant: the main clause, 'no definite reserves could be posted,' etc., i.e. with definite orders to support the tenth legion for instance; for Caesar could not tell where reinforcements were to be most needed.

76, 29. quid . . . esset: indir. quest. depending on provideri, and equiv. to a subst. in the nominative parallel with subsidia and imperia. For sequence, see on quid . . . oporteret, l. 1. — Render this long Latin sentence by two sentences in English. Make instructo exercitu the leading clause of the first sentence, 'the army was drawn up,' and begin a new sentence with cum. English does not admit so readily as Latin many subordinate clauses in one sentence.

77, 1. fortunae: contrasted with rerum, 'circumstances,' and depending on eventus.

77, 4. CHAPTER 23. acie: gen.² For the positions of the Roman and Belgian forces at the beginning of the battle, see the plan, p. 74. — pilis: see on 68, 12.

77, 6. Atrebates: acc. — ea pars: the Roman left.

77, 7. loco superiore: the higher ground up which the enemy charged after crossing the river; see 75, 13.

77, 8. conantes: see on cedentes, 75, 2.

77, 9. impeditam: 'hampered as they were' by the river. — Ipsi: the Roman pursuers.

77, 10. progressi: they drove the enemy up the hill south of the Sambre (73, 28). — rursus resistentes hostes: acc.; note the pres. part. expressing action not completed at the time of the main verb (coniecerunt), 'as the enemy were again making a stand.'

77, 11. redintegrato, etc.: 'they renewed . . . and threw them,' etc.

77, 12. diversae: as in 76, 26.

77, 15. a fronte: 'on the front'; see on a, 51, 16.

77, 16. cum: causal.

77, 17. intervallo: amount of difference.¹—constitisset: with two or more sing. subjects the verb is often sing.²

77, 18. agmine: abl. of manner.³—duce Boduognato: 'under the leadership of B.,' abl. abs.

77, 20. aperto latere: apparently the left flank, exposed by the departure of the other legions in pursuit of their adversaries.—legiones: the XIIIth and VIIIth.—summum castrorum (poss. gen.) locum: 'the summit occupied by the camp.'

77, 22. CHAPTER 24. levis armaturae: gen. of quality.⁴ These were the slingers and bowmen of 74, 11 f. See Introd. § 29.

77, 23. una: adv.—quos: refers to both equites and pedites.

77, 24. dixeram: in 75, 10.

77, 25. adversis: 'face to face.' For the case of hostibus, cf. pugnantis, 76, 16.

77, 27. summo iugo: the camp was laid out on the sloping summit of the hill so that the rear gate should be at the highest point.

77, 28. victores: 'victoriously,' cf. diversae, 76, 26.

77, 29. egressi: translate this part. by a finite verb and begin the next clause with 'but.'—respexissent: with this tense, which denotes that the action of looking back preceded their flight, cf. reciperent, l. 25, meaning that they were in the act of retreating when they met the enemy; see on cum . . . conaretur, 53, 29.

77, 30. versari: this tense denotes an action still going on at the time of vidissent, whereas transisse (l. 28) expresses an action completed at the time of conspexerant.⁵

78, 1. qui, etc.: the baggage train was coming up, with the XIIIth and XIVth legions in the rear; see 74, 10, and the plan.

78, 2. alii aliam, etc.: cf. aliae alia, etc., 76, 26.—ferebantur: 'rushed,' reflexive use of the pass.⁶

78, 4. virtutis opinio: 'reputation for courage.'

78, 5. multitudine: abl. of means.

78, 6. compleri, etc.: indir. disc., depending on vidissent. For the tense, see on versari, 77, 30. — legiones: the XIITH and VIITH.

78, 7. Numidas: the sagittarii of 74, 12.

78, 9. domum: limit of motion.¹

78, 10. pulsos [esse]: indir. disc. — castris: abl. of means with *potitos*² [esse].

78, 12. CHAPTER 25. Caesar: subject of processit, 79, 4. This sentence is an unusually long example of the Latin period. The principal subordinate ideas are expressed by a participle (profectus, l. 15), a long clause introduced by ubi (l. 15) and closing with posset (79, 2), and an abl. abs. scuto . . . detracto (79, 2). In translation, — which should not be undertaken until the meaning of the whole sentence is understood in the Latin, — end the first sentence with profectus; omit ubi, and render the participles in the abl. abs. by finite verbs, making as many separate sentences as seems desirable.

78, 15. signis: each of the thirty maniples of a legion had its own standard, which it followed in battle, but in this instance, owing to the confusion with which the men had fallen in (76, 21 f.) and the suddenness of the enemy's attack, no definite arrangement of troops was possible, and the standards had all been gathered in one place.

78, 17. sibi . . . impedimento: 'hindered each other in fighting'; see on praesidio, 74, 11.

78, 19. centurionibus: there were six in each cohort; see Introd. § 35.

78, 20. signifero, signo: 'a (not 'the') standard-bearer, a standard.' There were three maniples in a cohort, each having its own standard, but the cohort as a whole had no separate standard.

78, 23. in his: 'among them.' — primipilo: with confecto. Baculus is active again in the following winter (83, 28).

78, 27. esse tardiores: 'were too slow,'³ indir. disc., depending like the following infins. on vidit (l. 18).

78, 28. ab novissimis: 'in the rear'; cf. a fronte, 77, 15. — proelio: abl. of separation.⁴

78, 29. neque . . . et: correlatives; translate, 'while they did not . . . yet they were,' etc.

79, 1. vidit: repeated from 78, 18, for the sake of clearness.

79, 2. posset: characteristic.¹ The XIIIth and XIVth legions were not yet on hand, being in the rear of the baggage train, which was just coming up (78, 1).—militi: dat. of the optional complement expressing disadvantage;² render by 'from.'

79, 3. eo: adv.

79, 4. nominatim appellatis: this helps us to understand Caesar's popularity with his troops. See also on omnium, 68, 8. Miles Standish boasts in Longfellow's poem, The Courtship of Miles Standish (Ch. I):

"And, like Caesar, I know the name of each of my soldiers!"

79, 6. manipulos laxare: 'to open out the ranks,' that each man might have more room for wielding his sword.

79, 7. quo . . . possent: see on quo . . . impedirent, 73, 17.—gladiis: cf. castris, 78, 10.

79, 8. Cuius = cuius, see on quorum, 72, 1.—adventu: abl. of cause.

79, 9. militibus: dat. of essential complement or indir. obj. with a transitive cpd. verb.³—cum: causal.

79, 11. extremis . . . rebus: 'extreme danger'; see on res, 53, 22.

In connection with this episode, cf. the comments which Longfellow puts into the mouth of Miles Standish (Ch. II):

"Now do you know what he did on a certain occasion in Flanders,
When the rear-guard of his army retreated, the front giving way too,
And the immortal Twelfth Legion was crowded so closely together
There was no room for their swords? Why, he seized a shield from a soldier,
Put himself straight at the head of his troops, and commanded the captains,
Calling on each by his name, to order forward the ensigns;
Then to widen the ranks, and give more room for their weapons;
So he won the day, the battle of something-or-other.
That's what I always say; if you wish a thing to be well done,
You must do it yourself, you must not leave it to others!"

79, 17. CHAPTER 26. ut . . . coniungerent: complementary or subst. clause, second obj. of monuit.⁴

79, 18. conversa, etc.: 'face about and charge the enemy.' Probably the result of this manoeuvre was to present a front to the enemy on all sides. This may have been effected, if the two legions were drawn up side by side, by the rear lines facing about while the maniples on the extreme wings faced out.

79, 20. cum: causal. — aliis alii: cf. aliae alia, etc., 76, 26.

79, 21. ne . . . circumvenirentur: complementary or subst. clause, obj. of a verb of fearing.¹ The tense expresses action going on at the time of timerent, which itself denotes incomplete action at the time of the past tense coeperunt.² — aversi: 'in the rear' (lit., 'being turned away' from the enemy).

79, 23. duarum: the XIIIth and XIVth.

79, 25. proelio, etc.: 'received word of the battle, and quickening their speed they were caught sight of'; remember that the abl. abs. is not to be translated literally. — summo: near the Roman camp.

79, 26. Labiennus: he was in command of the Xth legion, which with the IXth had pursued the Atrebates across the river (77, 3 ff.).

79, 28. gererentur: indir. quest.

79, 29. subsidio: dat. of purpose,³ accompanied as usual by a dat. of interest. — Qui: pl., of the milites implied in legionem.

80, 1. versaretur: see on captus est, 69, 18.

80, 2. nihil, etc.: 'they made all possible speed' (lit., 'made nothing left for themselves in regard to speed'). — reliqui: pred. gen.⁴

80, 4. CHAPTER 27. qui . . . procubuissent: 'such as had fallen,' a characteristic clause; cf. posset, 79, 2.

80, 5. scutis: abl. of means. — redintegrent, occurrerent, praeferrent: pure result.⁵

80, 6. hostes: acc. — inermes: 'though unarmed,' with calones. — armatis: for the case, cf. pugnantibus, 76, 16.

80, 7. deherent: pure purpose.⁶

80, 8. pugnando: gerund, abl. of specification,⁷ 'showed themselves superior in fighting.'

80, 10. iacentibus: for the case, cf. armatis, l. 6.

80, 11. his: the proximi.

80, 12. superessent: cf. procubuissent, l. 4. — ut ex tumulo: 'as from a mound.'

80, 13. conicerent: in the same construction as insisterent. — pila: not so general a word as tela.

80, 14. ut . . . deberet: 'so that the verdict ought to be that it was not without reason that men of such great courage,'¹ etc. The result depends on the whole of the preceding sentence, At . . . remitterent.

80, 16. altissimas: the banks here are steep and over twenty feet high. — quae: refers to the preceding infins., 'deeds which.' — facilia: pred. adj.

80, 17. ex: 'instead of.' The Nervii gave Caesar one of his hardest contests and well deserved his praise of their prowess. Cf. his commendation of the Helvetii, 69, 12.

80, 18. CHAPTER 28. ad internecionem: an exaggeration, although Caesar, judging from the reports of the envoys who came to sue for peace (l. 25 f.), may have believed it to be the truth. In 54 B.C. the Nervii were strong enough to join a revolt against Caesar, and in 52 B.C. they furnished a contingent of 6000 men for the relief of Alesia (159, 14 f.).

80, 20. natu: abl. of specification. — pueris: 'children,' so often in the pl.

80, 21. dixeramus: in 72, 19 ff.

80, 22. cum: as in 79, 20. — victoribus, etc.: 'that for the victors nothing was (sc. esse) forbidden (lit., 'hindered'), for the conquered there was no security.'

80, 23. consensu: manner.

80, 24. commemoranda: see on petendi, 75, 21.

80, 25. DC: note that this is abl. (sescentis), while D after ad is acc.

80, 26. possent: characteristic, hence it was subj. in dir. disc.

80, 27. Quos: see on quorum, 72, 1. — usus [esse] videretur: 'that he might be seen to have shown.'

80, 29. uti: 'to remain in the possession of.' — fnitimis: for the case, cf. rei, 73, 16. — ut . . . prohiberent: cf. ut . . . coniungerent, 79, 17.

BOOK THIRD

Campaign of 56 B.C. — At the end of the Belgian campaign Caesar quartered his legions for the winter among the Carnutes, Turoni, and Andes, tribes dwelling along the Loire (Liger), and himself returned as in the previous year to his Cisalpine province. At the same time he sent Galba with a small force into the Alpine region just east of Geneva for the purpose of opening up the road from Italy to Gaul over the Great St. Bernard, a route which had hitherto been extremely dangerous and subject to heavy tolls. This object, in spite of a few successful engagements, Galba was unable to accomplish, and he was soon forced to retreat for the winter into the district of the Allobroges.

During the winter a revolt broke out among the maritime states of northwestern Gaul. The initial step was taken by the Veneti, who seized two Roman officials sent to them to demand grain for the legions. The revolt spread rapidly and was joined by most of the tribes along the northern coast. To meet the dangers which threatened from many sides Caesar divided his army. Labienus was sent to the Treveri with orders to hold the Belgae in allegiance and to prevent the Germans from assisting the disloyal states. Crassus was despatched to Aquitania, while Sabinus undertook to keep the Venelli and their neighbors occupied at home. Decimus Brutus was put in charge of the fleet which had been collected to cooperate with Caesar himself in overpowering the Veneti. While Crassus and Sabinus had but little trouble in subduing the districts intrusted to them, Caesar found that the task he had taken upon himself was decidedly difficult. It was only towards the end of summer that by means of his fleet, which had long been detained at the mouth of the Loire by storms, he was able to inflict a crushing blow. This is the earliest recorded battle fought on the Atlantic.

All of the maritime states from Spain to the Rhine, with the exception of the Morini and the Menapii in northern Belgium, were now subject to Rome. Although the campaigning season was nearly over, Caesar led his army against these bold tribes, but his expedition was rendered fruitless by severe and continuous storms. His legions were quartered for the winter among the Aulerici, Lexovii, and other peoples lately subdued.

PAGE 81, LINE 1. CHAPTER I. If Caesar had here observed his custom of including in a single book the events of each year, he would have described Galba's Alpine expedition in the second book.—Cum . . . proficiisceretur: note the force of the tense with temporal cum; see on cum . . . conaretur, 53, 29. With the subj. the temporal clause does not date, or define the time of, the main action, but merely states a subordinate circumstance attending the main action.—Italiam: see on 57, 26.

81, 2. Galbam: although always befriended by Caesar, Galba joined the conspiracy against his life. He was great-grandfather of the emperor Galba.

81, 5. summas Alpes: 'the highest part of the Alps,' including Mont Blanc (15,780 feet), the Matterhorn (14,705), and Monte Rosa (15,215).

81, 6. iter: the route over the Great St. Bernard, which descends to Martigny (Octodurus). This was the nearest way from Italy to central or northern Gaul.—periculo: arising from the hostility of the mountaineers rather than from the difficulties of the way. Both periculo and portoribus express manner.¹

81, 7. conuerant: 'were (not 'had been') accustomed,' the perf. meaning 'I am (i.e. 'have become') accustomed.'² With the contracted form cf. conlocarat, 74, 9.

81, 8. arbitraretur: implied indirect discourse (see on habuerit, 53, 10), the subj. implying that, in giving Galba permission to winter his legion in the Alps, Caesar said si . . . arbitraberis, 'if you (shall) think it necessary.'—uti . . . conlocaret: complementary or subst. clause, dir. obj. of permisit.³

81, 9. secundis . . . facta: translate these ablatives absolute like indic. clauses, 'Galba fought several successful engagements,' etc. Begin a new sentence with missis, and a third with constituit, introducing the former by 'consequently,' 'accordingly,' or the like, and the latter by 'so.'

81, 14. qui vicus: see on qua, 51, 11.

82, 2. flumine: the Dranse, a mountain stream which flows into the Rhone at the great bend.—divideretur: with causal cum.⁴

82, 3. vacuam, etc.: 'that had been left free from them.'⁵

82, 4. Eum locum: the part occupied by Galba was fortified like a regular camp.

82, 5. CHAPTER 2. hibernorum: 'of their winter encampment.'—transissent: cf. the tense with proficisceretur, 81, 1. For the contraction, see on 59, 30.

82, 8. concesserat: not a part of the scouts' report, but an explanation of Caesar for the reader; hence the indic.¹ Impenderent,² on the other hand, represents impending of the original report. For the sequence, depending not on teneri but on factus est, see on debuerint, 58, 15.

82, 11. ut . . . caperent: a complementary or subst. clause in apposition with id, and expressing result.³

82, 12. neque eam plenissimam: 'and that not in its full strength'; the reason is explained by the ablatives absolute. This legion had also met heavy losses in the battle with the Nervii (78, 16 ff.).

82, 13. compluribus: with absentibus.

82, 16. cum . . . decurrerent: 'when they themselves should rush down,' representing *decurremus*⁴ of their original thought.

82, 18. Accedebat quod: 'furthermore' (lit., 'there was added the fact that'). The clause with quod is subject⁵ of accedebat.

82, 19. abstractos [esse]: indir. disc. depending on dolebant.—nomine: abl. of manner.

82, 22. sibi persuasum habebant: 'they had the firm conviction' (lit., 'held it persuaded to themselves,' see on 61, 6). The conviction is expressed by indir. disc., Romanos . . . conari, etc., with which persuasum agrees as a neuter pred. adj.

82, 25. CHAPTER 3. opus hibernorum: 'the work on the winter quarters,' adapting the village to a military camp, but not including the building of fortifications (munitiones).—essent perfectae: see on captus est, 69, 18.

82, 28. nihil, etc.: 'that there need be no fear of war.'

82, 29. consilio: probably composed of the tribunes of the legion and the centurions of the first cohort; see Introd. § 36.

82, 30. periculi: partit. gen. with tantum.¹

83, 2. multitudine: not agent, as in 82, 9, but means.

83, 3. subsidio: dat. of purpose.²—veniri: impers.,³ with posset implied from possent, 'and nobody could come to their relief.'

83, 5. ut . . . contenderent: complementary or subst. clause of purpose,⁴ in apposition with sententiae.

83, 6. pervenissent: subj. of attraction.⁵

83, 7. Maiori . . . parti placuit: 'the majority voted.' The infins. are the subjects of placuit.

83, 10. CHAPTER 4. vix ut: see on vix qua, 54, 20.

83, 11. constituissent: see on pertinerent, 52, 25.

83, 13. decurrere, concicere: 'came running down,' 'and kept hurling'; see on flagitare, 61, 20.

83, 14. integris viribus: 'so long as their strength was unimpaired,' abl. abs. expressing time.

83, 16. superiore: of the rampart, see 82, 4.

83, 17. defensoribus: abl. of separation.⁶

83, 18. hoc (abl. of cause) superari quod: 'were at a disadvantage from the fact that' (lit., 'on this account, namely, because'); the clause with quod is in apposition with hoc, and takes the indic. because Caesar states the reason as his own.

83, 19. defessi: 'when exhausted.'—integris viribus: abl. of quality.⁷

83, 20. quarum rerum: partit. with nihil,⁸ 'whereas none of these (see on qua, 51, 11) things.'

83, 21. non modo . . . sed ne . . . quidem, etc.: 'not only was there no opportunity given to the exhausted man . . . but not even to the wounded man,' etc. The negative in ne . . . quidem applies also to the first clause. Sometimes non modo non is written, as in 73, 21.

83, 23. sui recipiendi: 'of recovering himself.' Observe that excedendi is a gerund, while relinquendi and recipiendi are gerundives; see on proficiscendum, 52, 25.

83, 24. CHAPTER 5. Cum . . . pugnaretur: 'when the battle had been raging' (and was still raging¹). — horis: see on millibus, 61, 17.

83, 26. languidioribus nostris: 'as our men were growing weaker,' abl. abs. expressing cause.²

83, 27. fossas: pl., because the ditch was being filled at several places; cf. ripis, 77, 14.

83, 30. diximus: see 78, 24 f.

84, 2. unam: regularly emphatic, 'only one.' — si . . . experirentur: the condition, in apposition with spem, is indirectly quoted from si . . . experiemur. Secondary sequence³ is common with the pres. of vivid narration (hist. pres.), the action being past though stated as present.⁴

84, 3. auxilium: 'resource.'

84, 4. intermitteret: indir. disc. for intermittite,⁵ 'he tells the soldiers they are to stop fighting.'

84, 5. tantummodo . . . exciperent: 'merely receive,' not throwing any weapons back, but keeping them to use when the sortie is made.

84, 6. post: beware of confusing post (adv.) with postquam (conj.).

84, 8. CHAPTER 6. Quod: see on qui, 51, 2.

84, 9. portis: abl. of the way by which.⁶ — cognoscendi: gerund depending on facultatem.

84, 10. fieret: though depending on cognoscendi, it takes its sequence⁷ from relinquunt (see on si . . . experirentur, l. 2). — sui colligendi: 'of rallying' ('pulling themselves together'); sui, having the form of a singular, is accompanied, even when plural, by a singular gerundive.⁸ Another explanation makes sui obj. gen. limiting a gerund.

84, 11. eos . . . circumventos interficiunt: 'those who had, etc., were surrounded and slain'; for the pass. in translation, see on qui, 51, 2.

84, 12. potiundorum: see on faciundi, 55, 24.

84, 13. millibus XXX: a comparison with the population in this district to-day makes it almost certain that this number is exaggerated, but it is probably the estimate reported to Caesar by Galba.

84, 17. armis: abl. of separation with exutis, which belongs with copiis. They were so hotly pursued that they threw their arms away in order to run faster.

84, 19. saepius: 'too often.'¹

84, 20. alio . . . viderat: 'remembered that he had come into winter quarters with one purpose (see 81, 5-8), but saw that he had met with other results.'

84, 21. rebus: for the case, cf. pugnantibus, 76, 16.

84, 26. CHAPTER 7. cum: concessive.²

84, 27. inita hieme: abl. abs. expressing time. — Illyricum: this was the eastern part of Caesar's Cisalpine province. Caesar had been in Cisalpine Gaul during Galba's campaign.

85, 5. proximus: 'nearest' (of all Caesar's officers). The others were stationed for the winter among the Turoni and the Carnutes. — mare: the acc. is sometimes used with proximus as with prope; but see 51, 9 f., where the dat. is used.

85, 8. complures: with civitates.

85, 10. Coriosolitas: see on Lingonas, 69, 23.

85, 12. CHAPTER 8. Huius civitatis: the last mentioned. The Veneti were the principal seafaring people of Gaul and controlled the carrying trade with Britain. Their monopoly was in danger from the Romans, for Caesar's intention to invade Britain was already known. Consequently, although in common with other Aremoric states they had submitted to Crassus in the summer of 57 B.C., they seized the first opportunity to assert their independence, and hoped by uniting all their allies to overthrow Caesar's ambitious designs.

85, 13. orae: partit. gen. with the superlative,³ and itself limited by the poss. gen. regionum.

85, 14. consuerunt: see on consuerant, 81, 7.

85, 15. scientia, usu: abl. of specification, cf. virtute, 51, 12.

85, 17. portibus interiectis: abl. abs. expressing cause; 'and since in the midst of the mighty violence . . . there are only a few scattered harbors.' — omnes: obj. of habent, with vectigales as pred. acc. As the Veneti had a monopoly of the harbors on this stormy coast, they exacted heavy tolls from all shipmasters who entered them.

85, 20. dedissent: in the previous summer; see on huius civitatis, l. 12.

85, 21. ut: with the indic. cannot mean 'that.'—subita, etc.: the inconstancy of the Gauls is often mentioned by Caesar and others.

85, 24. communi consilio: 'with a common purpose'; abl. of manner.

85, 27. acceperint: implied indir. disc. (see on habuerit, 53, 10), for accepistis of the actual exhortation. With the primary sequence, cf. si . . . experirentur, 84, 2 f., and see note. — quam: 'than.'

85, 30. Si, etc.: indir. quotation of the message. — remittat: cf. intermitterent, 84, 4.

86, 2. CHAPTER 9. longius: 'too far' to take command himself. — naves longas: see Introd. § 48.

86, 6. per . . . potuit: 'the season of the year allowed' (lit., 'he could, owing to the season'). He probably reached his army in May. He was at Lucca in April, arranging affairs of state with Pompey and Crassus. See Introd. § 9.

86, 9. quantum . . . admisissent: indir. quest.

86, 10. legatos . . . retentos [esse]: indir. disc. depending on intellegebant, and in apposition with facinus, 'namely, that envoys,' etc. — quod nomen: 'a name which,' see on quod tempus, 75, 6. An appositive word which is also the antecedent of a rel. pron. is taken into the rel. clause.

86, 14. instituunt: 'begin.' — hoc . . . quod: see on hoc superari quod, 83, 18. — natura: loc. abl. with confidebant.¹

87, 1. inscientiam: i.e. of the Romans.

87, 2. neque . . . confidebant: the connective belongs with confidebant, the negative with posse; 'and they trusted that our armies could not.'

87, 3. diutius: 'very long.'

87, 4. iam ut, etc.: 'even supposing everything turned out'; the only other instance in Caesar of ut introducing an assumption or concession² is in 198, 12.

87, 5. navibus: abl. of specification. — posse: indir. disc. depending on perspiciebant, l. 9.

87, 14. Morinos, Menapios: in northern Belgium; the other peoples named were neighbors of the Veneti.

87, 19. CHAPTER 10. iniuria retentorum equitum: 'the outrage of holding Roman knights'; in the genitive phrase the participle contains the leading idea.² The tribunes (85, 7) were regularly chosen from the equestrian rank; see Introd. § 34.

87, 21. ne . . . arbitrarentur: a subst. clause, equiv. to another nominative in apposition with multa (l. 18); translate, 'the fear that,³ if this region should be disregarded, the remaining peoples,' etc.

87, 23. cum: causal. — novis rebus⁴ studere: cf. ut . . . consilia, 85, 21 f.

88, 3. conentur: implied indir. disc., for a fut. indic. of the actual command; see on habuerit, 53, 10.

88, 6. nationibus: pl., of the different tribes of Aquitania. — Galliam: used in a restricted sense, as in 51, 19, of the land of the Galli; see 51, 4. Probably Caesar was needlessly alarmed as to the danger of the Aquitanians taking part in the Venetan war, for, being of different stock and speech, they never made common cause with the rest of the Gauls.

88, 9. qui . . . curet: rel. clause of purpose,¹ 'to see that their troops were kept back.' For the gerundive, see on 59, 18. — Brutum: Brutus, like Galba (see on 81, 2), showed the basest ingratitude to Caesar by joining the conspiracy against his life. Do not confuse Decimus Brutus with his more famous kinsman, Marcus.

88, 12. possit: for an original poteris; see on conentur, l. 3.

88, 14. CHAPTER 12. eius modi: pred. gen. of quality.²

88, 16. pedibus: abl. of means, 'by land.' — haberent: in a complementary or subst. clause of result in apposition with eius modi.³ — cum: temporal.

88, 17. spatio: time within which.⁴

88, 19. adflictarentur: subj. of attraction,⁵ the causal clause being an essential part of the result. — The high tide overflowed the isthmus connecting a town with the mainland. At low tide the town was left high and dry on all sides, so that a ship which had come near to the town at high tide was obliged to go out with the ebbing tide or be stranded on the shallows. — utraque re: 'by both circumstances.'

88, 20. operis: the Roman 'works,' explained by the abls. abs. extruso . . . adaequatis.

88, 21. superati: agrees with the subject of coeperant. — extruso, etc.: 'when the sea had been shut off by a massive dike and the works had been made equal in height to the walls of the town.' Apparently the Romans built a broad dike or embankment across the low ground which was overflowed at high tide, and as it approached the town its elevation was increased until it equaled the height of the town walls. Thus it not only gave uninterrupted access to the town by land, but also served 88, 23. cuius rei: 'of which,' referring to navium.

88, 24. deportabant, etc.: conclusion of the condition si . . . coeperant, the imperf. showing that this was their customary conduct as one town after another was attacked.

88, 26. eo . . . quod: 'from the fact that' (lit., 'on that account, because'); eo is abl. of cause and is explained by the appositive causal clause. — partem: acc. of duration of time.

88, 28. detinebantur: doubtless near the mouth of the Loire; see 86, 3. The Roman ships were not so well adapted as those of the Veneti to the rough waters of this coast, and the Romans themselves were unused to the open ocean. — summa: with difficultas; the separation of words belonging together emphasizes them both.¹ — vasto . . . portibus: abls. abs., expressing cause.

89, 1. CHAPTER 13. Namque: introduces a further explanation of facilius, 88, 26, 'but the Veneti were not troubled, for'; namque generally implies an omission which is easily supplied from the context. — ipsorum: 'their own.'

89, 5. erectae: 'straight.'

89, 6. accommodatae: 'being adapted,' applies to both prorae and puppae.

89, 7. robore: abl. of material.² — quamvis; the indef. pron.

89, 8. transtra: 'cross-beams,' supporting the deck and strengthening the sides. The usual meaning, 'rowers' benches,' is not possible here, for the Venetan ships were propelled by sails alone; see 91, 4 f. — ex . . . trabibus: 'of timbers a foot thick.'

89, 9. digiti . . . crassitudine: 'of a thumb's thickness,' abl. of quality, with a gen. instead of the usual adj.³ — pro funibus: this implies that the Romans used ropes.

89, 14. tanta onera navium: 'such heavy ships'; not 'ships of such burden,' which has a different meaning.

89, 16. classi: dat. of possessor, but translate, 'the encounter of our fleet.'

89, 17. pulsu remorum: 'in rowing'; for the abl., cf. scientia, 85, 15. — reliqua, etc.: 'while in all other respects, considering the nature of the locality and the violence of the storms, the Venetan ships had an equipment more suitable and appropriate than ours.' Grammatically reliqua is subject of essent, which is parallel with praestaret; illis [navibus] is dat. of possessor.

89, 19. iis: essential complement or indir. obj. of nocere.¹

89, 21. adigebatur: 'could be thrown so as to reach its mark,' the potential use of the verb; cf. transitur, 54, 26.

89, 22. copulis, etc.: the Romans always endeavored in a naval battle to run alongside of the enemy's ships, to make them fast to their own by grappling hooks, and to board them; for in a hand-to-hand fight they had good hopes of proving superior, but as seamen they never showed remarkable cleverness. — Accedebat ut: 'furthermore,' cf. accedebat quod, 82, 18. The subjects of accedebat are the complementary or subst. result clauses ut . . . ferrent,² etc.

89, 23. se vento dedissent: 'they (the Venetan ships) ran before the wind'; a stereotyped nautical phrase, hence ventus is repeated. — et (before tempestatem) . . . et . . . et: correlatives, 'not only . . . but also . . . and.'

89, 24. consisterent: 'anchored.' — aestu: personified and given the construction of a voluntary agent.³

89, 29. CHAPTER 14. neque iis, etc.: 'and that they could not be harmed' (lit., 'it could not be harmed to them'); verbs which, like noceo, take a dat. of the essential complement (indir. obj.) are impersonal in the passive, and the dat. is retained.⁴

89, 30. Quae: see on quorum, 72, 1.

90, 3. portu: probably in the Auray River.

90, 4. Bruto: essential complement (indir. obj.) of constabat.

90, 5. tribunis, etc.: these were army officers, and the fighters on the ships were legionaries. In ancient times a naval service distinct from the military was unknown. See Introd. § 48.

90, 8. Rostro: instrumental, as in 89, 19. — noceri, etc.: impers. (see on 89, 29) without a complement, 'no harm could be done.' — cognoverant: 'they knew,' not however implying that there had been any naval engagement. — turribus . . . excitatis: that the abl. abs. is concessive is seen from the following tamen.

90, 9. ex . . . navibus: 'on the . . . ships'; see on a, 51, 16.

90, 11. gravius: they gained velocity by their descent from the higher level.

90, 12. usui: see on auxilio, 88, 2.

90, 13. longuriis: dat. of essential complement (indir. obj.) with the cpd. participles. — forma: abl. of quality, 'of a shape not unlike that of wall-hooks.'

91, 1. falcium: poss. gen. with an implied formae depending on absimili. These hooks were used for pulling down city walls. — cum: 'as often as,' 'every time'; temporal and conditional clauses expressing repeated action commonly take the indicative.¹

91, 4. navibus: dat. of interest or reference.²

91, 6. uno tempore: 'in a single moment.'

91, 9. res gerebatur: 'the action was taking place.' This is the earliest recorded battle fought on the Atlantic Ocean. — paulo fortius: 'unusually brave'; paulo denotes the amount of difference³ between these and ordinary deeds.

91, 10. colles: probably the heights of St. Gildas.

91, 12. CHAPTER 15. cum: as in l. 1. — singulas, etc.: as soon as a Venetan ship had been disabled in its sails, which were its only means of propulsion, the Romans had no trouble in surrounding it with two or three of their ships and overpowering it by their usual mode of fighting; see on copulis, 89, 22.

91, 16. cum: causal.⁴

91, 17. conversis, etc.: i.e. so as to sail before the wind. The battle probably took place in late summer (see 88, 26 f.), and at that season in these regions to-day the wind usually dies out about noon.

91, 23. cum . . . pugnaretur: 'since the battle lasted,' explaining how it happened that night afforded escape to a few of the enemy. — hora . . . quarta: between nine and ten in the forenoon.

91, 26. CHAPTER 16. cum . . . tum: 'not only . . . but furthermore.'¹

91, 27. astatis: gen. of quality.

91, 28. aliquid, etc.: 'some degree of discretion or of prestige.' — consili: partit. gen.;² so navium with quod, 'what ships there had been anywhere.'

91, 30. quo: rel. adv., introducing a characteristic clause;³ the implied antecedent may be expressed in translation, 'they had neither a refuge to which they might withdraw nor a means of defending their towns.'

92, 2. eo: abl. of cause, explained by the appositive purpose clause quo . . . conservaretur; cf. eo . . . minus . . . quod, 60, 8 f. Translate eo gravius 'the more severely.'

92, 3. vindicandum [esse]; impers., 'that punishment must be inflicted.' — quo: see on 56, 7.

92, 5. sub corona: this phrase arose, as the Romans believed, from an ancient custom, which had long since died out, of putting wreaths on the heads of captives in war who were to be sold at auction. The sale was conducted by the quaestor, and the principal purchasers were wholesale slave dealers. Caesar is said by Plutarch to have taken a million captives in his Gallic campaigns, a large part of whom were probably sold into slavery. — It is not to be supposed that the state of the Veneti was utterly annihilated, for they are named later (159, 20) as contributors to the force which was mustered by the Gauls for the relief of Alesia. But their position as leaders was gone forever.

92, 6. CHAPTER 17. geruntur: see on conquiruntur, 70, 4.

92, 7. copiis: see 88, 8.

92, 11. copias: probably forces not regularly organized as an exercitus. — his paucis diebus: 'within a few days' after Sabinus's arrival.

92, 13. nolebant: for the pl., see end of note on exirent, 52, 10.

92, 18. omnibus rebus: 'in all respects.'¹ — loco: cf. locis, 54, 26. — castris: loc. abl. with instrumental force, hence used without in.²

92, 19. millium: sc. passuum. — spatio: abl. of the amount of difference,³ 'at a distance.' — consedisset, faceret: subj. with concessive cum. Note the difference in tense, the former expressing completed, the latter incomplete, action at the time of the main verb tenebat.

92, 21. hostibus: dat. of interest or reference.⁴

92, 22. non nihil: 'somewhat,' the defining or cognate acc.⁵

92, 26. eo: Caesar.

92, 27. legato: dat. of the agent⁶ with the impers. gerundive dimicandum [esse], 'that a lieutenant ought to fight.'

93, 3. CHAPTER 18. auxili causa: 'as a reinforcement,' see Introd. § 29. — Huic and uti . . . transeat: see on civitati, 52, 9.

93, 5. pro perfuga: 'as a deserter.'

93, 7. prematur: indir. quest., like velit, l. 5.

93, 8. neque longius, etc.: 'and that not later than the next night Sabinus will,' etc. (lit., 'and that it is not farther away but that on the next night Sabinus will,' etc.).

93, 9. educat: with quin, depending on a neg. expression of abstaining.⁷ The clause is subject of abesse.

93, 12. iri oportere: 'that they ought to go.' An impersonal passive⁸ of forms of eo is not uncommon; it must be translated as active.

93, 13. superiorum dierum: 'on the previous days,' see on eorum . . . perspecta, 73, 6.

93, 15. erat provisum: impers., 'provision had been made.'

93, 16. quod fere, etc.: 'the fact that,' etc.; the clause is appositive⁹ with res (l. 13). Cf. our proverb, "the wish is father to the thought," and the remark in parenthesis, 173, 22 ff.

93, 17. non prius . . . quam: 'not . . . until.' Ante and prius regularly stand in the main clause when it is negative; otherwise they are usually, but not always, united with quam at the head of the subordinate clause.

93, 18. sit concessum: implied indir. disc.,¹ representing fut. perf.² of the direct thought, which was, Non prius vos dimittemus quam a vobis erit concessum, etc.

93, 19. arma uti, etc.: see on vix qua, 54, 20. — uti capiant: complementary or subst. clause of purpose, subject of sit concessum.

93, 20. ut explorata victoria: 'as if victory were certain,' abl. abs. expressing condition; cf. hac parte neglecta, 87, 21.

93, 21. quibus . . . compleant: rel. clause of purpose.

93, 24. CHAPTER 19. passus mille: acc. of extent of space with acclivis.

93, 25. quam minimum spati: 'the least possible time,' subject of daretur.

93, 28. cupientibus: sc. iis (dat.); translate, 'for which they are eager.'

94, 8. ad bella suscipienda, etc.: cf. omnes . . . excitari, 87, 23 f.

94, 9. animus, mens: 'spirit, purpose.'

94, 13. CHAPTER 20. Aquitaniam: see 88, 4 f., and second sentence of the note on Galliam, 88, 6. — ante: referring inexactly to 51, 2 and 52, 2 ff.

94, 15. tertia pars: it will be seen by consulting the map (see frontispiece) that this is an exaggerated estimate; but see on spectant in, 52, 1. — cum intellegeret: in translating begin a new sentence here, making cum . . . pervenisset (l. 12 f.) an independent statement, 'Crassus arrived,' etc.

94, 16. sibi: see on legato, 92, 27. — annis: abl. of the amount of difference; cf. paulo, 91, 9. These defeats occurred in 78 B.C., when the Aquitanians were in alliance with Sertorius, and Manlius was governor of the Roman province (Provincia).

94, 19. non: immediately precedes the word it limits. A negation which amounts to a strong affirmation of its opposite is called litotes, as here 'no ordinary' = 'extraordinary'; cf. minime . . . saepe, 51, 7 f.

94, 20. Translate the abl. abs. of this sentence as independent statements, 'he made provision for a supply of grain,' etc.

94, 21. comparato: observe the agreement; cf. captus est, 69, 18. —

BOOK FOURTH

Campaign of 55 B.C.— In the winter of 56-55 B.C., while Caesar was attending to the civil duties of his governorship in Cisalpine Gaul, the report reached him that two German tribes, the Usipetes and Tencteri, had crossed the Rhine and settled down in the Menapian territory. Their presence was a grave menace to Roman authority in Gaul. Caesar knew that the inconstant Gallic peoples, all of whom, except the Morini and the Menapii (99, 17 ff.) and a few mountain tribes in Aquitania (98, 16 f.) and in Helvetia (84, 19 ff.), had now submitted to the rule of Rome, would most likely invite these invading Germans to assist them in overthrowing their Roman master. Accordingly he returned to his army earlier than usual, and marched straightway against the Germans, who had by this time moved as far south as the country of the Eburones and the Condrusi. Having been treacherously attacked during a truce, with no less treachery he fell upon the enemy in camp the next day and massacred almost their entire force, men, women, and children. Their cavalry alone escaped across the Rhine and found refuge among the Sugambri, who refused Caesar's demand for their surrender.

Although Gaul was thus freed from present danger, Caesar believed that it would be a safeguard against future invasions if he should show the Germans that they were not secure even on their own soil. He was desirous, too, of punishing the Sugambri for harboring his enemies. Furthermore, the ambition of being the first Roman to lead an army across the Rhine doubtless was not without its influence. In order to impress the barbarians as thoroughly as possible with the ability and resourcefulness of the Romans, he was not content to cross by boats in the barbarian way, but from some point on the Treveran bank, not far from the mouth of the Moselle (Mosella), he built a bridge, so strong and substantial that, as Plutarch says, one who saw it could hardly believe that it had been made in ten days. The Germans, with the exception of the Ubii, who had put themselves under his protection, decamped at his approach; and as he was unwilling to incur the risk of following them into their boundless forests, he devastated their territories and returned to Gaul.

The year 55 B.C. is of great interest to English-speaking peoples, because it marks the first visit of Romans to Britain. This expedition was only a reconnaissance preliminary to a more extensive enterprise the next year.

This season's campaigning was closed by the subjugation of the Morini. The Menapian territory was ravaged, but the people took refuge again, as in the previous year, in their dense forests.

PAGE 100, LINE 2. CHAPTER I. Cn. . . consulibus: = 55 B.C.; see on M., 52, 7, and consulibus, 52, 8. Before 46 B.C., when Caesar established the Julian system, which is still in use, there was much confusion in the Roman calendar (see on 55, 5). The year 55 B.C. began more than a month before the winter solstice, so that Caesar here speaks of the winter of 56-55 as belonging altogether to the year 55.

100, 4. transierunt: probably not far from where the Waal (Vacalus) branches off from the Rhine.

100, 5. quo: adv. = in quod.

100, 6. annos: expresses the duration of exagitati. — premebantur, etc.: note the tense expressing continuance, and the mood showing that Caesar states the reason on his own authority.¹

100, 9. pagos: 'divisions,' probably used here of the people, not of the country. — ex quibus . . . singula millia: 'from each of which . . . a thousand.'²

100, 10. causa: observe that in this meaning it regularly follows its genitive; cf. causa transeundi, l. 5, in a different meaning.

100, 13. ratio atque usus: 'theory and practice.'

100, 14. privati, etc.: private ownership of land belongs to a more advanced state of civilization than had been reached by these peoples. — agri: partit. gen. with nihil.

100, 15. anno: abl. of comparison with longius.

100, 16. frumento: abl. of means. — maximam partem: adverbial acc.²

100, 18. quae res: 'and this way of living'; see on quorum, 72, 1, and res, 53, 22. — genere: abl. of cause.

100, 19. a pueris: 'from childhood.' — officio: abl. of means, the regular construction with adsuefacio in Caesar's time; a little later the dat. began to be used, thus corresponding to the English idiom.

100, 21. magnitudine: pred. use of abl. of quality.³

101, 1. homines: pred. acc.; sc. eos as dir. obj.

101, 2. ut . . . haberent . . . et lavarentur: complementary or subst. clauses of result,⁴ in apposition with eam consuetudinem. Note the secondary sequence depending on a perf. definite.⁵ Translate, 'and they have acquired the custom, although their country is very cold (i.e. from a Roman's point of view; abl. abs. expressing concession), of having no clothing . . . and of bathing,' etc. — vestitus: partit. gen. with quicquam.

101, 4. lavarentur: reflexive use of the passive.⁶

101, 5. CHAPTER 2. eo, ut . . . habeant: 'for the sake of their having purchasers of what they have taken in war'; eo, 'on that account,' is explained by the appositive purpose clause; cf. 60, 8 f., where a causal clause explains eo; ceperint and vendant are in characteristic clauses.⁷

101, 6. quam quo: introduces an untenable reason (equivalent to non quo), 'than because.'⁸

101, 7. ad se: omit in translation.

101, 8. pretio: abl. of price.

102, 29. nihil . . . committendum: 'that no confidence at all ought to be placed in them.' Nihil is adv. acc., and the gerundive (sc. esse) is impersonal.

102, 30. consuetudinis: pred. gen. of possession.¹— uti . . . cogant, quaerant, circumsistat, cogat: in apposition with hoc, 'it is a Gallic custom to force,' etc.

103, 3. et . . . vulgus circumsistat: 'and for a crowd to flock around.'

103, 6. quorum eos . . . paenitere, etc.: 'of which they must repent.'² Eos is obj. of paenitere (cf. Genesis 6, 6, 'And it repented the Lord that he had made man on the earth'), which is itself subject of est.

103, 7. rumoribus: essential complement or indir. obj. of serviant, 'are slaves to.'

103, 8. plerique: the viatores. — eorum: 'of the questioners.'— facta respondeant: 'mold their answers.'

103, 9. CHAPTER 6. graviori: 'too serious.'— bello: essential complement or indir. obj. of an intr. compound verb.³

103, 10. consuerat: see on consuerant, 81, 7. — exercitum: quartered in several states west of the Seine; see 99, 19 f.

103, 27. laccessantur: 'if they are attacked,' for fut. indic. of dir. disc. Although the verb which introduces the quotation is past, Caesar uses primary sequence¹ throughout this speech, thus more nearly reproducing the original form. — quin . . . contendant: obj. of the neg. verb of refusing. See on educat, 93, 9.

103, 28. consuetudo sit . . . tradita: 'it is the custom . . . handed down.' — quicumque: the antecedent (iis, indir. obj. of resistere) may be omitted in English as well as in Latin.

103, 29. Haec tamen dicere: 'they have this to say however.' The subject of an infin. may be omitted if there is no chance for ambiguity. It is here first expressed with concedere, 104, 3.

104, 1. iis: the Romans.

104, 2. attribuant: 'let the Romans assign,' for imper., attribuunto, of dir. disc.² — eos: sc. agros. — possederint: from possido.

104, 4. reliquum . . . neminem: 'but there is not any one else on earth.'

104, 5. possint: in a characteristic clause,³ hence it was subj. in the dir. disc.

104, 6. CHAPTER 8. quae: obj. of respondere, which is implied as subject of visum est.

104, 8. remanerent: for fut. indic. of dir. disc. The secondary sequence depends on fuit, but the remaining subsj. of this passage preserve their original tense, in violation of sequence; see on liceat, 55, 20. Do not imitate this shift of sequence in translation.

104, 10. occupare: see on obtinere, 51, 15. With its implied subject eos (antecedent of qui) it is subject of esse.

104, 13. et . . . querantur et . . . petant: 'complaining . . . and asking'; the pres. part. is not so freely used in Latin as in English.

104, 14. hoc . . . imperaturum: 'that he would enjoin this upon the Ubii.'

104, 17. CHAPTER 9. post diem tertium: 'in two days.' The Romans reckoned the day of departure as the first day; we leave it out of account.

104, 18. propius: used as a prep.¹

104, 19. ab: 'from.'

104, 21. trans: to the west side.

104, 24. CHAPTER 10. Vosego: Caesar comprehends under this name not only the Vosges Mountains, but also the plateau of Langres, in which the Meuse rises, and the Monts Faucilles, which unite the plateau with the Vosges.

104, 25. parte . . . recepta: 'taking up a branch from the Rhine.' The Waal (Vacalus) is to-day much the most important mouth of the Rhine.

104, 27. inde: from the junction of the Meuse and the Waal, which may have been farther east than at present. — millibus: as in 61, 17.

104, 28. ex: 'in'; cf. ab . . . finibus oriuntur, 51, 19, and see on a, 51, 16.

104, 29. spatio: 'course,' abl. of manner. — Nantuatum, etc.: the list of peoples whose territories are here said to have touched the Rhine is neither accurate nor complete (see on spectant in, 52, 1). The Nantuates were south of Lake Geneva (Lacus Lemannus); see 81, 3 ff. The word per is applicable to the Triboci only.

105, 2. multis . . . effectis: 'making many large islands.' The abl. abs. is not to be translated literally.

105, 4. ex . . . qui: 'some of whom,' lit., 'from whom there are [some] who' (not 'of the sort who,' which would require a subj. of characteristic).

105, 5. capitibus: 'mouths,' abl. of means.

105, 6. CHAPTER 11. passuum XII millibus: Caesar had continued to draw nearer to the Germans; cf. 103, 24 and 104, 18. f. For the abl., see on passibus, 65, 27.

105, 7. erat constitutum: refers to the promise of the envoys to return in two days; see 104, 17.

105, 11. antecessissent: implied indir. disc.; see on habuerit, 53, 10. — praemitteret: without obj., 'send ahead to the cavalry.' The Roman army when on the march was usually led by cavalry and light-armed troops (Introd. § 45), whose duty in case of meeting the enemy was to hold him at bay until the infantry could be made ready for fighting.

105, 12. sibique ut: the pronoun is emphatic, in contrast with eos equites; cf. vix qua, 54, 20.

105, 17. eodem, etc.: 'tended to the same end'; eodem and illo are advs., explained by the appositive purpose clause.

105, 18. abessent: in a subordinate clause of indir. disc.

105, 21. convenirent: for convenire of dir. disc.; cf. attribuant, 104, 2.

105, 23. qui nuntiarent: 'men to announce'; see on qui, 51, 2.—ne . . . lacesserent: 'that they were not to attack,' indir. disc. for notite lacessere.¹

105, 24. sustinerent: cf. convenirent, l. 21. The Romans were to act merely on the defensive.

105, 25. accessisset: for perf. subj. of dir. disc., expressing an accomplished expectation, 'until he should [have] come.' The imperf. (for the pres. subj.² of dir. disc.) would be more usual, not implying accomplishment.

105, 26. CHAPTER 12. ubi primum: 'as soon as,' takes the same constr. as ubi.³

105, 27. millium: gen. of definition, or appositional gen.⁴

105, 28. equites: acc., amplius having no influence on the constr.;⁵ but cf. amplius . . . millibus, 61, 17.

106, 20. CHAPTER 13. ab iis qui: 'from men who,' with a clause of characteristic. The treachery of the Germans gave Caesar a welcome excuse for attacking them at once; for the superiority, which had just been proved, of the German over the Gallic cavalry, as well as the untrustworthiness of the Gauls, made clear the folly of waiting until the German cavalry should be reënforced.

106, 23. dementiae: pred. gen. of possession,⁴ 'was an act of the utmost folly.'

106, 24. autoritatis: partit. gen. with quantum, 'how great an influence.' The partit. gen. is usually separated from the word upon which it depends.

106, 25. quibus: the enemy.

106, 27. quaestore: probably here, as on some other occasions, the quartermaster was given an equal military authority with the lieutenants, having command of a legion. See Introd. § 33.—ne . . . praetermitteret: 'not to let any⁵ day for a battle go by,' in apposition with consilio.

106, 28. pugnae: gen. of poss.

106, 29. quod: 'in that'; the clause is in apposition with res.⁶—eadem: 'the same as before.'—perfidia: possibly the German chiefs and elders came in good faith to excuse the attack of their cavalry, but Caesar may well have believed that they were planning further treachery.

for his detention of the envoys or for his cold-blooded slaughter of women and children. When a public recognition of his victory was being voted in the senate at Rome, Cato led the opposition, declaring that Caesar ought to be handed over to the barbarians in order that the wrath of heaven might fall upon him alone and not on the state. See Plutarch, Life of Caesar, 22.

107, 24. CHAPTER 15. Germani: i.e. those who engaged with the Romans. — clamore audito cum . . . viderent: 'hearing the outcry . . . and seeing,' etc.

107, 25. abiectis, relictis: translate by finite verbs, 'they threw away,' etc.

107, 27. Rheni: loosely used for the Waal (Vacalus) branch; see 104, 26 and note on inde, 104, 27. — reliqua: 'further.'

107, 30. ex . . . timore: translate, 'relieved from fear.'

108, 1. cum: causal, explaining tanti. — capitum: partit. with millium, which is gen. of definition, as in 105, 27. The number seems incredible, but an exaggeration is not surprising if we remember how easily to-day extravagant reports are circulated in time of danger.

108, 8. CHAPTER 16. Caesar, etc.: on Caesar's invasion of Germany, see summary of Book IV, p. 321 f.

108, 9. illa: 'the following.' — iustissima: 'the most forcible.'

108, 11. cum intellegerent: implied indir. disc., representing Caesar's thought as suis . . . timebunt cum intellegent.

108, 13. Accessit . . . quod: see on accedebat quod, 82, 18.

108, 14. supra: in 104, 20 ff. — commemoravi: Caesar, the author, sometimes speaks in the first person, but his achievements are always described in the third.

108, 18. quos: the Sugambri.

108, 19. dederent: coördinated with postularent; see on adeat, 88, 1.

108, 20. The answer of the Sugambri is no less insolent than that of the Usipetes and Tencteri, 103, 25 ff. — Rhenum finire: the Rhine remained the boundary between Gaul and the barbarians until the fifth century. In later times Germans have generally possessed territory west of the river, and to-day the dearest ambition of the French people is to recover Alsace-Lorraine, which was taken by Germany in the war of 1870-71.

108, 21. Germanos . . . transire: subject of an implied esse, aequum being in the predicate.

108, 22. cur . . . postularet: indir. quest., for an original cur tui . . .

postulas. — sui imperi: poss. gen. used predicatively.¹ — esse: the infin. with postularet, 'expect,' which in the sense of 'ask' takes the subj. (generally with ut, but see dederent, l. 19). Translate, 'why did he expect anything across the Rhine to be under his control or power?'

108, 27. premerentur: implied indir. disc., giving the reason of the Ubii, not of the writer; see on quod . . . commississent, 107, 2.

108, 28. exercitum, Rhenum: see on partes, flumen, 58, 29. — transportaret: same constr. as ferret, l. 26.

109, 1. sibi: dat. of interest or reference; translate with ad, etc., 'for their help.'

109, 2. opinionem: 'reputation.' — eius: 'his.'

109, 3. Ariovisto pulso: see end of summary of Book I, p. 249. The abl. abs. expresses cause, 'because of the rout,' etc.

109, 10. CHAPTER 17. dignitatis: cf. imperii, 108, 22. Translate this sentence, 'but as to crossing in boats he not only thought it was not sufficiently safe but he also made up his mind that it was not in keeping with his own high position or that of Rome.' This preserves the prominence of transire (which is the subject of both tutum esse and dignitatis esse), and brings out the force of neque . . . neque, which frequently cannot be properly rendered by 'neither . . . nor.'

109, 12. latitudinem: probably Caesar crossed the Rhine at some point not more than ten miles north of the Moselle. Excavations of 1898–1899 furnished uncertain additional evidence in favor of Neuwied, eight miles north of the mouth of the Moselle. Napoleon and many others have preferred Bonn, which is only a few miles south of the mouth of the Sieg (Siga). The bridge cannot have been less than a quarter of a mile long.

109, 15. Rationem, etc.: 'the style of bridge he adopted was as follows.' — Too finished a structure should not be assumed, as only ten days were given to building it. It is probable that the different parts of the bridge were fastened together by ropes. — Tigna bina: 'pairs² of logs.'

110, 1. ab imo: 'at the lower ends'; see on a, 51, 16. — dimensa: 'proportioned'; pass., as in opere dimenso, 75, 3.

110, 2. intervallo: measure of difference, 'at a distance of two feet apart.' — inter se: 'together.' Two logs were laid on the ground two feet apart and fastened together by crosspieces. Probably about 100 such pairs were needed.

110, 3. Haec: translate, 'one of these pairs.' — cum: see on 91, 1. — machinationibus: a general word for machines, perhaps here derricks on rafts. — defixerat: merely of fixing the pointed ends of the pair in the bed of the river, while adegerat applies to driving the logs home with pile-drivers.

110, 4. sublicae modo: 'like a pile,' i.e. perpendicularly.

110, 5. secundum naturam fluminis: 'in the direction of the current.'

110, 6. duo: sc. tigna. Opposite the first pair of logs and slanting toward them another pair was set up at a distance of forty feet down-stream (ab inferiore parte).

110, 7. quadragenum: an old form of gen. pl., = quadragenorum; cf. Mediomatricum, 104, 30.

110, 9. Haec utraque: sc. tigna bina; subject of distinebantur. — insuper . . . immissis: abl. abs. expressing means. — trabibus: one of these beams (marked C in the cut) hewn, at least at the extremities, so as exactly to fit into the space between the two logs of each pair, and resting on the uppermost crosspieces which fastened the pair together, joined each upper pair with its corresponding pair down-stream.

110, 11. fibulis: what the nature of these fasteners was is not known. The cut on p. 109 shows as simple and effective a device as any that has been proposed. — If a pair of logs tended to yield to the force of the current, the rope-bound fasteners would press more firmly both against the connecting beams and the logs themselves. — ab extrema parte: the (upper) end of the pair of logs. Translate this sentence, 'on both these pairs beams were let down from above, two feet in thickness, just filling the space between the logs of each pair; and by these beams and two fasteners on each pair of logs at the end these opposite pairs were held apart' (i.e. prevented from slanting more and more towards each other). — quibus . . . revinctis: 'and as these logs were kept apart and fastened back in opposite directions.'

110, 13. ea: 'such.' — rerum: 'the structure.' — quo maior . . . hoc artius: 'the greater the force with which the water rushed on, the more closely'; cf. eo gravius . . . quo minus, 60, 10 f.

110, 14. incitavisset: subj. of attraction. — inligata: sc. tigna. — Haec, etc.: 'these frames (consisting of tigna and trabes) were joined together by timber laid on straight,' i.e. lengthwise of the bridge. Across these timbers poles (probably small trees stripped of branches) were laid, lying in the direction of the stream, and over the poles wicker-work was spread, woven of saplings and branches.

110, 16. nihilò setius: implying that the bridge was strong enough without these additions. — et: correlates with et in l. 19, 'piles were driven both on the down-stream side slantwise . . . and likewise others a little distance above the bridge.'

110, 17. oblique: slanting athwart the stream. — pro ariete subiectae: 'put underneath as a buttress'; cf. pro vallo, 69, 13 f. Probably each lower pair of logs was supported by two props, one on each side, leaning forward obliquely towards each other. They would in addition stiffen the bridge against longitudinal vibration.

110, 18. exciperent: 'should support,' purpose.

110, 19. aliae: it has commonly been assumed that three piles were planted before each upper pair of logs on the up-stream side, but there is no indication of the number in the text.

110, 22. neu, etc.: 'and that they (referring to earum rerum) might not damage the bridge.'

110, 23. CHAPTER 18. quibus: see on paucis diebus quibus, 96, 10. — coepta erat: the pass. is used with the pass. infin.

110, 25. partem: 'end.'

110, 26. Sugambrorum: see 108, 17 ff.

111, 1. hortantibus iis: 'at the instigation of those.'

111, 3. in solitudinem: observe that in Latin the idiom is limit of motion; in English, place where.

111, 4. CHAPTER 19. moratus, incensis: note the shift from the nom. to the abl. abs.; see on exustis, 54, 14. Translate the abl. parts. as active finite verbs.

111, 7. premerentur: implied indir. disc.; this would be formal indir. disc. if Caesar had written an infin., as se daturum pollicitus.

111, 9. more suo: cf. moribus suis, 53, 23.

111, 10. uti . . . convenirent: subst. clauses, objs. of the idea of urging (which may be expressed in translation) implied in nuntios dimisisse.

111, 13. medium: 'in the middle,' pred. adj.

111, 17. ut . . . liberaret: subst. clauses in apposition with rebus, and expressing the purpose of Caesar's expedition. Translate, 'namely, inspiring fear . . . avenging,' etc.

111, 19. XVIII: to be read duodeviginti.

111, 20. pröfectum: not pröfectum from pröfiscor.

111, 22. CHAPTER 20. Exigua . . . reliqua: abl. abs. denoting concession; connect in translation with the clause *etsi*¹ . . . hiemes, 'although but a small part of the summer was left and the winters,' etc.

111, 23. ad septentriones: cf. 51, 18, and 61, 21.

111, 24. in Britanniam: see summary of Book IV, p. 322.—Although this expedition was without important results, except as it prepared the way for the more extensive operations of the following summer, it yet marks one of the most noteworthy events in the history of Europe. Plutarch's words (Life of Caesar, 23) are interesting: "By invading an island, the reported extent of which had made its existence a matter of controversy among historians, many of whom questioned whether it were not a mere name and fiction, not a real place, he might be said to have carried the Roman empire beyond the limits of the known world."

111, 25. bellis: abl. of time when.

111, 26. sumministrata, etc.: the only instance mentioned by Caesar is in the Venetan war, 87, 15.

111, 27. magno . . . usui: dat. of tendency or service,² accompanied by a dat. of interest sibi, 'it would be a great advantage to him.'

112, 1. si . . . adisset, etc.: the conditional clauses serve as subjects of fore. The plpf. tenses represent fut. perfs. of dir. disc.

112, 3. fere: belongs with the following words, 'were generally unknown.' Probably the Venetan shipmasters, who controlled the carrying trade between Gaul and Britain (see 85, 14, and note on 85, 12), and some of the Belgian peoples were best informed.—*Neque enim . . . quisquam*³: 'and in fact nobody.'

112, 4. illo: adv.—his: dat., depending on the adj. notum.⁴

112, 6. Gallias: pl., of the divisions of Gaul (51, 1).

112, 7. neque quanta, etc.: the indir. quests. depend on reperire, l. 11.

112, 9. usum belli: 'experience in war.'

112, 10. maiorem: 'rather large.'⁵

cess shows, however, that he was not fitted for the task (see 113, 2 ff.), although he had the reputation of being a courageous and prudent officer (83, 30 f.).

112, 17. in Britanniam: depending on the verbal noun traiectus. If Caesar sailed from Port Itius, as he did the next year on his second expedition (124, 5 f.), the distance to Britain was only about thirty Roman miles (124, 7). Port Itius is probably to be identified with Wissant.

112, 19. quam . . . classem: 'the fleet which,' the antecedent appearing only in the rel. clause. — For this fleet, see 86, 2 f.

112, 23. dare: complementary infin. Verbs of promising commonly take the fut. infin. in indir. disc.¹ — imperio: indir. obj. of an intr. cpd. verb.

112, 26. Atrebatibus superatis: see 77, 6 ff.

112, 27. regem: eleven Gallic kings are named by Caesar. Probably monarchy had once prevailed throughout Gaul, but had been superseded in most states by republican or aristocratic forms of government. — ibi: among the Atrebates.

112, 29. his regionibus: in Belgium. — magni habebatur: 'was considered valuable.'²

112, 30. quas possit: the rel. clause often precedes its antecedent. The subj. is due to implied indir. disc., representing Caesar's order, as, Quas poteris adi civitates. — adeat, hortetur, nuntiet: coördinated with imperat; see on faciat, 65, 5.

113, 1. fidem sequantur: 'seek the protection.' — eo: indir. refl.,³ referring to the subject of the main verb imperat.

113, 2. quantum . . . potuit: 'so far as opportunity could be given a man.'

113, 4. auderet: characteristic subj.

113, 26. Huc accedebant: 'there were also' ('to these were added').

113, 28. eo loco: Port Itius, see on 112, 17.—a millibus passuum viii: 'eight miles away.'

113, 29. tenebantur, etc.: 'were kept from being able.'³

114, 3. ducendum: acc. of the gerundive, expressing purpose with a verb of giving.⁴

114, 6. CHAPTER 23. tertia fere vigilia: not far from midnight.

114, 7. ulteriorem portum: where the eighteen ships assigned to the cavalry were detained (113, 26 ff.). This harbor, called superior in 117, 14, was probably at or near modern Calais, which is not quite eight miles northeast of Wissant. This part of the French coast has changed greatly since Caesar's time.

114, 8. paulo tardius: 'a little too slowly,' i.e. to take advantage of the favorable wind. They did not sail for three days (see 117, 11 f.).

114, 12. ita montibus, etc.: 'was so closely bounded by mountains.' Caesar had apparently arrived off the chalk cliffs near Dover, which in clear weather were visible even from Gaul. It was from these white cliffs that the name Albion arose.

114, 15. dum . . . convenirent: 'for the rest of his ships to come up'; see on 55, 26.

114, 18. monuit: its obj. is the coördinate clause ad nutum . . . administrarentur; see on faciat, 65, 5. — ut . . . postularent: implied indir. disc. for *ut . . . postulant*¹ of Caesar's original admonition; 'as (see Vocab., s.v. ut) the theory of military science and especially manœuvres by sea require.'

114, 19. ut quae . . . haberent: 'since they have sudden and unsteady movement'; a causal rel. clause,² having habeant in the original speech. General truths in subordinate clauses take the present tense in English, but in Latin they follow the laws of sequence.

114, 24. progressus: from off Dover, probably northeastward to the neighborhood of Deal. — constituit: the vessels were moored as far inshore as possible; see l. 29 f. After the battle the ships of war were beached (117, 26).

114, 26. CHAPTER 24. quo genere: 'a class of warriors which,' referring to essedariis. Their mode of fighting is described in 119, 21 ff. See on quod nomen, 86, 10.

116, 6. CHAPTER 26. utrisque: the pl. is used of two groups, the sing. of two individuals.

116, 8. signa subsequi: each maniple had its own standard, but here, as in the battle with the Nervii (76, 21 f.), men did not try to find their proper maniple.

116, 9. alius, etc.: 'men from different ships' ('one man from one ship, another from another'). — quibuscumque signis: the implied antecedent (his signis, indir. obj. of the cpd. vb. adgregabat) may be omitted also in translation, 'gathered round whatever,' etc.

116, 11. ubi: 'whenever'; this meaning is shown by the plpf. tense in the subordinate clause with the imperf. in the main clause, these tenses being regularly so used to show customary or repeated past action.

116, 13. ab: 'on.'

116, 14. in universos: 'against the whole body.'

116, 16. quos: 'whomsoever'; see on ubi, l. 11.

116, 17. simul = simul atque.

116, 18. suis . . . consecutis: 'and all their comrades had come up.'

116, 19. neque: 'but . . . not.' — longius: 'very far.'

116, 20. equites: see on paulo tardius, 114, 8.

116, 21. Hoc, etc.: 'this was the only thing Caesar (dat. of possessor) lacked for his previous good fortune.'

116, 25. CHAPTER 27. daturos: sc. se; see on patri, 72, 4. — quae imperasset: representing quae imperaveris (fut. perf.) of dir. disc.

116, 27. supra: see 112, 26. In translation subordinate supra demonstraveram, 'who, as I pointed out above, was sent ahead.'

116, 28. illi: = Britanni.

116, 29. cum: concessive. — oratoris modo: 'in the character of an envoy.'

117, 2. imprudentiam: 'lack of discretion.'

117, 3. ignosceretur: sc. sibi; verbs which in the active take the dat. are impersonal in the passive, and the dat. remains.¹ — quod . . . intulissent: 'because, as he said, they had,' etc.: implied indir. disc.

117, 4. legatis missis: see 112, 23.

117, 11. CHAPTER 28. post diem quartum quam² . . . ventum: 'three days (see on 104, 17) after the arrival,' etc., i.e. August 30; see on 114, 10.

117, 13. supra: see 113, 26.

117, 14. superiore portu: see on ulteriorem portum, 114, 7.

117, 16. viderentur: 'were in sight.'

117, 19. propius: see on 104, 18. — sui: 'to themselves,' obj. gen.

117, 20. tamen: applies to the concessive abl. abs. ancoris iactis; 'and since, though they had cast anchor, they were nevertheless filling with water.'

117, 21. adversa nocte: 'even in the face of night'; concessive abl. abs.

117, 23. CHAPTER 29. luna: see on 114, 10.

117, 24. maritimos: omit in translation.

117, 25. incognitum: it would seem as if the Romans might have observed this fact during the Venetan war (cf. 88, 29). There is almost no tide in the Mediterranean.

117, 28. nostris: the men in camp. — administrandi, etc.: 'of controlling or helping the ships.'

118, 1. amissis: 'owing to the loss of,' etc. — *id quod*¹: id is in apposition with the antecedent sentence; quod is subject of accidere, which with its subject acc. is in turn the subject of erat.²

118, 4. possent: characteristic.

118, 5. hiemari (impers. pass.) . . . oportere: 'that the winter ought to be spent.'

118, 9. CHAPTER 30. inter se: see on 51, 4.

118, 11. quae . . . quod: 'which was more contracted, too, from the fact that'; see on hoc facilius . . . quod, 52, 12.

118, 13. optimum: pred. adj. with esse, which is in indir. disc. with duxerunt (= 'thought'); the subjects of esse are prohibere and producere. — factu: see on 53, 14.

118, 14. rebellione facta: 'to renew hostilities.'

118, 15. rem: 'the struggle.' — his . . . interclusis: abl. abs. expressing condition.

118, 18. castris: the Roman camp; the Britons had given up all warlike operations (117, 8 ff.).

118, 19. deducere: the men who had gone to their homes a few days before (117, 8) were now brought back secretly.

118, 21. CHAPTER 31. ex eventu: 'from what had happened to,' etc.

118, 22. ex eo, quod: 'from the fact that'; the causal clause is in apposition with the neuter eo. — fore . . . accidit: 'that that was coming which actually did happen.'

118, 25. quae . . . naves, earum: 'of those ships which'; see on 59, 11.

118, 26. aere: bronze, which was early used for a great variety of purposes, was more serviceable in ships than iron because of its freedom from rust.

118, 29. ut . . . posset: an impers. clause of result, obj. of effecit; ¹ 'he made it possible to sail fairly well with the rest.'

119, 1. CHAPTER 32. Dum: as in 113, 6.—legione . . . missa: translate as a main clause, 'one legion had been sent.'

119, 2. frumentatum: see on rogatum, 58, 12.

119, 3. neque ulla . . . interposita: 'and no suspicion of war for that time had been aroused.'

119, 4. hominum: Britons. Since some of them remained at work in their fields and others kept coming (note the freq. or intensive vb.²) even into the enemy's camp, the Romans were thrown off their guard.

119, 5. ii: begin a new sentence, 'presently those.'—in statione: one cohort was usually on guard before each of the four gates of the camp. See Intro. § 44.

119, 7. quam consuetudo ferret: 'than usual.'—parte: 'direction.'

119, 8. id quod erat: 'the truth.'

119, 9. aliquid . . . consili ³: 'namely, that some new plan had been formed,' etc.; indir. disc. in apposition with id.

119, 11. reliquas: i.e. four cohorts. Of the two legions which Caesar brought to Britain (113, 20) the seventh was out foraging; four cohorts of the tenth, which had been on guard at the four gates of the camp and so were already armed, were ordered out to relieve the seventh; only two cohorts could be spared to take their places, probably half a cohort being assigned to each gate; the remaining four cohorts were to arm and follow Caesar at once.—armari: 'to arm,' refl. use of the passive.⁴

119, 12. paulo longius: 'some little distance.'

119, 14. conferta legione: 'that the legion was crowded closely together and,' etc.

119, 16. una: note the full force, 'only one.'

119, 19. paucis interfectis: 'they killed a few and,' etc.—incertis ordinibus: 'since the ranks were not formed.'

119, 21. CHAPTER 33. pugnae: here with the force of a verbal noun ('fighting'), and so more easily modified by a prepositional phrase.

119, 23. equorum: subjective gen., 'terror caused by the horses.'
— ordines: of the enemy.

119, 24. cum: 'whenever'; this meaning is shown by the perf. tense in the subordinate clause with the pres. in the main clause, these tenses being regularly so used to show customary or repeated present action; cf. the note on 116, 11.

119, 25. equitum: of their own army.

119, 26. pedibus: cf. 101, 12.

119, 28. illi: 'the fighting men,' of whom there may have been six on each chariot.

119, 29. receptum: substantive.

120, 1. tantum . . . efficiunt: 'acquire such skill.'

120, 3. incitatos: 'even on the gallop.'

120, 4. iugo: the yoke, which held the two horses together and supported the pole. See the cut, p. 119.

120, 6. CHAPTER 34. rebus: abl. of means. — nostris: indir. obj. of tulit. — novitate: abl. of cause, 'owing to,' etc.

120, 11. allenum and suo: opposed to each other, 'unfavorable' and 'favorable.'

120, 13. haec: the battle. — qui . . . reliqui: the Britons who had stayed at work in the fields as a blind, 119, 4.

120, 15. quae . . . continerent: 'so severe as to keep.'

120, 24. ut . . . effugerent: a subst. clause of result, in apposition with idem.¹

120, 26. equites XXX: not enough to be very effective in attack, but useful in pursuing and cutting down a flying enemy.

120, 27. ante: see 112, 26 ff., and 116, 26 ff.

120, 30. tanto spatio: 'over as long a course,' a strange use of the abl. of manner; cf. 104, 29.

121, 5. CHAPTER 36. His: dat. of interest or reference, expressing disadvantage. — ante: see 117, 5 f.

121, 7. die: note the gender; 'since the season of the equinox was near.' Caesar was probably in Britain about three weeks (see on 114, 10).

BOOK FIFTH

Campaign of 54 B.C. — The winter of 55-54 B.C. was spent in building a fleet and making other preparations for an invasion of Britain in force the following summer. Five legions and two thousand cavalry were taken across the Channel. In several engagements Caesar was victorious, and many tribes sent him hostages in token of submission. Still, he advanced only to the Thames and left no permanent results of his six or eight weeks' campaign. It was almost a hundred years before the Romans again visited Britain, in the reign of the emperor Claudius. Enough had been learned of the island, however, to dispel the common notion of its unbounded wealth.

[Owing to drought and scanty harvests Caesar scattered his army more than usual for the following winter. One legion under the command of Quintus Cicero, brother of the orator, was stationed among the Nervii; while another, under the trusted Labienus, was quartered on the Treveran frontier of the Remi. Sabinus and Cotta were given joint command of one legion and five unorganized cohorts stationed among the Eburones. The remaining five legions were distributed among the Esvivii, Morini, and Bellovaci.

This wide separation of the Roman forces appeared to the Gauls to afford a good opportunity to strike for freedom. The first attack was made by Ambiorix, chief of the Eburones, who, pretending friendship and gratitude to Caesar, warned Sabinus and Cotta that their only hope of escape from an overwhelming force of Gauls and Germans who would fall upon them within two days was to abandon their post and unite with Cicero or Labienus. In spite of the stout opposition of Cotta and many other officers this advice was adopted. The Romans had gone only two miles when Ambiorix fell upon them from an ambush and cut them to pieces almost to a man. Without delay he then marched into the country of the Nervii, Caesar's old enemy of three years before, and easily persuaded them to join in an attack on Cicero's camp. After a gallant defense from siege and assault, during which not one man in ten escaped without wounds, Cicero finally succeeded, after many failures, in getting word to Caesar, who came with all haste to his relief and put the enemy to rout.

Labienus's camp was attacked by the Treveri, but their repulse and the death of their chief, Indutiomarus, quieted Gaul for a season. For the first time Caesar spent the winter in Gaul, making his headquarters at Amiens (Samarobriua) in the country of the Ambiani.]

PAGE 123, LINE I. CHAPTER I. L. . . consulibus : = 54 B.C. The consuls took office on January 1, which, owing to the confusion of the Roman calendar, came some six or eight weeks earlier than at present. Consequently Caesar may have gone to Italy early in the winter. See on 100, 2.

123, 2. Italiam : see on 57, 26.

123, 3. legatis : Caesar had eight legions at this time, each under the command of a lieutenant ; see on ab opere, 76, 2.

123, 4. quam plurimas possint . . . naves : 'the largest possible number of ships' ; see on quam maximis potest, 55, 9. — possint : implied indir. disc.

123, 5. naves aedificandas . . . curent : 'have ships built.'¹

123, 6. Earum : applying only to the new ships, not to the veteres. — modum : 'style.'

123, 7. humiliores : sc. eas, obj. of facit.

123, 8. quam quibus : = quam eae sunt quibus ; see on qui, 51, 2. — nostro : the Mediterranean. — id (sc. facit) . . . quod : 'he does this all the more from the fact that he,' etc.

123, 10. minus magnos : 'not so large' as in the Mediterranean. This observation is incorrect. The existence of tides, too, does not materially influence the size of waves, but merely changes their form.

123, 11. iumentorum : including principally the cavalry horses. — latiores : sc. eas facit.

123, 12. actuarias : pred. adj. The addition of oars made the fleet more independent of wind and tide.

123, 14. armandas : cf. armatae, 89, 2, and armorum, 90, 2. — Hispania : Spain produced abundant material for making both ropes and metal implements.

123, 16. CHAPTER 2. His . . . rebus : referring to the punishment of the barbarous Pirustae, who had invaded Illyricum, a part of Caesar's province; see Introd. § 8. This is briefly related in the last half of Ch. 1, which is omitted in this book.

123, 17. proficiascitur: Caesar cannot have been away from his army much more than five months. During this time he traveled at least 2000 miles, from Belgium (122, 10) to Illyricum and back.

123, 19. studio: 'owing to the enthusiasm.'—in . . . inopia: 'although in,' etc.

124, 1. culius: for quod, an unusual attraction of the rel. to the case of the antecedent.¹

124, 2. neque . . . quin: 'and were not far from the point where.' The clause quin . . . possint is in apposition with eo, the use of *quin*² instead of ut being due to abesse.

124, 5. Itium: see on 112, 17.

124, 7. millium: gen. of quality with traiectum.

124, 8. huic rei: 'for this purpose,' of assembling all the troops at Port Itius.—quod . . . militum (partit. gen.): 'as many soldiers as.'

124, 9. CHAPTER 8. His rebus: in the omitted chapters Caesar tells of quieting a disaffection of the Treveri, and of the open revolt of Dumnorix the Haeduan, which ended in his death.

124, 11. portus: Port Itius and the ulterior portus of 114, 7.

124, 13. pro tempore, etc.: 'according to the time and the circumstance.'

124, 14. pari . . . quem: 'the same . . . as,' i.e. 2000.

124, 16. provectus, intermisso: translate as finite vbs.

124, 17. longius: his proper course from Port Itius was northwest to the vicinity of Dover and Deal, but the current carried him too far northward.

124, 19. contendit, etc.: at about daybreak the tide began to run to the southwest, and Caesar taking advantage of (secutus) this fact strove by rowing to reach the coast near Deal (see on progressus, 114, 24).

124, 22. vectoriis, etc.: 'in heavy transports,' abl. of means.

124, 23. non intermisso: 'with no respite from.'

124, 28. quae cum, etc.: 'of which, including those of the year before' (the veteres of 123, 5).—sui (with commodi) quisque: see on sibi quemque, 54, 11. The private ships probably belonged to officers, traders, and others who accompanied the expedition for the sake of pleasure or profit.

124, 29. DCCO: = octingentae, agreeing with quae; see on equites, 105, 28.

125, 5. CHAPTER 9. cohortibus X: probably two from each of his five legions (124, 14).

125, 7. navibus: dat. of interest or reference. — molli atque aperto: = aperto ac plano of 114, 24.

125, 11. equitatu, etc.: accompaniment¹; cum is commonly used if there is no adj.

125, 12. flumen: the Stour, which flows northeast through Canterbury and empties into the sea about six miles north of Deal. Caesar must have marched west, as in this direction the river is about twelve miles from his landing place. — prohibere: 'hinder' from crossing.

125, 17. domestici belli . . . causa: 'for use in civil war.'

125, 23. rari propugnabant: 'scattered here and there hurled forth weapons.'

125, 28. aggere: probably only a simple mound of earth built up against the enemy's fortification in the manner of the Roman siege mound (see Introd. § 47).

126, 4. CHAPTER 10. tripertito: by three routes.

126, 7. extremi: 'the rear' of the enemy.

126, 8. Atrio: see 125, 9.

126, 11. funes: cf. pro funibus, 89, 9, and see note. — sustinerent: observe that the subj. shows this reason to be Atrius's.

126, 13. concursum: 'colliding.'

126, 15. CHAPTER 11. in itinere resistere: 'merely to resist on the march,' i.e. merely to defend themselves if attacked as they marched back to camp.

126, 17. sic ut: 'the state of affairs being such that.' — amissis: abl. abs. expressing concession.

126, 18. negotio: abl. of manner.

126, 19. deligit: this word shows that Caesar had no separate force of carpenters, but selected from the ranks such men as could be of most service for a given undertaking. — Labieno: in command on the continent; see 124, 9 ff.

126, 20. ut . . . instituat: a complementary or subst. clause, obj. of scribit, which is here equiv. to a vb. of command, 'writes L. to build.'¹ An infin. would be in indir. disc., 'writes L. that he is building.'—possit, sint: implied indir. disc.; cf. fugerant in l. 5, where the main vb. misit gives no implication of indir. disc.—legionibus: abl. of means.

126, 21. operae, etc.: gen. of quality, 'an undertaking requiring much labor and exertion.'

126, 24. ne . . . intermissis: 'not granting even in the night-time any respite to the soldiers' toil.'

126, 27. quas ante: 'as before,' see 125, 5 f.

126, 28. eodem: adv.

126, 30. summa . . . administrandi: 'the chief command and management of the war.'

127, 3. a mari: Caesar reckons according to his line of march from his landing place.

127, 4. Huic . . . intercesserant: 'he had been engaged in,' etc.

127, 6. hunc, etc.: 'had given him chief command of the whole war.'

127, 8. CHAPTER 12. quos . . . dicunt: 'of whom they say there is a tradition that they originated,' etc.; quos natos [esse] is the subject of proditum [esse]. Many peoples in antiquity had the mistaken notion that their race sprang from the soil of the country in which they lived. The Britons of Caesar's day were Celtic, and they are believed to have been preceded by Iberians. See on Celtae, 51, 3.

127, 11. nominiibus: for instance, there were Atrebates and Belgae in southern Britain, and Parisii on the east coast in modern Yorkshire.—quibus . . . civitatibus: see on itineribus, 54, 18.

127, 13. Hominum: 'population.'

127, 14. Gallicis: Gallic houses were round (cf. Indian wigwams), made of boards or wickerwork of stakes and interwoven branches, and had thatched roofs.

127, 15. aureo: gold coins antedating Caesar's visit have been found in England.

127, 16. ad certum pondus: among most primitive peoples the use of metals by weight precedes coinage.

127, 17. Mediterraneis: i.e. Cornwall, which was so far from that part of the island visited by Caesar that he might easily imagine it to 128, 10. CHAPTER 13. inferior: instead of alter, correlated to alter above.

128, 11. ad meridiem: not a bad mistake, as Land's End really points southwest.

128, 12. Hispaniam: Tacitus, writing 150 years later, puts Ireland between Britain and Spain (Agricola, 24).

128, 14. spatio: abl. of quality, parallel with minor.

128, 15. atque: 'as'; see on 70, 29. Translate the phrase, 'lying just as far from it as the distance from Gaul to Britain.' Note that transmissus is gen. — In . . . cursu: 'in the middle of this passage.'

128, 16. Mona: evidently the Isle of Man; Tacitus (Agricola, 14) gives the name to Anglesey.

128, 17. obiectae: sc. esse, 'to be near'; probably the islands off the coast of Scotland are meant.

128, 18. non nulli: probably Greek travelers. In the last part of the fourth century B.C., Pytheas of Marseilles (Massilia) wrote of his voyage in a Phoenician ship from Cadiz (Gades) to Britain and beyond. — dies, etc.: not true for any part of Britain.

128, 20. nisi: 'but.' — certis . . . mensuris: 'from exact measurements with water,' i.e. by the clepsydra or water-clock, which measured time by the dripping of water through a small orifice, on the principle of a sand-glass. — breviores: the shortest nights of summer are about an hour and a half shorter in London than in Rome.

128, 22. ut fert, etc.: 'as they suppose.' — millium: pred. gen. of quality; cf. 124, 7. For the omission of passuum, cf. 92, 19.

BOOK SIXTH

Campaign of 53 B.C.—[The successes of Ambiorix in 54 B.C. had given new spirit to several states of northeastern Gaul. Caesar, seeing that trouble was brewing, raised two new legions; and these, with the legion loaned him by Pompey, gave him an army of ten legions. With his usual promptness he struck the first blow. The Nervii, Senones, and Carnutes were speedily brought to submission. The Menapii, the only tribe of Gaul that had not yet sued for peace, were reduced by a force led by Caesar himself. Meanwhile Labienus conquered the Treveri.]

The next move, a second expedition into Germany, was no more successful than that of 55 B.C. The Suebi, whom he wished to punish for aiding the Gauls, withdrew, bag and baggage, to the remotest part of their territory, where the Romans could not safely follow.]

At this point Caesar interrupts his narrative to give an interesting account of the customs of the Gauls and of the Germans, and a description of some of the strange animals of the Hercynian Forest in southern Germany.

[Returning to Gaul, Caesar devoted his whole attention to destroying Ambiorix and the Eburones (see summary of Book V, p. 345). The army in three divisions devastated the country. Neighboring tribes were invited to join in the work and enrich themselves with booty. Parties of native cavalry scoured the whole district in search of Ambiorix, who, however, always evaded his pursuers.

Finally the pursuit was abandoned and the army was quartered for the winter of 53-52 B.C. among the Treveri, the Lingones, and the Senones. Before leaving for Italy Caesar put to death the Senonian chief, Acco, who had been the leader of the revolt of the Senones and the Carnutes the previous spring.]

PAGE 135, LINE 1. CHAPTER 11. locum: 'point' in the narrative. Caesar had just told of his second expedition into Germany. He crossed the Rhine by a bridge which he built not far above his place of crossing in 55 B.C. (see on 109, 12). He wished to punish the Germans for aiding his enemies in Gaul, and to prevent them from harboring Ambiorix in the campaign which he meant to begin, upon his return to Gaul, against that daring and unscrupulous chieftain (see summary above). His journey was largely fruitless, however, owing to the impossibility of safely pursuing the German tribes into their forest retreats.

135, 5. partibus: 'districts.'

135, 7. principes sunt qui: 'the leaders are the men who'; the rel. clause defines the antecedent, whereas the next clause quorum . . . redeat, instead of defining or restricting the antecedent principes, refers to it as an indefinite class, 'men (not 'the men') to whose decision'; hence the subj. of characteristic.

135, 8. eorum iudicio: 'in their judgment'; ¹ eorum means the Gauls. — quorum: has the same antecedent as qui; see on l. 7.

135, 9. summa . . . redeat: 'the chief control . . . is referred.'

135, 10. Id: 'this practice.' — eius rei causa: 'to the end,' explained by the appositive clause of purpose ne . . . egeret. Note the sequence * of egeret, depending on the perf. infin. institutum [esse].

139, 30. Ob eam causam: i.e. because they were descended, as they thought, from the god who ruled the world of darkness and night.

140, 1. noctium: the Germans, too, reckoned time by nights instead of by days (Tacitus, Germania, 11). Our words 'fortnight' and 'sennight' are relics of the custom. Primitive peoples mark time by the changes of the moon rather than of the sun.

140, 2. ut . . . subsequatur: i.e. the calendar day began at sunset.

140, 6. filium . . . adsistere: 'for a son to appear'; the clause is subject of esse implied, turpe being a pred. adj.

140, 8. CHAPTER 19. Viri, etc.: 'husbands, upon receiving property from their wives as a dowry, take an equal amount from their own possessions and, after an appraisal, add it to the dowry in a common fund.' Of course this custom could not be observed among the poor.

140, 12. uter . . . superavit: 'whichever of them has outlived the other.'—vita: abl. of specification.

140, 14. vitae . . . potestatem: so the Roman head of a household had the power of life and death over all his family.

140, 15. inlustriore loco natus: 'of higher rank'; loco is abl. of source.

140, 16. si . . . venit: 'if it looks suspicious.'

140, 17. de uxoribus, etc.: 'they hold an investigation of the wives.' This looks as if polygamy was practiced among the Gallic, as we know it was among the German, nobles.

140, 18. si compertum est: impers., 'if there is a discovery.'

140, 20. pro cultu: 'considering the civilization.'—magnifica, etc.: apparently the modern Frenchman comes honestly by his love of show.

140, 21. vivis, etc.: 'were dear to them when alive.'—ignem: burial of the dead was also practiced among the Gauls, although apparently it was less common than cremation. Graves have been excavated in which were found armor, rings, vases, and bones of animals.

140, 22. supra hanc memoriam: 'before our time.'

140, 23. iustis, etc.: 'after the regular funeral service was finished.'

140, 25. CHAPTER 20. Quae civitates: 'those states which'; the antecedent is an implied vae civitates, subject of habent.—commodius: 'to best advantage.'

140, 26. habent, etc.: 'have it established by law'; sanctum is pred. adj. agreeing with the clauses uti . . . communicet, which are objs. of habent.

140, 29. neve: the regular particle to connect two purpose clauses if the second is negative.—quod . . . cognitum est: see 103, 5 ff.

141, 2. quae visa sunt: 'what they see fit.'

141, 4. per concilium: 'in the council.'

141, 6. CHAPTER 21. druides: it is certain that the Germans had priests, although their powers were not so extensive as those of the druids.—qui . . . praesint: 'to have charge of,' rel. clause of purpose.

141, 9. Solem, etc.: probably Caesar was mistaken in this. Tacitus, writing 150 years later, mentions several other gods (Germania, 9), some of whom may, to be sure, have been introduced into Germany after Caesar's time. In most matters the accounts of Caesar and Tacitus agree.

141, 11. Vita, etc.: with this account, to l. 26, cf. 100, 14-101, 4, where the Suebi are described.

144, 2. unum cornu: it is probable that Caesar is trying to describe the reindeer, which once roamed as far south as Germany. But he cannot have seen the animal, except perhaps in a profile view, for otherwise he would not have given it only one horn.

144, 3. ab eius summo: 'at the end of it.'

144, 4. palmae ramique: 'palms and branches.' The horns of the reindeer are partly palmate, i.e. flat like the palm of the hand, with projections like fingers.

144, 5. natura: most other deer have horns only in the male. The horns of the female reindeer are, however, smaller than those of the male.

144, 7. CHAPTER 27. alces: the European elk is closely related to the American moose. The American elk, or wapiti, is a different animal.

145, 5. tantum ut, etc.: 'but not too far for them to retain perfectly the appearance of standing firmly' (lit., 'only so far that the utmost appearance of them standing is left').

145, 6. Huc: 'against them.'

145, 9. CHAPTER 28. uri: just what animal Caesar was trying to describe is uncertain. It may have become extinct. Doubtless the account is far from accurate, as Caesar probably saw none of the animals described.

145, 11. specie, etc.: cf. cervi figura, 144, 1.

145, 16. relatis . . . cornibus: 'display the horns publicly.' — quae sint, etc.: 'as evidence'; cf. qui praesint, 141, 6 f.

BOOK SEVENTH

Campaign of 52 B.C. — [This was the most decisive of Caesar's campaigns in Gaul. A widespread revolt was planned during the winter of 53-52 B.C. Many of the Gallic nobles were enraged by Acco's execution (see end of summary of Book VI, p. 356). The time appeared to be favorable, too, for an outbreak, because political disturbances in Rome seemed likely to detain Caesar in his Cisalpine province.]

Vercingetorix, a young Arvernian chief, the most distinguished patriot and leader that ancient Gaul produced, soon became the moving spirit of the insurrection. Most of the states of western Gaul rallied to his standard. His purpose was to invade the Roman province, win over as many of the provincials as possible, and cut off Caesar from his legions in the north.

This scheme was thwarted by Caesar's characteristic swiftness of action. Returning from Italy, he planted garrisons along the frontier of the province, crossed the Cévennes in the dead of winter, spreading dismay among the Arverni, and slipped away to his legions before the Gauls could offer the least opposition. Mobilizing his whole army at

Sens (Agedincum), in the Senonian country, he set out to find Vercingetorix, capturing several towns on the way and arranging for as large a supply of provisions as he could get in the winter. He first crossed swords with Vercingetorix in a cavalry skirmish in which he gained the victory. The Gallic leader thereupon adopted the policy of avoiding a battle and conquering the Romans by starvation, urging his countrymen to burn all their towns and granaries. Avaricum, a strongly fortified town of the Bituriges, which was defended, although against his advice, was captured by the Romans after a heroic defense, and he led his army away to Gergovia, the capital of his own people.]

Caesar undertook to besiege Gergovia, but, as the rebellion was gaining strength and there was danger that he might be hemmed in, he soon sought a way of retiring without giving the appearance of flight. He had an opportunity in a few days to storm the enemy's outworks, but the overwhelming numbers of the Gauls quickly turned a momentary success into a repulse, and after a day or two of cavalry skirmishes, in which the Romans had the advantage, he led his army away to join Labienus, who with four legions was carrying on a successful campaign round Paris (Lutetia).

[The disaster before Gergovia was the only defeat suffered by the Romans when under Caesar's personal command, during the entire war. Caesar's prestige was broken, and all the states of Celtic and Belgic Gaul, except the Remi, Lingones, and Treveri, joined the confederacy against him. Vercingetorix was elected commander-in-chief. In the territory of the Lingones he was defeated in a cavalry battle and retired to Alesia, a stronghold of the Mandubii, which he had chosen as his base. Caesar, having united his ten legions, at once set to work to shut up the Gallic army in the town.]

The campaign round Alesia was the most remarkable of the whole war. Caesar encircled the town with a line of forts and camps eleven miles in length. He also defended himself against attacks, either from the town or from without, by an elaborate series of trenches, buried spikes, and earthworks. When Vercingetorix found his position growing desperate, he sent to all the states of Gaul, begging them to despatch an army to his relief. Upon the arrival of the relieving army, numbering over 250,000 men, three fierce battles were fought in rapid succession, all of which resulted favorably to the Romans. The army of relief dispersed and great numbers of them were captured or killed in their flight.

Nothing remained for the besieged but to surrender. Their arms were given up and one captive was handed over to each of Caesar's soldiers as booty.

Vercingetorix, as is related by other writers, although Caesar himself says nothing of it, was kept in prison at Rome for six years, when he was exhibited as one of the most brilliant trophies in Caesar's triumph. He was then put to death.

Caesar made his headquarters for the winter at Bibracte, the Haeduan capital. His legions were distributed where they could best protect his friends and restrain the disloyal.

PAGE 146, LINE 1. CHAPTER 43. After the capture of Avaricum (see summary, end of first bracket, p. 365) Caesar sent Labienus with four legions northward to engage the confederates who had collected among the Senones and the Parisii. He himself with six legions followed Vercingetorix to Gergovia, the capital of the Arverni. There he established his large camp southeast of Gergovia. A few days later he dislodged a weak garrison of the enemy from the precipitous hill, the Roche Blanche, south of the town, and posted two legions there, facilitating intercourse between his large and small camps by digging two parallel trenches from one to the other.

Ipse: Caesar. — maiores . . . motum: the Haedui, the strongest state in Gaul (136, 21 f.) and long friendly to Rome (see on 135, 19), were plotting rebellion, and Caesar knew that their example would lead many other tribes to follow suit.

146, 3. a: 'from the neighborhood of,' so with names of towns.¹

146, 4. contraheret: i.e. unite his six legions with the four under Labienus. — ne . . . videretur: neg. clause of purpose, 'without his departure seeming,' etc.

146, 7. CHAPTER 44. Haec: i.e. the plans just mentioned.

146, 8. bene . . . rei: 'of success.' — minora castra: on the Roche Blanche.

146, 9. operis: 'works,' the Roman defenses.

146, 10. collem: the part of the Heights of Risolles marked A on the plan.

146, 11. hominibus: abl. of separation.

146, 14. Constabat inter omnes: 'all agreed in reporting.'

146, 15. dorsum . . . eius iugi: 'the top of that ridge,' connecting Risolles with Gergovia, marked C on the plan. The Gauls were fortifying the western side of the ridge, where alone it was accessible. Consequently they were not visible from the Roche Blanche.

146, 17. alteram: 'the farther' (from the Roman camp), the west side.

146, 18. nec iam aliter sentire . . . quin . . . viderentur: 'and they had no other thought, now that one hill had been seized by the Romans, than that if they should lose another, they would be seen to have been,' etc. Nec aliter sentire is equivalent to nec dubitare, hence the use of quin.¹

146, 19. omni exitu et pabulatione: 'every possibility of going out to forage.' On the north the hill of Gergovia was too precipitous to be passable.

148, 2. CHAPTER 45. eo: i.e. to the west side of the ridge which the Gauls were fortifying.

148, 3. tumultuosius: 'more noisily than usual,' so as to attract the enemy's attention. The movements described in ll. 1-14 were only a diversion. Caesar's real purpose was to raid the Gallic camp when it had been left defenseless by the rallying of the Gauls to protect the western approaches. He thought that, if this plan succeeded, he could withdraw from Gergovia without losing prestige.

148, 4. impedimentorum: 'beasts of burden.'

148, 5. stramenta: 'pack-saddles,' which were not adapted for riding.

148, 6. cassidibus: accompaniment. — specie, etc.: manner.

148, 7. collibus circumvehi: 'to ride round (to the west side of Risolles) over the hills.' Collibus is abl. of means, denoting the route taken.

148, 9. easdem . . . regiones: i.e. to the west of Risolles.

148, 11. neque: 'and yet . . . not.' — tanto spatio: abl. abs., 'at so great a distance.' — certi quid esset: 'what it really meant'; certi is partit. gen.

148, 12. eodem iugo: the same in constr. and meaning as collibus, l. 7. This legion probably halted not far from the present village of Chanonnat.

148, 14. illo: cf. eo, l. 2.

148, 17. raros: 'in small groups.'

of purpose, depending on contineant,¹ 'restrain the soldiers from advancing,' etc.

148, 22. incommodi: partit. gen. with quid.

148, 23. occasionis: pred. gen. of possession, 'that it is a question of opportunity, not of battle.' The absence of the Gauls from their camp gave an opportunity to raid it, but the superiority of the enemy in numbers and the nature of the ground were not favorable for a battle.

148, 27. CHAPTER 46. recta regione: 'in a straight line.'—si . . . intercederet: 'if there were no windings in the route,' a condition of action non-occurrent or contrary to fact.² The apodosis aberat, expressing a fact independent of the protasis, takes the indicative.

148, 28. MCC = mille ducentos. — huc: 'to this,' i.e. to the distance of 1200 paces. — circuitus: partit. with quicquid.

148, 29. A medio, etc.: 'about half-way up the hill.'

148, 30. in longitudinem, ut . . . ferebat: 'lengthwise of the mountain' ('along the length according to the nature [i.e. form] of the mountain'; see Vocab., s.v. fero, for similar idioms).

149, 1. VI pedum: 'six feet high'; gen. of quality.

149, 2. inferiore, etc.: the part of the sidehill below the six-foot wall.

149, 4. densissimis castris: the contingent of each state had its own separate camp. As there were many states represented and the space between the wall of the town and the outer wall (VI pedum murus) was but little over half a mile wide, the camps were crowded closely together.

149, 5. munitionem: the six-foot wall.

149, 6. trinis: 'three.'³ — castris: see on imperio, 52, II.

151, 2. dextris . . . exsertis: pred. abl. of quality, sc. esse; 'to have the right shoulders uncovered.'

151, 3. insigne pactum: 'the sign agreed upon,' i.e. to designate friendly Gauls.

151, 6. Fabius, etc.: see 149, 30.

151, 9. excidere: 'to cut away,' so as to gain an entrance. Apparently only Fabius and his three comrades scaled the wall.

151, 12. quidem: translated only by emphasizing vestrae.

151, 13. quos: the antecedent is implied in vestrae.

151, 19. post paulum: adverbs, 'a little later.'

151, 20. ac . . . fuit: 'but he saved his men'; i.e. by engaging the enemy until they had time to escape.

151, 21. CHAPTER 51. cum . . . premerentur: 'being hard pressed on every side'; see on cum . . . conaretur, 53, 29.

151, 22. amissis: 'with a loss of.'

151, 24. aequiore loco: in the plain northeast of the Roche Blanche; see on the plan (p. 147), 10th legion, 3d position.

151, 26. eductae: see 150, 20 ff.

151, 27. superiorem: i.e. higher on the slope of the Roche Blanche than their first position; see on the plan, Sextius, 2d position. — Legiones: the raiding legions, which had been pursued down the hill from Gergovia.

151, 30. reduxit: Vercingetorix was unwilling to risk a battle on level ground. — minus DCC: = minus septingenti; the construction of words denoting number is often not affected by minus, amplius, etc.; see on equites, 105, 28.

152, 5. CHAPTER 52. recipiendi: the gerund of this vb. occurs rarely, where we should expect the gerundive with the refl. sui.

152, 7. quod . . . sensisset: 'a thing which he himself had understood,' etc.

152, 8. sine duce: with deprehensis, 'caught without a leader.' This refers to an occasion when Vercingetorix had gone away from his army without leaving any officer in charge. The Roman troops were eager to attack, but Caesar refused because of the secure position of the enemy.

152, 11. quos . . . potuisset: a clause of characteristic, while admiraretur is subj. merely because it is in a subordinate clause of indir. disc.

152, 14. reprehendere: an independent clause of indir. disc.; sc. se as subject.

152, 18. CHAPTER 53. ad extremam, etc.: 'towards the end of' his speech.'

152, 20. quod . . . attulisset: implied indir. disc.

152, 22. ante: see 146, 1 ff.

152, 26. atque eo secundo: 'and that with success.'

152, 27. satis . . . factum: Caesar hoped to impress both upon the enemy and his own men that his departure was not a flight. He did not try, however, with this phrase, to cover up the fact of his repulse, for he admits this plainly enough in 151, 21 ff., and 152, 20 f.

154, 1. CHAPTER 69. oppidum: Alesia, to which Vercingetorix had retired after being defeated by Caesar's cavalry in the country of the Lingones (see summary of Book VII, second bracket, p. 365), occupied the summit of a precipitous hill, not so high as the plateau of Gergovia, but even more secure from assault. This hill is the modern Mont Auxois, on the southwestern slope of which is the village of Alise-Sainte-Reine.

154, 2. loco: loc. abl.,³ 'in a very elevated position.'

154, 4. flumina: the Ose on the north and the Oserain on the south.

154, 5. planities: the plain of the Laumes, west of Mont Auxois.

154, 6. mediocri . . . spatio: 'no great distance away.'

154, 7. pari altitudinis fastigio: abl. of quality, limiting colles, 'of equal height' (equal to Mont Auxois).

154, 8. muro: the wall of Alesia. — quae pars . . . spectabat: this clause is repeated by hunc . . . locum; translate, 'that part of the hill facing east had all been filled by forces of the Gauls.'

154, 9. fossam: see PQRS on the plan, p. 153. The exact position of these defenses of the Gallic camp has been fixed by excavations under the direction of Emperor Napoleon III.

154, 11. munitionis: the course of Caesar's lines of contravallation and of circumvallation, for by far the greater part of their length, was determined by Napoleon's excavations.

154, 12. tenebat: 'extended.' — Castra: traces of four infantry and four cavalry camps and of five redoubts (10, 11, 15, 18, 22, on the plan) have been discovered. The locations of the other redoubts are merely conjectural.

154, 16. CHAPTER 70. Opere: the Roman works of l. 11 ff.

154, 18. supra: in l. 5.

154, 20. Germanos: Caesar had just obtained from Germany important additions to his cavalry force. The German cavalry was much superior to that of the Gauls.

154, 22. Praesidio: 'support.' — nostris: dat. of interest or reference, expressing advantage; ¹ translate, 'of our men.'

154, 24. angustioribus: pred. adj., 'as the gates had been left rather narrow.' These gates were in the stone wall inclosing the enemy's camp, PQRS on the plan.

155, 2. munitiones: the Gallic wall and trench. — veniri: imper., 'that the enemy were coming.'

155, 4. portas: the gates of the town were closed that the camp might not be left without defenders.

155, 8. CHAPTER 71. perficiantur: 'can be finished'; the subj. is used with priusquam in clauses representing an act not as accomplished but as anticipated.²

155, 10. suam quisque: see on sibi quemque, 54, 11.

155, 12. cogant: the subject is not quisque, but all the men who depart; omnes is the obj. — in illos merita (subst.): 'services to them.'

155, 13. se . . . meritum (part.): 'him who has best served the interests of their common liberty.'

155, 15. fuerint: perf. subj. for fut. perf. of dir. disc.

155, 17. Ratione inita: 'by actual calculation.'—dierum: gen. of quality.

155, 18. tolerari: impers., 'they can hold out.'

155, 19. qua, etc.: 'where gaps had been left in our works' (of contravallation).

155, 20. Frumentum: i.e. in Alesia.

155, 22. paruerint: implied indir. disc.; for the tense, cf. fuerint, l. 15.

155, 29. CHAPTER 72. pedum XX: in breadth.—derectis: 'perpendicular,' more fully explained by the result clause. Trenches usually had sloping sides. The object in digging this ditch, which extended only from the Ose to the Oserain, was to protect Caesar's troops at the point where they were most exposed to attack while building their line of contravallation, i.e. on the west side of Mont Auxois. Excavations show it to have been about nine feet deep.

155, 30. solum: 'the bottom.'

156, 1. distarent: subj. of attraction.¹

156, 2. pedes cccc: probably a copyist's mistake for passus cccc, as this is the approximate distance between the remains of the twenty-foot trench and of the line of contravallation.—hoc consilio: explained by the appositive purpose clauses² ne . . . advolaret . . . possent.—tantum . . . spatium: eleven miles, see 154, 11 f.

156, 3. esset . . . complexus, cingeretur: implied indir. disc., being a part of Caesar's thought when he formed his plan.—totum opus: the contravallation.

156, 4. corona: 'an encircling line,' filling the whole contravallation.

156, 5. advolaret, possent: for the change in number, cf. adeat, cogant, 155, 10 and 12.

156, 7. Hoc . . . spatio: i.e. 400 paces, see on pedes cccc, l. 2.—duas fossas: of these only the inner trench surrounded Alesia, the outer extended merely from the Ose to the foot of the Heights of Flavigny. It was only in the plain that the strongest defenses were required.

156, 8. altitudine: the excavations show the depth of both trenches to have been from eight to nine feet. — campestribus . . . locis: 'on the low lands of the plain.' In the rest of its course it was too high to be flooded.

156, 10. Post: i.e. from the point of view of Alesia. — aggerem ac vallum: 'embankment and palisade'; vallum alone would have expressed the idea, as its common meaning is a palisaded rampart. — XII pedum: the agger was probably about nine feet high, and the valli, composing the palisade (vallum), increased the height some three feet.

156, 11. loricam: 'breastwork,' made of interwoven branches and put in front of the palisade to strengthen it. — pinnas: 'battlements,' probably made by building the breastwork four or five feet higher at intervals than elsewhere. — cervis: 'spreading branches,' planted in the embankment at the foot of the breastwork; see Fig. 28.

156, 12. pluteorum: 'screens,' the sections of wickerwork of which the lorica was composed.

156, 13. toto opere: 'on the whole line of works' round Alesia, see Fig. 31. — quae . . . distarent: 'so that they were eighty feet apart,' rel. clause of result.¹

157, 2. CHAPTER 73. necesse: pred. adj. with erat, the subjects being the three infans. — diminutis, etc.: 'and our troops were diminished.'

157, 3. progrediebantur: for building material and supplies.

157, 6. addendum: impers., 'that an addition ought to be made. — quo: see on quo . . . impedirent, 73, 17.

157, 10. perpetuae: these continuous trenches, parallel with the line of contravallation, surrounded Alesia, being interrupted only where the nature of the ground made such elaborate defenses unnecessary. — Huc: 'in these,' the five-foot trenches.

157, 11. stipites: including both the trunci and the rami, l. 8. — ab infimo revincti: 'fastened down at the bottom.'

157, 12. ab ramis eminebant: 'projected from the ground with their branches only.' — Quini: probably the five rows of trunks were in five trenches lying parallel and near together so as to allow the intertwining of the branches. See on octoni, 158, 3. — coniuncti, etc.: 'joined to one another and intertwined.'

157, 13. quo: adv., 'among them,' the rows of sharp branches.

157, 14. cippos: 'boundary stakes,' a soldier's joke. See Fig. 28.

157, 15. Ante: towards the town. — in quincuncem dispositis: 'arranged in diagonal order,' like dots on the five-spot of dice.

157, 18. paulatim . . . fastigio: translate, 'with sloping sides and gradually narrowing towards the bottom.' They were about six feet across at the top.

157, 21. crassitudine: abl. of quality, the gen. feminis taking the place of an adj.

157, 22. praeusti: so as to harden the point.

157, 24. singuli, etc.: 'a foot of each trunk at the bottom of the pit was packed in firmly trodden earth.' Thus the trunks were left exposed for about two feet of their length, but they were covered over with brush. See Figs. 28 and 29.

158, 3. octoni: the distributive denotes that there were eight rows in every section of the contravallation where elaborate defenses were required; cf. quini, 157, 12.

158, 6. taleae: 'stakes,' buried so that only the iron hooks protruded from the ground. Five of these hooks and 86 pits (scrobes), 157, 16, were discovered during the excavations. See Figs. 28 and 30.

158, 10. CHAPTER 74. regiones, etc.: 'keeping to as level ground as he could.'

158, 11. pro: 'considering.'

158, 12. pares, etc.: a line of circumvallation was built to protect the Roman camps from attack by the Gallic army which was being mustered for the relief of Alesia.

158, 13. diversas ab his: 'facing the opposite direction from the former.'

158, 17. habere . . . convectum: see on coactum habebat, 61, 6. In spite of Caesar's precautions his army finally suffered so severely from lack of supplies, that four years later the recollection of what they had borne at Alesia encouraged his men to endure without a murmur the still greater hardships of the siege of Pompey near Dyrrachium (210, 22).

159, 2. CHAPTER 75. non omnes: subject of convocandos [esse]. As usual, non is placed immediately before the word it limits.

159, 3. censuit: 'urged,' see 155, 11 f.

159, 5. civitati: see on imperat, 55, 11.

159, 6. rationem habere: 'to have any way.'

159, 12. duodena millia: note the distributive, 'twelve thousand each.'

159, 21. Bellovaci: they took up arms against Caesar the next year, but without success.

- 159, 24. pro: 'in consideration of.'
- 159, 26. CHAPTER 76. antea: see 112, 26 ff., 120, 26, 133, 3.
- 159, 28. civitatem: the Atrebrates.
- 159, 29. ipsi: 'to him himself'; he had been made ruler over the Morini, who were thus punished for their obstinate resistance to Caesar (see 98, 19 ff. and 121, 15 ff.).
- 159, 30. universae: an exaggeration; the Aquitanians (see on Galliam, 88, 6), Remi, Lingones, and Treveri (see summary of Book VII, second bracket, p. 365) did not join the uprising.
- 160, 2. moveretur: sc. Gallia as subject. — que: 'but.'
- 160, 3. animo . . . incumbent: 'gave their hearts and their resources to that war.'
- 160, 4. CGL: sc. millibus.
- 160, 5. haec: sc. millia; translate, 'these troops.'
- 160, 9. delecti ex civitatibus: 'men selected from the states.' This civil advisory board was apparently to act as a check on the military officers. The efficiency of the latter was still further weakened by dividing the command between four men.
- 160, 11. ad; see on ad, 55, 10.
- 160, 13. arbitraretur: subj. of characteristic.¹ — ancipiti proelio: abl. abs., 'in a battle with two fronts.' — cum: 'when.'
- 160, 14. eruptione: abl. of cause, 'there would be fighting due to a sally.' — pugnaretur, cernerentur: representing fut. indic. of the actual thought of the Gauls.
- 160, 17. CHAPTER 77. die: for the gender, see on die, 53, 25.
- 160, 18. quid . . . gereretur: see l. 4 ff.
- 160, 21. suppetent: implied indir. disc., representing pres. indic. of the opinion as it was expressed in the council.
- 160, 22. non praetereunda [esse]: 'to deserve not to be passed over.'
- 160, 26. auctoritatis: pred. gen. of quality.
- 160, 29. mihi res est: 'my business is.'
- 160, 30. omnium . . . consensu: 'as you all agree.'
- 161, 2. ista: a dem. or rel. pron. used as subject of a clause usually agrees in gender and number with a pred. subst. — posse: in apposition with ista.
- 161, 3. Qui, etc.: 'men to offer,' etc., a clause of characteristic.
- 161, 5. tantum . . . potest: 'has such great influence.' — dignitas:

of those who favor making a sally. — si . . . viderem: 'if I saw' (implying 'I do not see').¹

161, 6. praeterquam vitae nostrae: 'except of our lives.'

161, 7. respiciamus: hortatory, 'let us,' etc.

161, 8. millibus LXXX: see 155, 16.

161, 9. propinquis, etc.: dats. of poss. with fore.

161, 10. animi: with quid, 'what heart.'

161, 11. Nolite . . . exspoliare . . . prosternere . . . subicere: the commonest form of prohibition.²

161, 18. animi causa: see 128, 4 f. The enclitic -ne is often added to an emphatic word of a question.³ — exerceri: with reflexive force, 'are taking exercise' ('exercising themselves').

161, 19. illorum: Gauls in the relieving army.

161, 20. his: Romans. — testibus: pred. apposition, 'as witnesses,' followed by indir. disc.

161, 23. Quid ergo, etc.: 'what then is proposed by my plan?' The answer, facere, etc., is subject of mei consili (pred. gen. of possession⁴) est implied from the question.

161, 24. Cimbrorum, etc.: the Cimbri and Teutones were Germanic peoples from the shores of the Baltic and the North Sea, who overran Gaul and Spain, 113-102 B.C. They had planned to invade Italy when they were annihilated by the great Marius, the Teutones in southern Gaul, 102 B.C., and the Cimbri in northern Italy the following year.

161, 29. institui, prodi: subjects of esse implied, pulcherrimum being pred. adj., 'for it to be adopted . . . was most glorious.'

161, 30. illi . . . bello: dat. of poss., 'what similarity had that war to this?' — Depopulata: see on 58, 17.

162, 5. quos: a rel. not infrequently precedes its antecedent (here horum).

162, 9. finitimam Galliam: 'the neighboring part of Gaul,' i.e. the Roman Province.

162, 10. securibus: axes were borne before military commanders to symbolize their power of punishing with death.

main vb. constituunt. — descendant: subj. with prius quam of action anticipated.

162, 15. utendum [esse]: 'that they must avail themselves,' indir. disc. depending on the idea of saying in constituunt. This merely repeats indirectly a declaration of the Gauls, while ut excedant, experiantur, is expressed as their purpose. Cf. the impersonal use¹ of the intr. verb utendum with the personal use of the transitive subeundam.

162, 20. cibo iuvent: 'give them food.' Caesar was quite unable to comply with this request, even if he had so desired (see on 158, 17), and these unfortunate victims of one of the cruel necessities of war starved to death, as we are told by another writer, between the Roman lines and the walls of their own city.

162, 24. CHAPTER 79. colle: the heights of Mussy-la-Fosse, southwest of Alesia; see plan, p. 153.

162, 28. demonstravimus: in 154, 5.

163, 1. Concurrunt: the Gauls in Alesia.

163, 4. fossam; the twenty-foot trench, see plan and 155, 29. — agere: 'earth.'

163, 6. CHAPTER 80. exercitu: i.e. the infantry; the cavalry were sent out to engage the enemy. — utramque: the outer and inner lines of defense.

163, 7. suum quisque: see on sibi quemque, 54, 11.

163, 10. castris; see 154, 12 f.

163, 12. inter equites, etc.: this idea was borrowed from the Germans, whose cavalry in Caesar's army was always superior to the Gauls'; see l. 25 f. and 154, 20, 24 f.

163, 13. qui . . . sustinerent: rel. clauses of purpose.

163, 15. complures: of Caesar's cavalry.

163, 18. qui . . . continebantur: the besieged.

163, 21. neque . . . factum: 'and no brave or cowardly deed.' Participles used as substantives are usually modified by adverbs instead of by adjectives. — utrosque: both Gauls and Romans.

163, 24. Cum . . . pugnaretur: 'when the battle had been raging' (and was still raging²).

archers, who, as we learn from Caesar, were able in a rout to keep up with the horsemen by taking hold of the horses' manes.

163, 28. cedentes: acc.

164, 4. CHAPTER 81. Uno: 'a single'; emphasized, as usual.—Galli: i.e. the relieving force.

164, 5. cratium: 'hurdles,' of interwoven branches, with which to cover over the trenches.—harpagonum: 'hooks,' on long poles, for tearing down the fortifications.

164, 7. campestres: 'in the plain' of the Laumes, referring to Caesar's outer line west of Alesia.

164, 8. qua: 'that by this,' introducing a rel. clause of purpose.—qui . . . obsidebantur: since this clause merely defines the subject of possent, and is not considered as an essential part of the purpose, the verb is not attracted into the subjunctive.

164, 14. ut . . . attributus: for the fact, see 163, 7 f.

164, 15. librilibus: 'throwing stones of a pound in weight.'

164, 17. glandibus: 'lead bullets,' hurled by slings.

164, 18. tenebris: this battle was fought between midnight and dawn, see l. 6 and 165, 1.

164, 21. Antonius: the famous Mark Antony. He was a lieutenant of Caesar in 52 and 51 B.C., and afterwards in the Civil War.

164, 24: his: serves as antecedent of qua ex parte, but denotes persons rather than place. The dat. expresses interest, accompanying auxilio, which is a dat. of purpose.

164, 26. CHAPTER 82. Dum: 'so long as.'—plus . . . proficiebant: 'they were more effective' than they were when they came nearer.

164, 29. delati, etc.: 'falling into the pits were wounded,' by being impaled on the stipites (157, 20).

164, 30. pilis muralibus: heavier than the ordinary javelin.

165, 2. aperto: as often, of the right side, which was not protected by the shield. But see on ab latere aperto, 69, 1.—superioribus: on the Heights of Flavigny.

165, 3. interiores: the besieged Gauls in Alesia.

165, 5. prioris fossas: the trench twenty feet wide. The pl. refers to different parts of the trench.—explant: like proferunt depending on dum.

165, 7. appropinquant: see on perficiantur, 155, 8.

165, 12. CHAPTER 83. collis: Mont Réa.

165, 15. castra: D on the plan, p. 153. Wherever possible the Romans avoided camping near the foot of a hill, as the enemy by seizing the summit could win a great advantage. The lack of this precaution here cost Caesar dear.

165, 19. numero: referring only to the relieving army, which numbered, according to 160, 4, about 258,000 men.

165, 20. quid . . . placeat: 'what they think best to do, and in what way.'

165, 22. videatur: implied indir. disc., representing fut. indic. in the original thought, adibimus cum meridies esse videbitur.

165, 27. ea castra: of Reginus and Rebilus.

166, 3. CHAPTER 84. falces: like the harpagones of 164, 5.

166, 7. locis: essential complement or indir. obj. of the intr. cpd. vb.

166, 8. Multum . . . valet: 'tends greatly.'—post tergum: some of the Romans were on the inner line of defense facing the Gauls from Alesia, and some were on the outer line facing the relieving army. The men in each line accordingly felt that their safety depended on the success of their comrades behind them.

166, 9. pugnantibus: 'as they are fighting,' dat. of interest or reference.—periculum: we should say 'safety.'

166, 12. CHAPTER 85. locum: without doubt, on the northwest slope of the Heights of Flavigny, marked J.C. on the plan, p. 153.—quaque: from quisque.

166, 14. Utrisque: i.e. both Gauls and Romans. For the dat., cf. pugnantibus, l. 9. Translate, 'the thought comes to the minds of both armies.'

166, 15. unum: 'the one of all.'—maxime, etc.: 'there is call for the greatest effort.'

166, 18. munitiones: the castra of 165, 28.

166, 20. Iniquum: see on castra, 165, 15.—ad declivitatem fastigium: 'downward slope.'

166, 22. Agger: earth and other materials thrown on the Roman defenses (in munitionem coniectus), covering over the cippi, lilia, and stimuli (157, 8 ff.).

166, 26. CHAPTER 86. Labienum: supposed to have been in command of the troops on the Heights of Bussy, northeast of Alesia.

166, 28. deductis cohortibus: 'to draw off his cohorts' from the rampart.

166, 29. eruptione pugnet: 'make a sally.' The clause is obj. of imperat, with which it is coördinate (not subordinated by ut). — nisi: belongs with necessario only.

167, 2. Interiores: as in 165, 3.

167, 3. munitionum: the cippi, etc., which were planted only in the plain. The Roman works on the hills had no need of these additional defenses.

167, 4. ascensu: abl. of specification. — temptant: the Gauls thought that owing to the lack of cippi, etc., the works on the hills might be successfully attacked. The attempt was probably made on the Heights of Flavigny.

167, 5. propugnantes: acc.

167, 7. loricam: see on 156, 11.

167, 8. CHAPTER 87. Brutum: see on 88, 9.

167, 11. eo: i.e. to the camp on Mont Réa.

167, 13. circumire exteriores, etc.: probably the cavalry that were to go round the outer line of defenses marched out from the camp near Grésigny (G on the plan, p. 153). The hills prevented their movements from being seen by the enemy. Any such manœuvre attempted from the cavalry camps in the plain (H, I, K) would have been frustrated by the Gauls of the relieving army.

167, 18. faciendum: i.e. to make a sally, in accordance with Caesar's directions in 166, 28 f.

167, 20. CHAPTER 88. colore, etc.: the imperator wore over his armor the paludamentum, a cloak of light purple or scarlet.

167, 21. insigni: 'as a distinguishing garb,' in pred. apposition to quo.

167, 23. superioribus: i.e. on Mont Réa above the Roman lines. — declivia, etc.: the slopes of Flavigny, from which Caesar came.

167, 25. excipit: 'follows.' The shout of the Romans and the Gauls fighting at Mont Réa was taken up by the Romans all along their lines.

167, 26. Nostris, etc.: the Romans made a sally, hurling their javelins and then rushing to close quarters to settle the combat with their swords.

167, 27. equitatus: the body from camp G, see on l. 13. — cernitur: i.e. by the Gauls.

167, 28. aliae: the cohorts with Caesar. — Note the rapidity and the vividness of this closing narrative, expressed by the annalistic presents (see on civitates, 53, 6) and by the short disconnected sentences.

168, 3. Conspicati: when the subject changes, it is usually expressed, but here the words ex oppido make it clear that the Gauls from Alesia are meant.

168, 7. Gallorum: of the relieving army.

168, 8. Quod nisi: 'but if . . . not,' see on quod si, 60, 15. — crebris subsidiis: 'by repeatedly going to the support of each other.'

168, 22. CHAPTER 89. ad utramque rem: 'for either fate.'

168, 26. Vercingetorix: until 46 B.C. he was kept in prison at Rome. Then after being led as one of the principal trophies in Caesar's triumphal procession he was put to death.

168, 28. si . . . posset: indir. quest., 'to see if,' etc.

168, 29. capita singula: 'one man apiece.'

169, 2. CHAPTER 90. recipit: before this great rebellion the Haedui had been Caesar's firm allies.

169, 8. huic: Labienus.

169, 10. ne quam, etc.: the Remi, second only to the Haedui in power (136, 22), submitted without opposition to the Romans in the second year of Caesar's governorship, and were one of the few tribes which remained loyal in the outbreak of the present year (see on 159, 30). The Bellovaci were subdued the next year (51 B.C.) after a stubborn resistance.

169, 17. dierum XX: see on dierum XX, 122, 14. This unusual honor shows that the home government appreciated the importance of this year's victories. The backbone of Gallic resistance to Rome had been broken by the splendid victory of Alesia. In the following year, 51 B.C., although a few states made a gallant struggle for independence, all opposition was finally crushed, and the foundation was securely laid for the complete Romanization of Gaul. Thus France of to-day, like Spain and Italy, is a Latin country, and the French language is one of several daughters of Latin.

CIVIL WAR

BOOK FIRST

[Campaign of 49 B.C.—Italy and Spain.—The Civil War (see Intro. §§ 12, 13) opened in January, 49 B.C., with Caesar's passage over the Rubicon, the little stream which divided his province of Cisalpine Gaul from Italy. Caesar first made a rapid and victorious march down the east coast of Italy to Brundisium, whither the Pompeians fled in hot haste with the purpose of mobilizing their forces where, if necessary, they could be most easily transported across the Adriatic. In fact, when Caesar arrived at Brundisium, the consuls and a large part of the army had already sailed to Dyrrachium. Caesar endeavored to blockade Pompey and his remaining troops in the city, but Pompey cleverly effected his escape by sea and joined the consuls in Macedonia (March, 49 B.C.). Being unable to follow without considerable delay owing to lack of ships, Caesar determined to secure the West, where Pompey was hardly less strong than in the East. He first marched to Rome and made himself master of the public funds. Sicily and Sardinia, which supplied Rome with grain, were easily occupied during the summer by two of his lieutenants, Curio and Valerius. Caesar himself hastened to Marseilles (Massilia), which he found supporting the cause of Pompey. Arranging for the siege of this town, the only place in Gaul which took sides against him, he hurried on to Spain, — whither his Gallic legions had already been despatched, — to encounter a strong Pompeian army under Afranius and Petreius. Near Ilerda, in northeastern Spain, he snatched victory from the very jaws of defeat, and the whole peninsula submitted without further opposition (August and September, 49 B.C.). Following the policy he had adopted in Italy at the beginning of the war, Caesar dismissed all the captives, officers and men, some of whom enlisted in his army, while others poorly requited his clemency by joining Pompey in Macedonia.]

BOOK SECOND

Campaign of 49 B.C. — Marseilles and Africa. — [Marseilles (Massilia) held out for about six months (April–October, 49 B.C.). Trebonius, who had distinguished himself in Britain and at Alesia (130, 15, and 164, 22), conducted the siege skillfully and vigorously by land, while Decimus Brutus, who had made a reputation as a naval officer by his cleverness in the war with the Veneti seven years before (88, 9). He also did important service at Alesia, 167, 8), twice defeated the enemy on the sea. Finally the Massiliots were reduced to such straits by their lack of supplies, the weakened condition of their walls, and their despair of receiving help from Pompey, that upon Caesar's arrival from Spain, in October, the town was immediately surrendered. Granting a general pardon Caesar hastened on to Rome.]

Curio, after securing Sicily (see summary of Book I, p. 383), crossed over to Africa to engage the Pompeian forces there under Varus. Meeting at first with the utmost success, he was soon entrapped by the Numidian allies of Varus, and perished with almost all his army (August, 49 B.C.). This was a severe blow to Caesar's cause, not only because it encouraged the enemy, just at the time of their overthrow in Spain, but also because in Curio Caesar lost his ablest political supporter and one of his bravest and most skillful officers.

Apart from this disaster, however, the first year of the war was highly successful for Caesar. The Pompeians, on the other hand, only gained a trifling advantage with their fleet in the upper Adriatic and reduced most of Illyricum. Results so pitifully small, considering Pompey's great superiority by sea, and the power of his name and influence throughout the Roman world, except only in Caesar's provinces of Cisalpine and Transalpine Gaul and Illyricum, suggest an astonishing degree of mismanagement and confusion in the ranks of the senatorial party.

PAGE 170, LINE 1. CHAPTER 23. Isdem temporibus: i.e. during the campaigns in Spain and at Marseilles; see summaries of Books I and II, p. 383.—Curio: if Plutarch may be believed (Life of Pompey, 58), Caesar won over Curio, who had previously sided with the senatorial party, by paying off his debts. Curio served Caesar well in the controversy with the senate (50 B.C.), accompanied him on the march to Brundisium, and from there was sent to seize Sicily (see summary of Book I, p. 383). A few weeks later, early in August, he sailed from Sicily to Africa.—Africam: i.e. the district round Carthage, which had been made a province, under the name 'Africa,' in 146 B.C. It comprised the upper eastern part of modern Tunis.

170, 3. Vari: a Pompeian officer, whose troops had deserted him and joined Caesar during the triumphal march from the Rubicon to Brundisium. He had fled to Africa, and finding the province without a governor he assumed the office and raised an army of two legions. He accomplished his schemes easily because of his acquaintance in Africa, where he had been governor a few years before.

170, 4. acceperat: when he was sent to Sicily.

170, 5. consumpta: abl. abs. with biduo and nocte, agreeing with the nearer subst.

170, 9. L. Caesar: a distant relative of Julius Caesar who supported the cause of the senate throughout the war. His father was a lieutenant of Caesar in Gaul, but after the outbreak of the Civil War he remained at Rome.

170, 10. ex praedonum bello: 'just after the pirates' war' of 67 B.C.; see Intro. § 22.

170, 11. reficiendas: see on pontem . . . faciendum curat, 59, 18. These ships would be likely to need rather extensive repairs if they had been lying on the shore eighteen years.

170, 12. veritus: with L. Caesar. — ex alto: he was lying off Clupea (ad Clupeam), which is near the end of a promontory running well out to sea. See the plan, p. 171.

170, 14. Hadrumetum: on the coast to the south of Clupea.

170, 15. Longus: he had been governor of Africa the year before.

170, 16. Caesaris: Lucius.

171, 2. praesidio, navibus: datives.

171, 6. CHAPTER 24. Uticam: capital of the province and headquarters of the Pompeians.

171, 7. eodem: adv.

171, 8. bidui: probably a mistake. The distance from Anquillaria to the Bagrada, which was nearly seventy miles, could hardly have been covered by infantry in two days.

171, 9. Rebilum: he had been with Caesar in Gaul (165, 16). He was one of the few to survive Curio's expedition.

171, 11. Castra Cornelia: so called from the elder Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus, who had a camp here in 204 B.C., during the war with Hannibal. Both this place and Utica are now at some distance from the sea owing to changes in the coast line.

171, 12. Id: refers to is locus, but follows Latin usage in agreeing with the pred. subst. in its own clause.

171, 14. fastigio: abl. of quality.

172, 1. passus mille: a mistake. The distance is nearly three miles.

172, 2. quo mare succedit: 'through which the sea-water comes up.'

172, 5. CHAPTER 25. muro . . . coniuncta: 'close to the wall of the town,' hendiadys.

172, 6. ad portam: 'near the gate.'

172, 7. oppido, theatro: abl. of means, limiting munita.

172, 8. substructionibus: abl. of cause, limiting the abl. abs. aditu . . . angusto. The camp was protected on one side by the wall of the town, on another by the theatre, the substructure of which, supporting the rising and semicircular rows of seats, was probably built up in two or more tiers of arches. See the illustrations under 'amphitheatre' or 'theatre' in the English dictionaries.

172, 10. portari atque agi: 'things were being carried and animals driven.'

172, 11. viis: abl. of means, expressing the way by which; 'over crowded roads.'

172, 13. loco praedae: 'as booty.'

172, 16. Iuba: Juba naturally supported the Pompeians, for his father had been restored to the throne of Numidia by Pompey more than thirty years before. He also had a private grudge against Curio, who, when tribune the year before, had proposed to annex his kingdom to the Roman domain.

172, 24. pronuntiari: 'the announcement to be made.'

172, 25. in . . . loco: in this meaning loco commonly omits in, as in l. 13.

173, 1. CHAPTER 26. in castra: Rebilus had been left in command, 171, 9 f.

173, 3. imperator: this was merely an honorary title given by the soldiers to their commander after an important victory. In the present case a victory trifling in itself may have assumed importance in the eyes of the soldiers as it resulted in their gaining an abundance of supplies from the transports.

173, 7. rege: Juba.

173, 13. possent: subj. with priusquam, of an act anticipated.¹

173, 15. equitatuque, etc.: of the enemy's cavalry; abl. abs. expressing concession.

173, 16. litora: for the pl., see on priores fossas, 165, 5. — oppidum: Utica.

173, 18. CHAPTER 27. Marsi: Curio's men were largely from the Marsian and Paelignian districts in central Italy. Enlisted as Pompeians, they joined Caesar on the march to Brundisium.

173, 22. serviunt: 'tickle,' by telling what would be welcome news. — quae volumus, etc.: the two clauses in parenthesis explain in inverse order (the chiasmic arrangement) the sive . . . sive clauses. The centurions thought that Varus would believe in the truth of what he was glad to hear, and they hoped that Curio's soldiers would be as faithless as they themselves had been. Cf. quod fere, etc., 93, 16 f., and see note.

173, 24. confirmant quidem certe: 'make at any rate a positive assertion'; quidem emphasizes the preceding word, certe = 'at any rate.'

173, 25. maximeque . . . facultatem: the point is that if Curio's men, who had formerly been in Pompey's service, should see and talk with Varus's soldiers, they would probably return to their old allegiance.

174, 1. una valle, etc.: 'with only a little valley between them.'

174, 4. CHAPTER 28. Corfini: it was at Corfinium, on the route from the Rubicon to Brundisium, that one of Pompey's strongest forces surrendered to Caesar, including the two legions now with Curio. At the surrender Quinctilius, instead of joining Caesar, had gone to Africa.

174, 7. Corfinio: abl. of separation, not to be translated as locative.

174, 8: idem . . . constarent: 'the centuries and the maniples remained the same.' See Introd. § 28.

174, 11. primam: best translated with sacramenti, although it limits memoriam, as if sacramenti memoriam were a cpd. Then, as now, enlisting soldiers were required to take the oath of allegiance. — Domitium: Domitius Ahenobarbus was Pompey's lieutenant in command at Corfinium, and Quinctilius was his quaestor.

174, 12. dixissent: subj. in implied indir. disc.

174, 13. qui . . . perpessi: at Corfinium.

174, 14. pro his: Curio and his officers.

174, 15. Huc: 'to this.'

174, 16. ad spem: 'to inspire a hope'; cf. the common use of the gerundive with ad to express purpose. — quae: interrog., introducing an indir. quest. in apposition with pauca, 'as to what they ought,' etc.

174, 18. nullam . . . significatio: 'there was no sign made in any way,' either of approval or disapproval.

174, 20. CHAPTER 29. At: although Curio's soldiers had shown no sympathy with the suggestions of Quinctilius, their loyalty was nevertheless seen to be wavering. Consequently Curio and his faithful officers and men were filled with apprehension. — omnium: i.e. of the loyal.

174, 22. opiniones fingebat: 'kept inventing fancies'; opinio often implies a mere notion or conjecture as contrasted with sententia, a well-grounded opinion.

174, 23. Hoc: 'this invention.'

174, 24. uno auctore: abl. abs., 'starting from a single source.'

174, 25. plures . . . videbantur: 'there seemed to be several sources of the story'; and so what might be only the creation of some frightened soldier's imagination appeared to be a well-authenticated fact. — Erat civile bellum: 'it was a civil war,' i.e. a war in which men might change sides without any lack of patriotism. With this statement, and those that follow, through iactaverant, 175, 3, Caesar is justifying the apprehensions of Curio and his faithful supporters. Curio's two legions, which had been in Pompey's army only a few months before, would be seriously weakened if many men should follow the example of the two Marsian centurions and their twenty-two comrades (173, 18 f.). — The text of the rest of this chapter is very uncertain, and is the product largely of modern scholars' conjectures; the manuscripts are badly corrupted.

174, 26. genus hominum, etc.: 'it was a class of men which could do what it pleased and follow what party it would,' i.e. they were independent Italians, and could follow either Caesar or Pompey. The subjunctives express characteristic.

174, 27. legiones: pred. of erant implied; ae is subject.

174, 28. nam: follows not the previous statement itself, but its implication 'and so they were not attached to Caesar,' for his favors to individual soldiers had been outshone by his favors to whole communities. The bond of personal gratitude was therefore weak. — beneficia: translate as subject, making the vb. passive, 'the favors had been lessened in value.' No exactions had been made of his fallen foes by Caesar, except that in Italy the private soldiers were enrolled in his own army. The officers were allowed to go free with all their possessions.

174, 29. conferrentur: the subject is beneficia implied. This rel. clause is represented as quoted from the soldiers' remarks, implied indir. disc.; 'with which, as it was said, they were bestowed,' etc. — etiam . . . coniuncta: 'even those that had been united to the opposite party.' From the time that he crossed the Rubicon Caesar had forbidden private soldiers to enter a town armed; and when Corfinium was surrendered late in the evening, he postponed its occupation till dawn in order to avoid all possibility of plunder and outrage in the dark.

174, 30. enim: connects the following sentence with legiones . . . fuerant, not with nam . . . coniuncta. — Marsis, etc.: see on 173, 18.

175, 2. centuriones militesque: in pred. apposition with the antecedent (ii implied) of the second qui, 'those who had remained in their tents, both centurions and privates.' There was danger that the men remaining in the army, being fellow-countrymen of the deserters, might show the same disloyalty. — Non nulli, etc.: 'some had thrown out rather offensive remarks.'

175, 3. Sermones, etc.: 'remarks of the soldiers of doubtful meaning were given the harsher interpretation.'

175, 4. diligentiores: 'uncommonly watchful,' i.e. for all signs of disloyalty.

175, 6. CHAPTER 30. consilio: a council of war was composed of the superior officers; see Introd. § 36.

175, 8. conandum: impers., 'that efforts should be made.'

175, 9. huius . . . consiliis: 'to plans of this sort (i.e. of desertion) on the part of the soldiers.'

175, 12. experiri, perpeti: subjects of praestare, 'it was better.'

175, 13. gravissimum supplicium: 'the utmost penalty,' i.e. death. They knew that if they fell into the power of Varus they would be put to death. The Pompeians showed none of Caesar's clemency.

175, 14. Erant qui censerent: 'some urged.'¹ — de tertia vigilia: about one o'clock.

175, 15. ut . . . sanarentur: 'that after some little time the soldiers might be restored to their right minds.'

175, 17. accidisset: for fut. perf. of dir. disc., 'if anything disastrous should occur.'

175, 18. daretur: in a second purpose clause with ut (l. 15).

175, 20. CHAPTER 31. quantum . . . superesse: 'that there was as great an excess of spirit in one proposition as there was lack of it in the other.' Sententiae is dat. of possessor, animi is partit. gen. with quantum and tantum.

175, 21. hos: 'the latter,'² i.e. those who had spoken last (l. 14 ff.); illos, 'the former,' whose proposition is given in l. 7 ff.

175, 25. accepto magno detrimento: 'with heavy loss.'

175, 26. Quasi . . . concilient:³ 'as if it were not the case that good fortune in exploits gains,' etc.

175, 29. quid habet: 'what does it mean?'

176, 1. sibi parum credi: 'that they are not much trusted.' Intr.

176, 2. illis, his: 'the latter, the former,' a rarer use than that in 175, 21 f.; see hic in Vocab. His, though referring here rather unusually to the more distant word (prudentes), designates the persons who were actually nearer the speaker. Curio implies that only men of honor were present in the council. The dat. expresses interest or reference. — augeat: 'would increase,' a protasis² being implied, 'if they should know of it.'

176, 4. explorata habeamus: 'we should² regard as certain.'

176, 6. quanto: amount of difference with praestet, which contains a comparative idea, 'how much better it would be!'

176, 7. An: expresses emphasis,³ 'or is it not the case that, like the wounds of the body, so the troubles of an army ought to be concealed?'

176, 10. addunt: 'add the injunction'; here equivalent to a vb. of commanding, hence the obj. clause with ut. — quo: see on quo . . . impedirent, 73, 17.

176, 11. huius modi res: such as plots of disloyalty.

176, 15. spe: abl. of separation, 'abandon hope.'

176, 16. magnaque . . . confido: 'and I trust that I shall soon come to a decision on the matter, in great part in harmony with you.'

176, 21. CHAPTER 32. auctoritate: 'example.' A strong force went over to Caesar at Corfinium (see on Corfini, 174, 4), so that the influence of its example was important. — fecerit: result clauses sometimes take the perf., which is independent of sequence (usus sit would regularly be followed by a secondary tense) and represents the result as an accomplished fact.

176, 23. et Caesar, etc.: 'Caesar formed a most kindly opinion of you, while the other side felt most bitterly.' The Pompeians lost what Caesar gained.

176, 26. Italia excessit: with Pompey's departure from Brundisium (see summary of Book I, p. 383) Caesar was left the undisputed master of Italy, after a campaign of only two months, in which not a single pitched battle had been fought.

177, 3. eos: the Caesareans; eorum, the Pompeians.

177, 5. in Hispania: the victory of Ilerda, at the beginning of August (see summary of Book I, p. 383).

177, 7. duces: Afranius and Petreius.—provincias: Hither and Farther Spain, the former including the northern and eastern parts of the peninsula, the latter the southern and western.

177, 8. diebus XL quibus: 'within forty days after'; the rel., like its antecedent, is abl. of time within which.

177, 9. qui . . . resistent: i.e. the Pompeians, now that they have been crushed in Spain.

177, 10. incerta victoria: abl. abs., 'while victory was uncertain.'

177, 11. cum: concessive.

177, 13. prioris sacramenti, etc.: see 174, 11.

177, 14. Domitius: when Caesar arrived at Corfinium on his march south from the Rubicon, Domitius Ahenobarbus, Pompey's lieutenant in command there, not feeling strong enough to stand a siege or to engage in open battle, plotted with his closest friends to run away and leave the army to its fate. Upon the discovery of his cowardly scheme the soldiers arrested him and his accomplices and surrendered to Caesar, who dismissed Domitius and his aristocratic officers unharmed and enrolled their legions in his own army.

177, 18. qui: 'how,' adv.—proiectis . . . imperio: things which Domitius had practically done in plotting to desert his army.

177, 20. Fingitur, etc.: ironical, 'there is being invented a new idea of your sacred obligation.'—ut . . . respiciatis: a subst. clause in apposition with religio.

177, 22. capitis deminutione: 'loss of civil rights.' A Roman taken prisoner in war lost all his social and political privileges; but if he was allowed to return home through release or escape, his rights were restored.

177, 26. laboris: limits praemia.

177, 27. qui . . . dubitatis: 'and what (qualis) the end (qui, the antecedent of which is eventu) is going to be, even you are not in doubt.'

177, 28. quem . . . processit: modifying fortunam, 'so far as the war has yet advanced.'

177, 29. cur praeteream: 'why should I pass by.'¹

178, 2. adveniens: 'by my mere approach,' referring to Lucius Caesar's flight (170, 12 ff.).

178, 3. sinuque, etc.: 'and from the very bosom of the enemy.'

178, 4. eoque, etc.: 'and have driven them to that pass.'

178, 6. commeatu iuvari: 'be provided with supplies.'

178, 7. Italiae fugam: 'the flight from Italy,' see on Italia excessit, 176, 26.

178, 8. praeiudicia: in apposition with the three accs., ignominiam, etc.; 'precedents for,' etc., portending another disaster for the Pompeians in Africa.

178, 9. aequimini: 'you throw in your lot with the disgrace at Corfinium!' etc.

178, 10. imperatoris: see on 173, 3.—cuus, etc.: 'if you regret this.'²

178, 11. meum . . . nomen: i.e. Caesaris miles.

178, 16. CHAPTER 33. viderentur: pass., 'they were seen.'

178, 17. sit: an obj. clause coördinate with cohortantur; see on faciat, 65, 5.

178, 20. sit data: 'should be given,' implied indir. disc., representing fut. perf. indic.

178, 23. Varus . . . Attius: until the time of the Empire, when there was great confusion in the order of personal names, the family name commonly followed the gentile or clan name. Cf. this same name in 170, 3.

178, 24. sive . . . detur: implied indir. disc., being a part of the purpose ne . . . praetermittat.—sollicitandi milites: 'of tampering with the soldiers' of Curio.

178, 27. CHAPTER 34. supra: in 174, 1.

178, 28. non ita: 'not so very.'—Hanc: object of transire, referring to vallis, l. 27.

178, 29. si . . . conarentur: indir. quest. depending on expectabat.

178, 30. quo: as in 176, 10.—aequiore loco: 'in the more favorable position,' i.e. above the enemy as they came up out of the valley.

179, 1. Simul, etc.: the thought of this sentence has no immediate connection with the one before it. A statement about Curio's army has apparently been lost. — levis . . . complures: 'several men of light equipment (gen. of quality) interspersed among them.' This custom was borrowed from the German cavalry employed by Caesar in Gaul. For the use of the footmen, see 163, 12 ff.

179, 2. cum, etc.: 'were seen descending,' etc.

179, 6. qui: sc. ii as antecedent (see on qui, 51, 2), which is limited by levis armaturae.

179, 7. circumveniebantur: they were bunglers; Germans would have escaped. See on 163, 27.

179, 8. Huc . . . conversa: 'turned this way.'

179, 9. Rebilus: see on 171, 9.

179, 12. unum: 'merely' ('one thing only').

179, 13. quae . . . confirmassent: see 178, 17 f. The subj. is due to implied indir. disc., 'which, as he said, they had,' etc.

179, 14. Adeoque . . . vallis: 'and the valley was such an obstruction' (lit., 'was so obstructed'), because of its steep slopes (178, 28).

179, 15. nisi sublevati: 'except when supported,' being pushed ahead by those behind them.

179, 16. animus . . . militum: 'the soldiers'; Latin frequently assigns an action to a man's animus, 'the mind, the heart,' when English, with less exactness, speaks only of the man. Animus is collective here; the pl. is commoner when applied to a number of persons.

179, 19. priusquam, etc.: see on possent, 173, 13.

179, 22. CHAPTER 35. ex infimis ordinibus: 'a centurion of the lowest rank,' see Introd. § 35.

179, 23. de exercitu: with primus, 'was the first from Curio's army to overtake,' etc.; cf. ex . . . militibus, l. 25 f., depending on unus, and see on ex . . . Gallis, 73, 3.

179, 26. eius: = Vari.

179, 29. paulumque afuit quin: 'he lacked little of killing' (lit., 'it was not far away but that he killed'); afuit is impers., having as its subject the clause with quin; see on educat, 93, 9.

180, 6. cum . . . tum: 'not only . . . but also.'

180, 7. quod . . . indigebant: 'the fact that the soldiers were without,' etc. This subst. clause¹ is an additional subject of prohibebat.

180, 15. bucinatores: he gave the signals for the change of sentries during the night.

180, 16. ad speciem: 'to keep up appearances,' so that Curio should think Varus's army was still in camp. It will be remembered that this camp was built right beside the city of Utica (172, 5 f.).

180, 20. CHAPTER 36. multitudo: 'the common people,' including the farmers from the country round about (cf. 172, 10 ff.). — belli: obj. gen. with insolens. — Uticenses: the citizens, enjoying political rights.

180, 21. illi: = Caesari.

180, 22. conventus: 'a Roman association,' the collective name of Romans living in a provincial town. Cf. 'the American colony' in Berlin or Paris. — qui . . . constaret: 'consisting of,' etc., a clause of characteristic. — generibus: 'classes'; i.e. among the Romans in Utica there were adherents of Caesar as well as of Pompey.

181, 2. CHAPTER 37. fides, etc.: 'he could not be made to believe them.'

181, 4. nuntiis ac litteris: indicating reliable information, confirming the rumors which had been circulating two days or more; see 177, 5 ff.

181, 7. millibus: abl. of amount of difference, not affected by minus; ¹*longe* is redundant.

181, 8. munitionibus: Curio's camp near Utica (173, 4 f.).

181, 11. duae legiones: of the four legions received from Caesar, Curio had left two in Sicily (170, 3).

181, 13. salis: salt was commonly obtained by evaporating sea water in pits dug near the shore. To insure a constant supply of cheap salt at Rome the government very early assumed control of the business.

181, 20. CHAPTER 38. perfugis: these men, pretending to be deserters, were really in the service of Juba. Of course their report was false.

181, 21. Leptitanorum: the people of Leptis Minor, a town on the coast of the province of Africa, south of Clupea.

181, 26. Multum . . . adiuvat: 'contribute a great deal to the approval of this course.'

181, 27. superioris temporis proventus: 'the outcome of the past,' i.e. of his efforts in Sicily and Africa.

181, 28. rei bene gerendae: 'of success.' Severe as was the blow to 182, 7. nullis ordinibus: 'helter-skelter.'

182, 14. CHAPTER 39. convenit, cognovit, quaerit: the narrative, by its lack of connectives, admirably represents Curio's haste.

182, 16. Saburram: sc. castris praesse. — Reliqua: 'all further questions.' He would have done well to learn how far away Juba was; but he had no suspicion of the supposed deserters (181, 20).

182, 17. signa: 'maniples,' each of the thirty maniples in a legion having its own standard.

182, 18. cum perfugis: an abridged form of expression (for cum perfugarum oratione), common to many languages.

182, 20. potuerint: subj. of characteristic.

182, 22. de referenda gratia: 'about making requital for your services. — per se: i.e. without being exaggerated.

182, 26. libenter praedicant: 'like to boast.'

182, 28. quicquid intercederet temporis: 'whatever time was allowed to go by.'

182, 29. ita . . . deērant: 'so the hopefulness of Curio was equaled by the soldiers' enthusiasm.'

183, 1. quam maxime . . . perterritos: 'while they were in the greatest possible panic.'

183, 4. ad spem: 'in his hope' (lit., 'with reference to his hope').

183, 8. CHAPTER 40. cui: see on quibus, 97, 17.

183, 10. elephantis: elephants were first used in battle against Roman armies by Pyrrhus of Epirus at the battle of Heraclea, 280 B.C. During the Punic wars, in which elephants were used by the Carthaginians, the Romans became familiar with them and ceased to fear them.

183, 13. simulatione timoris: 'pretending to be afraid.'

183, 15. cognovisset: for fut. perf. of dir. disc.

183, 16. praesentis . . . opinione: 'his notion of the present movement,' i.e. that it represented fear. With this use of opinio, cf. 174, 22, and see note.

183, 21. CHAPTER 41. spatio: 'at a distance,' i.e. from the starting-point at Camp Cornelia. Cf. intervallo, 182, 4.

183, 23. ad speciem: as in 180, 16. The infantry were not to fight as yet.

185, 15. in classe: the swift ships are meant, distinguished from the transports mentioned in the next line. All the large ships, instead of sending their boats to shore in obedience to Rufus's orders (l. 10), sailed away without taking thought of the unfortunates on shore.

185, 17. incitabat: 'instigated' to the same conduct. — ad officium, etc.: 'reported for duty.'

185, 30. cum: concessive. — fidem: his promise of safety to the soldiers who had surrendered.

186, 1. neque: = neque tamen, 'and yet did not dare.' — Ipse: Juba. With all the pride and swagger of a petty barbarian king, Juba took advantage of his great services to the Pompeians in destroying Curio's army to enter the capital of the Roman province and take control there for a few days, while Varus and the rest could do nothing but acquiesce with the best grace possible.

BOOK THIRD

Campaign of 48 B.C. — Macedonia and Thessaly. — Arriving in Rome from Marseilles (see summary of Book II, first paragraph, p. 383) about the first of December, Caesar remained there only eleven days, during which he was elected consul for the next year, and then hastened on to Brundisium to direct the immediate transportation of his army across the Adriatic for the decisive struggle with Pompey.

During the nine months' respite granted by Caesar's campaign in the West, Pompey had been gathering a strong army and fleet from all the eastern peoples who were subject or allied to Rome. His headquarters were at Dyrrachium, and his fleet lined the coast. Probably his intention was to invade Italy the following spring, and nothing was further from his thoughts than that Caesar would bring the war into Greece.

On January 5, 48 B.C., in the midst of a storm, Caesar landed in Epirus with about half his troops. The ships were returning for the rest of his army, which was at Brundisium under command of Antony, when they were destroyed by Pompey's admiral, Bibulus. It was nearly three months before Antony could effect a crossing. Meanwhile Caesar, immediately upon his arrival in Greece, had marched towards Dyrrachium, receiving without resistance the surrender of Oricum, Apollonia, and other towns. Pompey's army hastened to intercept him, and the opposing forces encamped on opposite banks of the Apsus. While here Caesar made once more futile attempts for peace. Finally, near the end of March, Antony succeeded with the aid of the greatest good fortune in landing near Lissus. Caesar, outgeneraling Pompey, joined Antony and cut Pompey off from his headquarters at Dyrrachium. With his control of the sea, however, Pompey was not much harmed by this move, and intrenching himself at Petra hill he decided to wear Caesar out by a policy of masterly inactivity. Caesar responded by attempting to blockade Pompey, but was obliged to extend his lines of circumvallation so far that they could not be properly defended, and Pompey finally broke through, inflicting a severe loss on Caesar.

Caesar at once withdrew to Apollonia and thence marched away to Thessaly. The Pompeians believed that the war was over, and the nobles in the army even fell to disputing over the distribution of the spoils and of the offices in Rome. Caesar encamped in the plain of Pharsalus, and Pompey, who had followed leisurely after, took up a position some miles to the north at Larissa. Although outnumbered more than two to one, Caesar was eager for a battle. But Pompey was slow to accept the challenge, and was only driven to it after some days by the taunts of his followers, who declared that he was prolonging the war merely for the sake of maintaining his command. By a skillful arrangement of his troops Caesar won a complete victory (August, 48 B.C.). Pompey fled to Egypt, where he was treacherously assassinated. Caesar, hastening in pursuit, arrived at Alexandria in October. Sorely against his will and the interests of Rome he was detained there for about nine months by the so-called Alexandrine War, which was caused by his efforts, through arbitration of the quarrel between young Ptolemy and his sister Cleopatra, to set them on the throne as joint rulers.

PAGE 187, LINE 1. CHAPTER I. Dictatore: 'as dictator.' Caesar learned at Marseilles of his appointment as dictator for the purpose of holding the consular elections for the year 48 B.C. These elections were regularly presided over by a consul, but both consuls of 49 B.C.

were with Pompey's army at Dyrrachium. The dictator was an extraordinary official, with absolute power, appointed in public crises for such time as circumstances required, but not to exceed six months.

187, 3. per leges: a law of 342 B.C. enacted that no man should be reelected to an office until after an interval of ten years. Caesar had been consul in 59 B.C., consequently 48 B.C. was the first year in which he was eligible for a second term. — consulem: in pred. agreement with the subject of feri, which is implied from ei. The dat. is more common.¹ — liceret: characteristic.

187, 4. cum: causal.² — fides, etc.: 'credit was somewhat contracted.' In the uncertainties of a time of war financiers are unwilling to lend money except at high rates of interest. — tota Italia: the abl. of place where, if limited by totus, is generally used without in.

187, 5. neque . . . solverentur: debtors refused to make payment because it was popularly believed that a general abolition of debts would result from the war. This was also a strong reason for the collapse of credit. — creditæ pecuniæ: 'loans.'

187, 6. arbitri darentur: 'appraisers should be appointed.' — ferent, traderentur: in the same construction as darentur.

187, 7. possessionum et rerum: 'of real estate and personal property.' Only the property of debtors would need to be appraised. — quanti: gen. of indefinite value,³ 'at that value which each of these properties had before the war.' The subj. is due to implied indir. disc. Property had depreciated since the outbreak of the war.

187, 8. eae: 'these pieces of property,' at their value before the war.

187, 9. Hoc: 'this measure,' subject of esse, l. 12. If Caesar had been merely a revolutionary leader of the people and not the patriotic, far-seeing statesman that he was, he would have yielded to popular clamor and have declared the abolition of all debts. Instead, he sacrificed the favor of the debt-ridden populace, and passed a law which helped not only the debtor by increasing the value of his property which he could offer in payment of his liabilities, but also the creditor by securing him at least a partial payment of what was due him and relieving his fear of losing everything.

187, 12. existimationem: 'credit'; the debtor's credit was protected by his being obliged to pay at least part of his debts.

187, 13. praetoribus . . . ferentibus: abl. abs., 'upon the praetors . . . bringing the bills before the people,' i.e. in the popular assembly. Caesar as dictator could have taken the step without consulting the assembly, but by allowing a popular vote he made the pardons doubly sure and avoided the appearance of arrogance towards the people (see 188, 2 ff.).

187, 14. non nullos: obj. of restituit, l. 18. — ambitus: gen. of the charge with damnatos.¹

187, 15. illis temporibus: in 52 B.C., owing to political anarchy at Rome resulting from the intense partisan warfare between the senate and the popular party, Pompey was given dictatorial power under the name of 'consul without a colleague,' and his soldiers occupied the city. Among his laws was one increasing the penalty for bribery at elections, with retroactive force till the year 70 B.C., by which almost any politician of Rome, except perhaps Cato and Cicero, might have been sent into banishment. It was especially enforced against Caesar's friends, whom he now pardoned, justifying his action by the gross injustice of their trials (iudicia), which had been limited to a single day each, and the jurors who gave the verdict (sententiam ferentibus) had sometimes not been present when the evidence was being taken.

187, 18. in integrum: 'to their former standing,' i.e. which they had held before the trials. — qui: 'men who'; the antecedent is non nullos.

187, 19. vellet: implied indir. disc. — proinde . . . si: 'rating them just as if.' The subj. is regularly used in conditional comparisons;² the sequence follows restituit.

188, 1. sui fecissent potestatem: 'they had put themselves in his hands.' Sui is obj. gen. with potestatem; the subj. is due to implied indir. disc.,³ being quoted as the reason in Caesar's mind when he granted the pardons.

188, 2. enim: refers back to the first clause of the previous sentence; see on praetoribus . . . ferentibus, 187, 13. — prius: 'rather.'

188, 4. ingratus: it was a greater favor, because it meant greater security, for the exiles to be recalled by a vote of the people rather than by Caesar's authority as dictator.

188, 6. CHAPTER 2. feriis Latinis: an ancient Latin festival of Jupiter Latiaris (god of the Latins), in which Rome had taken part for nearly 500 years. It was celebrated near the beginning of each year on the Alban Mount under the direction of the new consuls, who never entered upon a military campaign without thus assuring themselves of the favor of their guardian deity. By not neglecting this religious custom in spite of his haste to be off for Greece, Caesar "was making himself the supreme impersonation of the laws against Pompey with his hordes of Oriental auxiliaries."—comitiis: elections for other magistrates besides consuls.

188, 7. dictatura: abl. of separation.

188, 10. tantum navium: 'so few ships.'

188, 11. LXX cohortes: i.e. seven legions (see 190, 22 and Introd. § 28). The inability to take the whole army at once proved a serious handicap. It was nearly three months before Antony and the remaining legions joined Caesar.

188, 12. Hoc . . . defuit: 'this was the only thing that prevented Caesar from speedily finishing the war.' With ad celeritatem, cf. ad spem, 183, 4.

188, 14. hoc . . . quod: cf. eo . . . quod, 60, 8 f.—infrequentiores: 'in smaller numbers,' i.e. the legions lacked their full quotas.

188, 15. defecerant: 'had been lost.' Caesar's campaigns in Gaul, 58-51 B.C., are meant.

188, 16. autumnus: Caesar's army was in Apulia in December, according to the uncorrected calendar (see on 100, 2), which at this time was about two months ahead of the seasons. In southern Italy the autumns are very hot.

188, 17. ex: 'after.'

188, 19. CHAPTER 3. annuum spatium: really only some nine months and a half. Pompey had left Italy in March; see summary of Book I, p. 383.

188, 21. Asia: i.e. the Roman province, comprising Mysia, Lydia, Caria, and Phrygia. The introduction in chapters 3-5 of so many foreign names both of persons and places, together with a sprinkling of strange political titles, is highly effective in indicating the vastness and the barbaric character of Pompey's resources as contrasted with Caesar's little army of Italians and Gauls. The pupil should look up on a map all the places mentioned, in order to get a better idea of the extent of Roman influence in the East.

188, 24. imperatam . . . exegerat: 'he had required and collected from Asia,' etc. Asiae, etc., are indir. objs. of imperatam; see on imperat, 55, 11.

188, 25. dynastis et tetrarchis: petty rulers to whom Rome still allowed some degree of independence.

188, 26. liberis Achaiae populis: Achaia was the name given to the part of Greece south of Epirus and Thessaly from 146 B.C., when the whole country became subject to Rome and was placed under the supervision of the governor of Macedonia. The separate communities were left "free," in so far as they retained the ownership of their land and in purely local matters governed themselves. Democracy, however, was abolished and the government everywhere was intrusted to boards of wealthy men. All mutual and foreign relations were subject to Rome's dictation, and tribute was paid by most, if not all, of the states.

188, 27. societates: 'tax collecting companies.' The business of collecting the Roman revenues, both in Italy and in the provinces, was sold at auction by the censors in Rome, for terms of five years, to joint stock companies of capitalists, who paid the state a fixed sum annually and made their profits from the taxes collected. These companies occupied a place in the ancient financial world similar to that held by the steel and oil trusts of the present day. There was a president who conducted the bidding for the lease, and gave bonds to the state for the due performance of all the terms of the contract. The superintendent of the home office in Rome had general oversight of all the accounts, correspondence, etc., and had under his control a number of assistant managers in charge of the different departments. Since much of the revenue was paid in kind, storehouses, ships, and great bodies of slaves and subordinates were required for handling and marketing the produce. Taxes were levied on lands, mines, personal property, exports and imports, etc. Pompey apparently compelled the companies to pay him the sums which should have been turned over to the authorities of the state. — quas ipse obtinebat: Macedonia including Epirus and Thessaly, Illyricum, the only territory won from Caesar (see summary of Book II, last paragraph, p. 384), and Africa, which the ill-fated Curio had failed to rescue from the Pompeians.

189, 3. CHAPTER 4. factam ex duabus: two depleted legions were united.

189, 4. veteranis: legionary soldiers who, upon completing twenty years of service, had been honorably discharged.

189, 6. Lentulus: Lentulus Crus, consul of the year 49 B.C.

189, 8. supplementi nomine: 'as substitutes,' to take the places of men who had been lost.

189, 9. Antonianos: Gaius Antonius, younger brother of Mark Antony, was Caesar's commander in Illyricum in 49 B.C. In an attempt to relieve Dolabella and his fleet he was besieged on the island of Curicta and, partly through treachery of his centurion Pullo (221, 28), compelled to surrender with fifteen cohorts (see on quas ipse obtinebat, 188, 27). His men were enrolled in Pompey's army.

189, 10. Scipione: Pompey's father-in-law, governor of the province of Syria.

189, 11. Creta: the preposition, regularly omitted with the names of little islands, is sometimes omitted in the case of large islands.

189, 12. numero: abl. of specification, 'to the number.'

189, 14. Gallos: in the third century B.C. three tribes of Gauls invaded Asia Minor, and after overrunning the peninsula for about fifty years, were compelled to settle down in the district which was thenceforth called Galatia. Although they took on so much of the Greek civilization with which they were surrounded that they were called also Gallograeci and their country Gallograecia, still they preserved their own language with such persistency that in the fourth century A.D. their speech was said by Jerome to resemble that of the Treveri in Gaul. They were organized in twelve divisions, four to a tribe, each ruled by a tetrarch. It was to the descendants of these Gauls that St. Paul wrote his Epistle to the Galatians. — Deiotarus: a tetrarch in Galatia, who had received from Pompey considerable additions to his territory for his services in the Mithridatic war. — Ariobarzanes: king of Cappadocia, whose grandfather had been restored to his throne by Pompey.

189, 15. ad: adv., 'about.'

189, 17. excellenti virtute: abl. of quality, best taken with cc.

189, 19. Ptolomæum: in 81 B.C. Egypt was left by will to Rome. Ptolemy Auletes was allowed, however, to assume the throne, and he bought freedom from interference afterwards by immense bribes. To meet these payments he oppressed his people so severely that he was finally driven from his kingdom. In 55 B.C., upon his promise of a further payment of 10,000 talents ($12,000,000), he was restored, at Pompey's order, by a Roman army, made up partly of Gauls and Germans, under command of Gabinius. A detachment of these troops remained at Alexandria as a bodyguard for the king.

189, 20. Pompeius filius: Gnaeus, elder son of Pompey.

189, 23. alter . . . venerat: = Domnilius. — filium: young Castor in 45 B.C. accused his grandfather, the tetrarch Deiotarus (l. 14), of having plotted to kill Caesar when he was in Asia in 47 B.C. One of Cicero's extant speeches was spoken in defense of Deiotarus.

189, 24. Antiocho: his kingdom had been secured to him by Pompey in 64 B.C.

189, 26. Huc: 'to these forces'; cf. 174, 15.

189, 27. imperio, gratia: abls. of manner; 'got together at his orders or as a favor to him.'

189, 28. reliquarum . . . civitatum: partit. gen., 'men of all other nations,' etc.

189, 29. supra: in l. 13 f., vii millia.

190, 3. CHAPTER 5. Dyrrachi, Apolloniae: the most important towns of western Macedonia, and the terminals of the Roman military road, the Via Egnatia, which connected them with Thessalonica and the East. Apollonia was at this time an educational centre. Caesar's grandnephew and heir, the young Octavian, who became the emperor Augustus, studied there.

190, 6. omni ora: without in, omni being equiv. to tota; see on tota Italia, 187, 4.

190, 8. Cassius: shortly after the battle of Pharsalus he surrendered to Caesar. Although he was well treated, being given both military and political offices, he was a leader with Brutus in the conspiracy against Caesar's life. See Shakspeare's Julius Caesar. — Marcellus: consul with Lentulus (189, 6) in 49 B.C.

190, 10. officio maritimo: 'naval service,' indir. obj. of praepositus.

190, 11. Bibulus: Caesar's colleague in the aedileship, 65 B.C., in the praetorship, 62 B.C., and in the consulship, 59 B.C. A stubborn, incapable aristocrat, he was always arrayed against Caesar, but never with success (see Introd. § 7). His appointment as admiral of the fleet was one item in the general mismanagement of Pompey's campaign in the first year of the war (see summary of Book II, last paragraph, p. 384). — ad hunc . . . respiciebat: 'devolved upon him.'

190, 13. CHAPTER 6. Caesar . . . solvit: solvit (l. 21) is the main verb of this long sentence. There are three principal subordinate clauses, ut . . . venit (l. 13), contionatus . . . sperarent (ll. 13-19), and conclamantibus . . . facturos (ll. 19-21). Translate in two sentences, ending the first with sperarent and making the participle contionatus its main verb. — contionatus, etc.: 'he addressed his soldiers, saying,' followed by indir. disc.

190, 16. relinquerent, concenderent, sperarent: 'they should leave,' etc., representing imperatives of the actual speech.¹

190, 17. quo: see on 73, 17.

190, 19. conclamantibus omnibus: 'upon their all shouting out,' followed by indir. disc. — imperaret: cf. relinquerent, etc., l. 16.

190, 20. imperavisset: for imperaveris, fut. perf., of dir. disc.

190, 21. II Non. Ian.: read secundo Nonas Ianuarias or pridie Nonas, etc., but translate 'January 4.'² See on autumnus, 188, 16.

190, 22. supra: in 188, 11.

190, 23. inter: 'among'; a commoner position would be before Cerauniorum. For Caesar's campaign against Pompey during 48 B.C., see the map MACEDONIA AND THESSALY, p. 191.

190, 25. arbitrabantur: deponent verbs are rarely used passively. The perf. participle is most frequently so used; see depopulatis, 58, 17.

192, 1. ad unam: 'without exception'; cf. ad unum, 185, 4.

192, 3. CHAPTER 7. Orici: only a few miles north of Palaeste.

192, 5. Corcyrae: loc., as regularly with names of little islands; cf. Creta, 189, 11, and see note.

192, 6. sibi: see on quibus, 97, 17.

192, 7. praesidio: 'as a convoy,' dat. of purpose.

192, 8. IIII: 'only four.' — neque . . . occurrit: 'and Bibulus did not come up early enough' to hinder Caesar's landing; cf. l. 19 ff. — impeditis . . . remigibus: abls. abs. expressing cause.

192, 10. prius . . . quam: see on non prius . . . quam, 93, 17.

192, 11. perferretur: see on perficiantur, 155, 8.

192, 16. CHAPTER 8. qui . . . adhiberet: rel. clause of purpose; translate 'with orders to use,' etc.

192, 19. offenderunt: 'met with disaster.'

192, 21. onustarum: 'still laden' with soldiers, opposed by inanibus (dat.), 'empty ships only.'

192, 22. indiligentiae . . . iracundiam: 'the wrath due to his own carelessness and mistake.'

192, 25. deterreri: an uncommon use of pres. instead of fut. infin. with a verb of hoping, 'hoping for the rest to be frightened off.' — a Sasonis: sc. portu. Bibulus tried to make up by his watchfulness for his previous carelessness. The whole coast of Macedonia and Illyricum was now patrolled by his ships.

192, 28. gravissima hieme: abl. abs. expressing concession, 'though the winter was very severe.'

192, 29. si . . . posset: indir. quest., 'to see if he could encounter Caesar's forces.' The sentence is incomplete in the manuscripts.

193, 4. CHAPTER 10. Corfinium: see on 174, 4. — in Hispania: see summary of Book I, near the end, p. 383.

193, 5. iudicaverat: the plpf. shows that Vibullius had received his commission to carry proposals of peace to Pompey at some time before Caesar's arrival at Palaeste, probably at the time of his second dismissal from Caesar. — quem . . . mitteret: a clause of characteristic limiting idoneum,¹ 'a fit person to send.'

193, 8. haec: observe that a subject demonstrative agrees in gender with a pred. subst.² — summa: 'substance.'

193, 9. Debere: standing first, the verb is more emphasized than its subject utrumque; translate 'it was the duty of both.'

193, 11. quae . . . possent: rel. clause of result limiting satis magna, 'great enough for them to be able to regard them as instruction and warnings to fear the chances that were still in store.' Vt . . . timerent is a subst. clause of purpose in apposition with disciplina and praeceptis.

193, 13. illum: 'Pompey.' Ab illo would be expected to follow the passive satis . . . accepta; but illum implies the addition of satis magna incommoda accepisse. The omission is as natural in English as in Latin. — amissa . . . XXX: see summary of Book I, p. 383. Translate, 'through the loss of,' etc.

193, 15. morte . . . exercitus: see 184, 27 ff.

193, 16. Antoni, etc.: see on Antonianos, 189, 9. Caesar's losses during 49 B.C. were light in comparison with Pompey's; see summary of Book II, last paragraph, p. 384.

193, 18. parcerent: 'they should spare,' representing an exhortation, parcamus, of dir. disc.

193, 19. satis essent documento: 'were a sufficient proof,' dat. of tendency or service.

193, 25. convenire: 'to be agreed upon.'

193, 27. rei publicae: gen.¹

194, 1. depositis, etc.: 'laying down their arms and letting the auxiliary troops go.'—quibus: abl.²

194, 5. CHAPTER 11. Corcyrae: Pompey's naval headquarters. Vibullius, who had come here upon his second dismissal from Caesar (193, 3 f.), was waiting for Pompey to return from a trip through the interior of Macedonia before presenting Caesar's proposals of peace. But upon learning of Caesar's arrival at Palaeste he started post-haste to meet Pompey.

194, 7. ad id: 'with reference to it,' i.e. Caesar's arrival.

194, 8. de mandatis agi: 'for action to be taken in the matter of his errand,' i.e. about peace.

194, 10. omnibus hospitibus: cf. omni ora, 190, 6, and see note.

194, 20. Parthinorum: a Greek people living near Dyrrachium; not Parthians.

✓ 194, 21. cum: introduces three verbs.—Graecos: the Parthini.

194, 23. imperium populi Romani: represented by Caesar, the duly elected consul; see end of note on feriis Latinis, 188, 6.

195, 2. CHAPTER 12. negare: infin. of intimation (hist. infin.³).

195, 3. sibi iudicium, etc.: 'take upon themselves a decision contrary to what⁴ all Italy . . . had decided.'

195, 8. Epiros: with Greek nom. ending.⁵—imperaret: for sequence, see on ut . . . occuparet, 53, 9.

195, 11. CHAPTER 13. Dyrrachio: indir. obj. of timens used intransitively, 'fearing for.' Caesar of course hoped to get possession of Dyrrachium, where Pompey had collected all his supplies (see 207, 13 f.).

195, 14. eius exercitus: 'in Pompey's army,' subjective gen. Pompey is subject of coniunxerat and intermiserat. The soldiers saw by Pompey's haste that he himself was much alarmed.

195, 20. princeps: adj. = primus, 'was the first to come forward.' Labienus was the ablest of Caesar's lieutenants in Gaul, and enjoyed his utmost confidence. In 50 B.C. he was put in charge of Cisalpine Gaul, but while holding this position of trust he was won over to the cause of Pompey and the senate, and at the outbreak of the Civil War he fled to the Pompeian army. Caesar had all his baggage sent after him unharmed. The only one of Caesar's officers to desert him, he showed himself throughout the war a monster, not only of ingratitude, but of cruelty and hate. He was killed at Munda in the closing battle of the Civil War, 45 B.C., being himself largely responsible for the manoeuvre which lost the day for the Pompeians.

195, 25. ad . . . Apsum: on the south side.

195, 26. castellis vicisque: dat. of interest, accompanying the dat. of service praesidio.

195, 27. reliquarum . . . legionum: the five legions at Brundisium, see 188, 9, and 190, 22.

195, 28. sub pellibus: this meant great hardship. Roman soldiers were generally quartered for the winter in towns or in wooden barracks.

196, 1. CHAPTER 14. Calenus: see 192, 15.

196, 3. quantum: 'so far as'; he embarked as many men as his supply of ships allowed.

196, 6. litora: 'parts of the coast.'

196, 9. privatoque consilio, etc.: 'and was being run under private management.'

196, 10. delata: sc. est. With two passives side by side the required form of sum is usually expressed but once.

196, 11. servis, etc.: 'all, slaves and free.'—ad impuberes: 'including the boys'; cf. the same use of ad in ad unum, 'to a man.' Bibulus displayed the same ferocity in 192, 23 f.

196, 12. in . . . constitit: 'depended on,' etc.

196, 13. casu: 'good luck,' i.e. the arrival of Caesar's letter in the nick of time.

196, 14. CHAPTER 15. supra, etc.: implied in l. 10.

196, 15. sicuti . . . ita: 'while . . . still'; in l. 22, 'not only . . . but even.'

196, 23. uno tempore: 'one time.'

196, 24. difficilioribus, etc.: 'having had unusually bad weather,' so that water could not be brought from Corcyra.

196, 25. excipere: 'to catch,' as it dripped from the skins.

196, 29. in quibus . . . angustiis: = in iis angustiis in quibus eos esse demonstravi.

196, 30. Libo: with his colleague Octavius (190, 10) he had conquered Illyricum in 49 B.C. by defeating Dolabella and Gaius Antonius; see on Antonianos, 189, 9.

197, 4. ut . . . viderentur: 'so that they really seemed about to treat for a settlement.'

197, 7. sclebant: Acilius and Murcus are the subjects.

197, 8. profectum [esse]: from proficio; 'something was thought to have been gained.' They supposed that Pompey had commissioned Bibulus and Libo to reply to the proposal for peace which Caesar had made through Vibullius (see 193, 9 ff.).

197, 12. CHAPTER 16. expediendam: 'arranging.' — qua . . . utebatur: 'with which he was scantily provided.'

197, 19. ex aedilitate: see on Bibulus, 190, 11.

197, 22. Suam: 'their,' including Bibulus, as is clear from the pl. missuros, l. 26, and ipsis, l. 28.

197, 23. componeretur: impers., 'a settlement might be made.'

197, 24. de consili sententia: 'by a vote of the council,' i.e. of the senators about Pompey, who considered themselves "the senate" and the only legitimate rulers of Rome.

197, 27. per se: 'by himself.'

197, 28. manerent: 'let . . . remain in force,' for maneant (hortatory) of Libo's own words. — dum . . . posset: 'until a message could come back from him.' Libo said possit, subj. of expected action with dum.¹

197, 29. de causa: 'about the matter in dispute,' between Caesar and Pompey.

198, 1. CHAPTER 17. Quibus de rebus: refers to the pauca of the previous sentence. Apparently Libo had tried to impress Caesar with the folly of his engaging in a struggle against Pompey's overwhelming force. Caesar thought such boasting unworthy of an answer at the time or of mention in his history.

198, 2. ut . . . prodantur: a complementary or subst. result clause,² equiv. to a pred. acc. with the implied esse of which satis is subject. Sc. eae res as subject of prodantur.

198, 3. causae: partit. gen. with satis.

198, 5. idque ipsi, etc.: 'and that they themselves (Libo and Bibulus) guarantee that this should be done, or take the envoys and themselves (per se) conduct them to him.' Recipio, meaning 'take the responsibility for, guarantee,' is equiv. to a vb. of promising.

198, 6. Quod . . . pertineret: 'as to the truce'; see on quod . . . adortus esset, 59, 29.

198, 7. illi: the Pompeians, who were preventing Caesar's troops at Brundisium from coming to him.

198, 8. ipse: precedes ut because emphatic, contrasted with illi.

198, 9. Si hoc, etc.: 'if they wished this restriction given up for them, they should give up for him (ipsi) their guards on the sea.' For remitterent, see on relinquerent, etc., 190, 16.

198, 10. illud: 'that restriction of theirs'; id, 'this of his.'

198, 11. Nihilo minus, etc.: 'none the less, however, it was possible to treat for a settlement, although these restrictions were not given up.' For concessive ut, see on 87, 4.

198, 12. hanc rem: 'this point,' i.e. the failure to remove the restrictions. — illi: sc. rei (from rem) = treating for a settlement; dat. of interest.

198, 13. recipere, etc.: infins. of intimation (hist.), 'would not receive,' etc.

198, 14. periculum praestare eorum: 'be responsible for their danger.'

198, 15. instare, etc.: 'while he kept insisting on a truce and struggled very earnestly for it'; de indutiis belongs with both infins.

198, 17. vitandae: belongs with both genitives, agreeing with the nearer.

198, 18. reliquam, etc.: 'further planning for the war.'

198, 22. CHAPTER 18. curari: 'be taken care of.' — neque . . . vellet: 'and yet was unwilling.'

198, 25. quisque: see 190, 7 ff. for the division commanders of Pompey's fleet.

198, 28. e re: 'expedient.'

198, 29. Luccelo: he had been a candidate for the consulship for 59 B.C., the year of Caesar and Bibulus. He was a historian, apparently of no mean ability. In 56 B.C. Cicero wrote him a letter, still preserved (ad Fam., 5, 12), urging him to write a monograph of Cicero's life and even to set it forth in more glowing colors than the strict truth would warrant. In the Civil War he accompanied Pompey and was one of his most trusted advisers. — Theophane: a Greek from Mitylene, one of Pompey's most intimate friends and advisers. When Pompey, during his flight after the battle of Pharsalus, was considering in what part of the world he could find the safest asylum, it was Theophanes who advised him to go to Egypt. He wrote an account of Pompey's career, which was accused of gross partisanship.

199, 3. vita: instrumental abl. with opus est.¹

199, 4. Cuius rei, etc.: 'the reputation for which (i.e. owing everything to Caesar) it will not be possible to dispel.'

199, 5. reductus [esse]: 'to have been brought back,' contrasted with profectus sum, 'I went forth,' i.e. of his own accord.

199, 9. CHAPTER 19. bina: 'two'; see on trinis, 149, 6.

199, 13. Mittit: Caesar is subject. — Vatinium: as tribune of the people in 59 B.C. he was instrumental in procuring for Caesar the governorship of the Gauls and Illyricum for five years.

199, 15. pronuntiavit: 'called out, asking.'

199, 16. liceretne: 'whether it was permitted,' indir. quest.²

199, 17. fugitivis: the remnants of Sertorius's Spanish army, who had been allowed by Pompey to settle just north of the Pyrenees in Aquitania, 72 B.C. — praedonibusque: for Pompey's war with the pirates, see Intro. § 22.

199, 18. id agerent: 'they were working to the end,' followed by a purpose clause in apposition with id.

199, 23. visurum quem ad modum: 'would see how,' i.e. 'make provision that.'

199, 25. isset: contracted form of iisset.

199, 26. eius rei: 'of the outcome.'

200, 1. ille: Vatinium.

200, 3. non nulli: limits both centuriones and milites. — Labienu: the vb. of saying is frequently omitted with a direct quotation.

200, 4. ergo: 'then,' i.e. seeing that the soldiers are so bitterly hostile. Doubtless the throwing of the missiles was prearranged by Labienus. See on 195, 20.

200, 5. nisi . . . relato: 'unless Caesar's head be brought to us.'

200, 6. CHAPTER 23. ab Orico: 'from the neighborhood of Oricum.'³ Libo's fleet had joined Bibulus off Oricum some days before (see 196, 14 f., and 30), and at Oricum Caesar and Libo had their interview (197, 16 f.).

200, 9. praestare: as in 175, 11.

200, 10. omnia litora: i.e. from Sason to Curicum (192, 25 f.). During the stormy weather only the principal ports were guarded.

200, 15. adeo . . . profecit: 'he accomplished so much owing to his advantageous position.'

200, 16. naves . . . iuberet: 'telling him to order,' etc.; cf. relinquerent, etc., 190, 16, and see note.

200, 17. vellet: for voles of the letter itself.

200, 19. CHAPTER 24. Antonius: Mark Antony, one of Caesar's most skillful officers, was in command of the troops which Caesar had been obliged to leave at Brundisium (188, 9 ff.).

200, 20. virtute: see on quibus, 194, 1.

200, 21. cratibus pluteisque: 'with wickerwork screens,' hendiadys.

200, 22. eoque: adv. = et in eas.

200, 24. per causam: 'on the pretext'; so always in Caesar.

201, 2. Antoniana: = Antoni.

201, 4. defensoribus: the fighting men on board, 'marines.'—suis: refers to unam. The refl. sometimes refers to an emphatic word which is not the subject.

201, 5. Ad hoc, etc.: 'in addition to this loss they were prevented,' etc.; see on accedebat ut, 89, 22.

201, 10. CHAPTER 25. Multi . . . erant: 'many months had already passed,' i.e. since Caesar arrived in Greece. It was probably toward the end of March, about Feb. 1 according to the seasons; see on autumnus, 188, 16. As Caesar landed Jan. 5 (190, 21 f.), not quite three months had passed, but the time doubtless seemed longer to him in his impatience over the delay of his reënforcements.

201, 13. praetermissae [esse]: 'to have been allowed to go by.' There is a story told by later writers that Caesar, in his suspicion of Antony's loyalty, put to sea in an open twelve-oared boat, intending to cross to Brundisium and bring his troops over himself, but was driven back by a strong west wind.

201, 14. certi . . . venti: 'the very winds.'—necessario committendum: 'they must necessarily intrust themselves.'

201, 15. eius . . . temporis: partit. gen. with amplius, 'the more this season had gone by.'

201, 16. tanto: with both alacriores and maiorem, abl. of amount of difference.—ad custodias: 'for guard duty,' pl. because several fleets were on duty.

201, 18. quoniam . . . at: 'since . . . yet'; these clauses quote indirectly the contents of the letters.

201, 19. reliquos . . . exitus: 'his further departures,' i.e. of his troops from Italy.

201, 20. impedirent: see on relinquerent, etc., 190, 16. — duriusque, etc.: 'and they were daily looking forward to a harder time for transportation owing to lighter winds.' Transports were dependent upon wind (see Intro. § 48), so that as the spring advanced every day became less favorable for Antony. Pompey's ships of war, on the other hand, being propelled by rowers, were more and more favored by the weather.

201, 23. ne . . . dimitterent: 'that they should not,' etc., indir. disc. for nolite dimittere.¹

201, 24. Labeatium: a people just above Lissus, so far north that Pompey's coast guards were not numerous. A more desirable destination was the coast of Apollonia, near Caesar's camp on the south bank of the Apsus (195, 25 f.), and it was not well guarded by Pompey's fleet because in the stormy weather the commanders were unwilling to venture far from the harbors of Dyrrachium and Corcyra.

201, 25. eicere: 'run the ships on shore,' of a hurried and irregular landing.

201, 28. CHAPTER 26. Illi: refers to suos, l. 22, i.e. Caesar's troops at Brundisium.

202, 3. praeterehantur: the wind was probably too strong for them to try to run their ships ashore at Apollonia.

202, 4. Coponius: see 190, 9.

202, 6. cum . . . appropinquasset: Caesar's transports depended altogether on wind; Coponius's ships of war were rowed, and so had the advantage when the wind died down. See Intro. § 48.

202, 12. si . . . remississet: implied indir. disc. representing a fut. perf. of the actual thought in the soldiers' minds.

202, 13. Nymphaeum: a harbor of the Labeates (201, 24).

202, 16. tempestatis . . . periculum: the south wind, blowing straight into the harbor, would drive the transports violently on shore.

202, 20. CHAPTER 27. modo: 'a moment before.'

202, 23. tempore commutato: 'by a change of circumstances.'

202, 29. CHAPTER 28. Nostrae naves duae: 'two of our ships.'—in noctem coniectae: 'overtaken by night.'

203, 7. CC: ducentos, the case which would be required if the comparative were omitted.¹

203, 8. esset: 'there is'; statements of general truths follow the sequence of tenses. In English the present tense is preferred.

203, 9. salo nauseaque: 'seasickness,' hendiadys.

203, 13. interficiuntur: the ferocity of the Pompeians throughout the war was a sad contrast to Caesar's clemency; cf. 202, 27 f.

203, 14. vitiis: 'discomforts.'—neque . . . et: correlative; cf. neque . . . neque, where both clauses are neg., and et . . . et, where both are affirmative. Translate, 'did not think . . . but.'

203, 15. tractandis . . . deditiois: abls. of manner limiting extracto, 'after dragging out the first part of the night in discussing terms and in a pretense of surrender.'

203, 20. CCCC: limits equitibus.—quique: = iisque (in the same constr. as equitibus) qui, 'and men who followed them armed from the garrison.'

203, 23. CHAPTER 29. conventus: see on 180, 22.

203, 25. attribuerat: during his governorship of the Gauls and Illyricum. Lissus was in Illyricum.

203, 29. quarum erat, etc.: 'of which there was a total of,' etc.; quarum is poss. gen., legionum, etc., are gens. of definition or appositional gens.; see on millium, 105, 27.

204, 2. quod: a rel. pron. agrees in gender and number with a pred. subst. in its own clause rather than with its antecedent. Cf. haec, 193, 8.

204, 4. traiecisset: for a fut. perf. in Antony's thought.

204, 19. educunt: a pl. vb. with utroque is rare.

204, 20. Caesari, etc.: 'Caesar had to take a longer, more round-about route up-stream.' The Apsus could not be bridged or forded so near its mouth. Circuitu is abl. of quality; adverso flumine is abl. abs.

204, 22. expedito itinere: 'by an unobstructed route.'

205, 2. castris: see on 92, 18.

205, 4. Graecos: the inhabitants of the country.

205, 8. Asparagium: a town on the Genusus, near its mouth. See the map, p. 191, for the assumed routes of Caesar and Antony.

205, 11. CHAPTER 39. ut . . . est: referring only to deductis . . . praesidiis, not to Caesar . . . reliquit. Caesar stated in Ch. 34 (omitted in this book) that upon his union with Antony he withdrew a legion from Oricum, and sent small detachments to secure the surrounding districts of central Macedonia, Thessaly, and Aetolia.

205, 13. quas . . . traduxerat: see 192, 7. These ships had been held at Palaeste when Caesar sent his transports back to Brundisium (192, 12 f.), and had afterward been brought round into the secure harbor of Oricum.

205, 14. Acilius: see 197, 1.

206, 1. faucibus: essential complement or indir. obj. of obicit. The entrance to the inner harbor was very narrow; see the plan, p. 205.

206, 2. summersam obicit: 'he sank a transport and blockaded the entrance.' This is a measure often adopted in modern warfare, as at Santiago de Cuba in the Spanish-American war of 1898, and at Port Arthur, in 1904, in the war between Russia and Japan.

206, 7. CHAPTER 40. qui . . . praeerat: see 190, 7.

206, 9. contendens: 'by great efforts.'—atque: connects abduxit with vicit (l. 16).

206, 11. ad libram: 'of equal height,' but higher than the tower on Acilius's ship (cf. superiore, l. 12).

206, 12. ut . . . pugnans, etc.: 'since he was fighting,' etc., giving the reasons for vicit.

206, 13. reliquis partibus: 'at the other points'; loc. abl., see on locis, 54, 26. If Oricum had not been attacked, it could have sent aid to the ship.

206, 18. mole . . . obiecta: 'where a narrow natural breakwater had been thrown up,' i.e. by the action of the waves. Oricum had once been on an island. — paene insulam: 'a peninsula.'

206, 20. impulsas vectibus: 'moving them along with levers.' — ex utraque parte: from the entrance and from the inner harbor itself.

206, 21. deligatae: used as an adj. parallel with inanes.

206, 26. naves: the pontones of 204, 2. The loss of his ships at Oricum and at Lissus was a severe blow to Caesar.

206, 28. conventus: see 203, 23.

207, 1. CHAPTER 41. Caesar, etc.: continuing the narrative of Ch. 30.

207, 2. eodem: adv.

207, 3. Parthinorum: see on 194, 20.

207, 7. decernendi: 'of a decisive engagement.'

207, 10. magno circuitu: Caesar started out in the opposite direction (diverso itinere, l. 15 f.) from Dyrrachium, leading Pompey to suppose that he was on a foraging expedition to the fertile districts farther east. But later in the day Pompey's scouts discovered Caesar's army hastening toward Dyrrachium. Upon learning this alarming news, Pompey set off by the shortest route to protect his base of supplies, but found Caesar, who had made one of his characteristically swift marches, already encamped before the town.

207, 12. Dyrrachium . . . intercludi: Caesar hoped to cut Pompey off from Dyrrachium, and to force him to fight in a position less favorable than that at Asparagium, or else to shut his great army up in the city, where it would soon be in hard straits.

207, 22. primum: adj. — coneretur: 'was in sight.'

207, 24. CHAPTER 42. propositum tenere: 'hold to his purpose,' i.e. to enter Dyrrachium before Caesar arrived.

207, 26. mediocrem: 'fairly good.' Pompey's position at Petra hill was only a few miles below Dyrrachium, and in easy communication with it across the bay. See plan, p. 218.

208, 2. convenire: an act. infin. with impero is rare, occurring only in combination with a pass. or dep. infin., the latter being not uncommon with impero.

208, 5. longius . . . ductum iri: the comparatively rare fut. pass. infin., 'would be dragged out rather long.'

208, 9. fecerat: = faciendas curaverat, 'had had built.'

208, 15. cum . . . tum: see on 91, 26.

208, 17. haec providerat: 'had foreseen this move.'

208, 19. suffossisque: apparently grain and supplies had been hidden in cellars or pits.

208, 25. CHAPTER 43. haec spectans: 'having these aims in view,' explained by the appositive purpose clauses quo . . . posset, uti . . . prohiberet, etc.

209, 3. qua: see on quibus, 194, 1.

209, 4. niti videbatur: 'was clearly relying' ('was seen to be relying').

209, 5. percrebrisset: 'should have been spread abroad,' implied indir. disc., for fut. perf. of the thought in Caesar's mind when he formed his plan.

209, 11. CHAPTER 44. nisi . . . vellet: 'unless he were willing,' a less vivid fut. condition in the past, the imperf. representing an original pres. subj.¹

209, 13. Relinquebatur: impers., having as subject the result clauses with ut,² 'it remained for him to,' etc. — extremam rationem belli: 'the only method of warfare left.'

209, 15. posset: might be omitted, as with quam plurimos and quam latissimas.

209, 17. multaque: many kinds of crops, which were useful as green fodder. Grain could be brought by water from Dyrrachium.

209, 18. quibus . . . pasceret: 'on which he could feed,' etc., characteristic.

209, 20. ne quo: cf. ne quem, 106, 27, and see on ne . . . praetermitteret, ib.

209, 23. operibus: abl. of specification, 'the enemy won in the matter of works.'

209, 25. cum: 'whenever,' as is seen by the imperf. mittebat in the main clause.

209, 26. loca: indef., 'places.'

209, 27. suis locis: an unemphasized poss. pron. follows its subst.; here, as often, suis means 'his own,' in the sense of 'favorable' or 'suitable' for him.

209, 28. magnum . . . numerum: see 189, 11 ff.

210, 2. quibus . . . vitarent: purpose, 'with which to avoid.'

210, 4. CHAPTER 47. tanto . . . numero, etc.: abls. of cause, 'on account of the great number,' etc. Caesar's lines extended seventeen miles (218, 12). They inclosed Pompey's fortifications, which were fifteen miles long (209, 16 f.), and had to be built at some distance from them owing to Pompey's vigorous obstructive tactics. See plan, p. 218.

210, 7. conati sunt, continuerunt: gnomic perfs., stating what has regularly been true, 'whenever generals have attempted to besiege another, they have shut in an enemy,' etc.

210, 16. quin . . . haberent: 'without their (the ships) having.'¹

210, 20. in Hispania: shortly before the battle of Ilerda (see summary of Book I, toward the end, p. 383) Caesar's army suffered severely from lack of supplies.

210, 21. ad Alesiam: the remarkable siege of Alesia is described in 154, 1 ff., but no mention is made of distress in the Roman army.

210, 23. ad Avaricum: see summary of B.G., Book VII, p. 365.

210, 24. Non: put first, and then repeated, for emphasis, 'not even.' — illi: 'the brave fellows.' — hordeum: not so well liked by the Romans as corn or wheat. — quin daretur: see on quin . . . contendant, 103, 27, 'they did not refuse to accept even barley' (lit., 'but that barley should be given').

210, 25. pecus: meat was acceptable to the Roman soldier only when grain (frumentum) was not to be had.

210, 29. CHAPTER 48. chara: not to be translated. — Id . . . efficiabant: 'they made this into a dish like bread.' Napoleon's soldiers on the retreat from Moscow prepared grass for food.

211, 5. CHAPTER 49. frumenta: observe the pl.

211, 10. victuros: note the quantity of i.

211, 13. tolerari: 'were barely kept alive.'

211, 15. uti: note the quantity of u.

211, 17. insuetos, adfectos: both limit ipsos, 'the men themselves,' but insuetos is in pred. apposition, 'unused, as they were, to work,' and explains laboribus, while adfectos is causal, 'because they were afflicted,' and is correlated by tum to the causal abls. following cum.

211, 22. continenterent: 'kept back'; a result clause. Caesar diverted the streams which flowed through the space Pompey had inclosed with his lines of defense.

211, 23. sequi: 'seek.'

211, 25. qui . . . fontes: 'these springs,' meaning the putei.

211, 26. longius: 'too far.'

211, 29. cui rei: indir. obj. of occurrere, 'for which they saw that daily a better time was coming,' i.e. the grain was ripening every day, and so their chances of having a supply were constantly improving.

212, 4. CHAPTER 50. ad munitiones, etc.: 'were bivouacking near the lines.'—universi: so as to cause great damage with one volley.

212, 7. ut, etc.: 'to build,' etc., complementary or subst. result clauses in apposition with remedia. A considerable passage has been lost here, telling of Caesar's unsuccessful attack on Dyrrachium, and of the gallant defense of one of Caesar's redoubts by a single cohort against four legions of Pompey, until after several hours Sulla came to its relief as related in Ch. 51.

212, 8. CHAPTER 51. Sulla: nephew of the dictator Sulla, a good soldier, but a man of disreputable character. He had been kept out of the consulship for 65 B.C. by a charge of bribery which was proved against him. He was tried in 62 B.C. for complicity in Catiline's conspiracy, and although successfully defended by Cicero in a speech still extant, he was probably guilty.—discedens: to attack Dyrrachium (see on l. 7).

212, 9. castris: Caesar's main camp, between Pompey and Dyrrachium (207, 21 f.); see plan, p. 218.—cohorti: dat. of interest accompanying the dat. of purpose. This cohort (see on l. 7) was defending a redoubt at the northeastern part of Caesar's lines.

212, 15. voluisset: not changed in form by being quoted.¹

212, 16. potuisse: represents potuit of the dir. disc.²—non reprehendendum [esse]: 'not to deserve blame.'

212, 17. Aliae . . . atque: 'different from.'

212, 18. ad: 'according to'; so in the next line.

212, 20. hoc: 'with this achievement,' i.e. the rescue of his comrades (liberatis suis, abl. abs.).

212, 21. quae res, etc.: 'an undertaking which anyhow (i.e. although victory seemed probable) might³ perhaps have met with some mischance.'

212, 23. res: 'the situation.'—ad: see on ad spem, 183, 4.

212, 25. si . . . recipere: 'if they were to retire'; see on nisi . . . vellet, 209, 11.

212, 28. rem duxerant: 'they had prolonged the attack.' — necessario atque ex tempore: 'in accordance with the necessities of the moment.' Upon the arrival of Sulla with his two legions (l. 10) Pompey had withdrawn from the attack on the redoubt, but fearing to retreat to his own lines because he supposed the Caesareans would pursue him down the slope, he seized a hill lying near but out of range of missiles from the redoubt, and encamped there for a few days. See on the plan, p. 218, Pompey's temporary camp.

213, 9. CHAPTER 52. cohortibus: abl. of means.

213, 10. Germani: see 189, 18.

213, 13. CHAPTER 53. ad Dyrrachium: see on 212, 7.

213, 15. ad duo millia: ad is an adv., 'about.'

213, 16. evocatos . . . complures: in apposition with millia, 'several being,' etc.

213, 18. L. filius: = Luci filius. — eius: 'the man,' in apposition with Luci. The elder Flaccus was praetor in 63 B.C., and assisted Cicero in overthrowing the Catilinarian conspiracy. The next year he was governor of the province of Asia. In 59 B.C. Cicero successfully defended him, in a speech that is still preserved, against the charge of Asiatic extortion, bringing into court the son, then a mere boy, to stir the sympathies of the jury.

213, 19. Nostris: a poss. pron. stands in agreement with pauci or a numeral rather than, as in English, in the partit. gen. Cf. nostrae naves duae, 202, 29.

213, 20. castello illo: the one relieved by Sulla, where the hardest fighting had occurred (see on 212, 7).

213, 21. quin: 'but that,' after a general negative, as in 210, 16.

213, 25. Scaevae: according to Suetonius (Life of Caesar, 68) he lost an eye, and was wounded in the thigh and shoulder, but would not surrender the gate which he was guarding.

213, 26. ut . . . meritis: 'according to his services to him.'

213, 27. donatum, etc.: translate as finite vbs. parallel with pronuntiavit. — millibus CC: sc. sestertium (gen. pl.). So in English, when spoken, the words 'dollars' and 'cents' are often omitted. The sestertius was about four cents, so that Scaeva's reward amounted to over $8000.

213, 28. ab octavis ordinibus ad primipilum: 'from the centurions of the eighth cohort (lit., 'from the eighth grades') to first centurion of the legion.' On the promotion of centurions, see Introd. § 35.

214, 1. militaribusque donis: soldiers' ornaments and marks of honor, such as bracelets, crowns, spears (for show, not for service, like gift swords to-day), banners, etc.

214, 4. CHAPTER 54. reliquis diebus: 'on the remaining days.' Pompey stayed in the temporary camp five days. From the strength of his fortifications it is likely that he expected to be attacked there.

214, 5. operibus: the towers.

214, 8. ad impediendum: to hinder the Caesareans if they should attack him when he was marching away from camp.

214, 9. antiquas, etc.: his main camp on Petra hill (207, 26).

214, 12. CHAPTER 55. aequum in locum: between his and Pompey's main camps. — si . . . vellet: see on si . . . posset, 204, 17.

214, 13. ut: 'so that,' result.

214, 14. tantum: 'only so far,' from the rampart of Pompey's camp.

214, 15. uti ne: used generally with purpose clauses,¹ but sometimes, as here, with clauses that express an intended result.² In 213, 2, a pure result clause has ut . . . non.

214, 16. famam opinionemque: 'the fair report and esteem.' Since his successes against the pirates and Mithridates, 67-63 B.C., Pompey's fame, especially in the East, had far overshadowed that of any other military or political leader of the time. Caesar now and then implies, rather sarcastically, that Pompey is living too much on the reputation of his past achievements. See 209, 3 f.

214, 17. tertia acies: see Introd. § 46.

214, 20. CHAPTER 58. equitatum: cavalry which Pompey had sent by water from Petra hill to protect the town against Caesar's attack (see on 212, 7).

214, 22. demonstravimus: these approaches to Dyrrachium must have been described in the lost passage after Ch. 50. One approach was by a bridge over the stream connecting the lagoon with the bay; see plan, p. 218. The other was at the northern end of the lagoon where it is separated from the sea by a narrow isthmus; see map of Macedonia and Thessaly, p. 191.

215, 1. alerent: 'they had to feed,' the obligatory use of the verb.

215, 2. quae . . . sata : see 209, 17 f.

215, 3. Corcyra : see on Creta, 189, 11. Acarmania would regularly have ex; but is attracted to the constr. of Corcyra. — longo . . . spatio : 'by a long voyage.'

215, 5. hordeo adaugere : 'to increase it by adding barley.'

215, 6. tolerare : cf. tolerari, 211, 13.

215, 8. conandum, etc. : 'that he ought to make some attempt in the way of a sortie.'

215, 12. CHAPTER 59. multis annis : expressing the space of time within which,¹ but to be translated like the acc. of duration, which might have been used.

215, 14. optima : pred. adj., 'had found most useful.'

215, 16. senatum : of the Allobroges.

215, 21. amicitia : see on victoriis, 95, 4.

215, 22. stipendium, etc. : these two Gauls appear to have been paymasters in the Gallic cavalry. They not only kept part of the soldiers' wages, but drew dead men's pay, and when booty was turned over to them for distribution among their troops, they kept it all themselves (domum avertabant).

215, 24. illi : the equites.

215, 28. CHAPTER 60. neque, etc. : 'thinking that this was no time for taking action.' He wanted to give all his attention to the siege of Pompey.

215, 29. virtuti : indir. obj. of concedens, 'making many allowances out of regard for their bravery.' — rem . . . sustulit : 'he quashed the whole proceeding.'

215, 30. quod . . . haberent : 'because, as he said, they were using their cavalrymen for gain'; implied indir. disc., stating the reason which Caesar gave them for his reproof.

216, 1. ut, etc. : in contrast to the method which they were pursuing.

216, 2. reliqua : sc. officia, 'and to hope for future favors in keeping with his past services.'

216, 4. ad omnes : 'among all.'

216, 6. ex domestico, etc. : 'from their own judgments and guilty consciences.'

216, 7. Quo pudore : = cuius rei pudore, 'by a feeling of shame at the situation.'

216, 8. liberari: i.e. from punishment. They doubtless remembered how, five years before, in Gaul, Caesar had deferred the punishment of Acco till the campaigning season was over (see summary of B.G., Book VI, last paragraph, p. 356).

216, 15. clientibus: appositive to paucis, 'a few men only.'

216, 22. cum munere aliquo: 'with some service' to him.

216, 26. ac si: like quasi, etc., taking the subj. of a conditional comparison.¹

216, 30. CHAPTER 61. honesto loco nati: 'of honorable birth.'²

217, 1. comitatu: indefinite designations of military forces, if limited by an adj., may omit cum; ³ iuventis is attracted to the constr. of comitatu; if alone, it would take cum.

217, 4. hoc . . . acciderat: 'this was a new and unusual circumstance,' i.e. for deserters to come to him from Caesar.

217, 5. circumduxit: quos is the dir. obj., praesidia is a secondary obj. belonging closely with the preposition.⁴

217, 8. vulgo vero universi . . . milites: sc. perfugerant, 'in fact, the soldiers had deserted all together in a body (vulgo) who had been enrolled,' etc. — in Epiro: see 189, 8.

217, 9. earumque regionum: parallel with in Epiro . . . conscripti, limiting milites, 'and the soldiers of all those districts.'

217, 10. quae . . . tenebantur: see on 205, 11. Caesar's clemency, as well as his energy and success in the war thus far, were apparently having their effect in winning men to his side. — hi: the two Gauls. — omnibus rebus: i.e. in Caesar's army.

217, 11. quid: indef., as after si.

217, 12. peritioribus: indef., 'men well skilled.' — rei: obj. gen.⁵ — temporibusque . . . animadversa: 'and having observed the times of doing things and the distances between places,' etc.

217, 14. prout . . . ferebat: explaining varia, 'according to the character or the energy of each of the men in charge of undertakings.'

217, 15. haec: summing up the clauses cognitis . . . ferebat.

217, 18. CHAPTER 62. ut demonstratum est: in 215, 9. — tegimenta: the advantage of these twig coverings appears in 219, 10 f.

217, 19. aggerem: 'rubbish,' for filling up Caesar's trenches (219, 6 f.).

217, 23. cohortes LX: the equivalent of six legions. Assuming an average of 3600 men to a legion (Introd. § 27), we may suppose that over 20,000 legionary soldiers, besides the strong force of light troops, were used in the attack on Caesar's lines. — ex maximis castris, etc.: Pompey's main camp at Petra hill and the posts here and there along his lines.

217, 24. ad eam partem, etc.: the southernmost part of Caesar's lines, running west toward the sea. A double line of fortifications had been built there, 600 feet apart, within which the Caesareans could repel attacks from the north or the south. See 218, 3 ff.

217, 25. maximis castris Caesaris: the main camp, at the northwestern end of the lines.

217, 30. positum habebat: 'was keeping . . . stationed'; see on coactum habebat, 61, 6.

218, 3. CHAPTER 63. pedum XV: in width, as generally when only one dimension of a trench is given. The depth was probably about nine feet.

218, 4. contra hostem: i.e. facing Pompey's lines, which were a short distance away to the north. — pedum X: gen. of quality with vallum.

218, 5. agger: 'earthwork,' on which palisades were planted to protect the soldiers as they fought from the top of the rampart. The width of the earthwork, ten feet, was sufficient to allow the defenders to move about comfortably.

218, 7. in contrariam partem: facing south, as a defense against any troops that Pompey might land from his ships south of Caesar's lines. — vallus: = vallum.

218, 8. Hoc: explained by the appositive clause ne . . . circumventur, which takes its constr. from timens.

218, 10. ancipiti: with one force attacking on the north and another on the south.

218, 11. posset resisti: impers. 'it might be possible for resistance to be made.' — omnium dierum: 'of every day,' poss. gen.

218, 13. perficiendi spatium: 'time for completion.'

218, 14. contra: 'facing.' — transversum vallum: 'a cross wall,' uniting the two lines at their western end.

219, 4. in excubiis: between Caesar's two parallel lines. The two cohorts were sent from Marcellinus's camp (217, 29 f.), which was near by; see the plan. — accessere: this form of the perf. third person pl. is rare in Caesar.

219, 6. milites: the light-armed men (217, 27), who landed at a point outside Caesar's lines and attacked the outer or southern wall.

219, 7. legionarii: the sixty cohorts who marched down from Pompey's main camp (217, 23) and attacked the inner or northern wall of Caesar's double lines.

219, 9. ab utraque parte: the archers, who had come by water (217, 21), were sent, some against the northern, some against the southern wall.

219, 12. omnibus rebus: 'in all respects.'

219, 13. animadversum est: the two deserters had told Pompey of the incompleteness of the cross wall (l. 1 f.), but the spot was now discovered and men from the ships poured in to attack in the rear Caesar's two cohorts who were defending the two parallel ramparts.

219, 18. CHAPTER 64. cohortes: of the ninth legion (217, 30).

219, 20. fugientes: acc.

219, 26. a viribus deficeretur: 'he was being deserted by his strength,' viribus being personified and made a voluntary agent.

219, 27. Hanc: sc. aquilam, the eagle being the standard of the Roman legion (Introd. § 40).

219, 29. Nolite . . . committere: see on 161, 11.

219, 30. ut . . . admittatur: obj. of committere.

220, 1. incolumemque: 'but,' etc.

220, 3. principem priorem: belonging in the first cohort, he was the third in rank of the sixty centurions of his legion. See Introd. § 35.

220, 6. CHAPTER 65. cohortibus: those of the ninth legion which had remained in camp.

220, 7. proximum: i.e. the post nearest to Marcellinus's camp, and lying north of it.

220, 12. per castella: 'from redoubt to redoubt.'

220, 15. extra munitiones: upon the rout of Caesar's cohorts from the double lines, Pompey had apparently led his legionaries to the south or outer side of these lines, where he was fortifying a new camp near the shore; see the plan.

220, 16. ut . . . posset: expresses the purpose of egressum, nec . . . haberet that of manere. — nec minus: 'and nevertheless.'

220, 18. propositum, etc.: 'he had not succeeded in his purpose,' i.e. of blockading Pompey. — castra: his new camp east of Pompey's.

- 220, 22. CHAPTER 66. quod: see on 204, 2.
- 220, 23. vetera castra: the old camp north of Caesar's double lines; see the plan.
- 220, 25. ut demonstravimus: in Ch. 45 f., omitted in this book.
- 220, 28. quibusdam de causis: probably he found that he could run his siege lines to better advantage farther south.
- 220, 29. transtulerat: to Marcellinus's camp.
- 220, 30. eadem haec: the old camp abandoned by Caesar's ninth legion.
- 221, 2. relicto, etc.: 'leaving the inner wall standing.' This was the rampart of the original camp, but was partly inclosed by Pompey. It is marked in red on the plan, p. 218.
- 221, 3. maioribus: sc. castris.
- 221, 4. munitionem: an earthwork and ditch running northeast from the camp to the Palamnus River, which had not been diverted from its course with the other streams (211, 18 f.).
- 221, 11. CHAPTER 67. legionis: the cohorts of 220, 21.
- 221, 16. in opere: 'engaged on the works,' building his new camp, which was about half a mile from Pompey's new camp.
- 221, 18. reliquas cohortes: i.e. the rest of his troops in the new camp. There were other legions in the redoubts along his lines.
- 221, 21. duplici acie: the double line, which was longer than the usual formation in triple line (see Introd. § 46), was preferable for surrounding the old camp and attacking on all sides at once. — prima opinio: i.e. that he could crush Pompey's legion (l. 15).
- 221, 28. Pullone: one of the brave centurions of 134, 1 ff. He joined Pompey after betraying Gaius Antonius in 49 B.C. See on Antonianos, 189, 9. — demonstravimus: probably in the lost passage after Ch. 8.
- 222, 1. castellum: the original camp of Caesar's ninth legion; see 221, 2.
- 222, 3. repugnantes: acc.
- 222, 8. CHAPTER 68. supra: in 221, 4 f.
- 222, 9. portam: the gate of the old camp. They thought that the wall running to the Palamnus was the rampart of the camp. If Caesar had provided for a reconnaissance before leaving his new camp, this blunder of his right wing might have been avoided.
- 222, 11. Quod: 'but,' as in quod si, see on 60, 15.

222, 12. prorutis munitionibus: a comparatively small breach was made, as is seen from l. 22 ff.

222, 14. CHAPTER 69. satis: 'rather.'

222, 15. ab opere: from the work of fortifying his new camp.

222, 16. suis: the legion in the old camp.

222, 17. appropinquabat: Pompey's cavalry must have ridden round the old camp, being hidden from view by the woods (220, 27, and the plan), and have appeared on the northeast of the camp to Caesar's cavalry, which had just passed through the breach in the wall that ran to the river (see l. 13).

222, 18. acies: the line of Pompey's five legions in battle array, probably southwest of the old camp.

222, 19. Pompeiana legio: the legion that had been so hard pressed in the old camp (l. 2) saw the reënforcements and began to fight with fresh courage.

222, 20. decumana porta: here the gate in the northwest wall of the camp. The legion had been pushed by Caesar's men to the extreme rear of the inclosure.

222, 22. angusto itinere: see on prorutis munitionibus, l. 12. — per aggeres: 'over the earthworks.'

222, 23. receptui: dat. of interest, 'fearing for,' etc.

222, 24. dextrum cornu: the body which had gone astray along the wall running to the river and had then breached it and passed through with the cavalry (l. 8 ff.). It was separated from the left wing (221, 24) by the rampart of the camp.

222, 25. munitionem: the wall to the river.

222, 27. angustias: 'a tight place.' They knew that if they all crowded to the narrow breach in the wall, Pompey's cavalry would cut many of them down before they could get through. — ex . . . munitione: 'from the ten-foot fortification.' This was also the height of Caesar's inner line south of the old camp (218, 4). If the trench was, also like Caesar's, fifteen feet wide, it was doubtless some nine feet deep (see on pedum XV, 218, 3), thus making a jump of nearly twenty feet. — fossas: pl., of different parts of the trench.

223, 1. angustiis: abl. of means, 'shut up in a tight place,' i.e. between the two ramparts of the old camp.

223, 2. eodem . . . receptu: 'by the same way of retreat as they had come,' an inexact expression for eodem quo venerant itinere se recipientes, 'retreating the same way they had come.'

223, 5. idem iussi, etc.: 'though receiving the same order, hastened to pursue the same course as before,' i.e. kept on in their flight. Plutarch says that when a big, strong soldier who was running away was ordered by Caesar to stand and face the enemy again, he seized his sword and would have killed his general if his arm had not been cut off by Caesar's attendant.

223, 6. signa dimitterent: 'threw away their standards.'

223, 8. CHAPTER 70. His tantis, etc.: 'the following helpful circumstances came to the relief of these great disasters, preventing the whole army's being destroyed, namely that Pompey,' etc.

223, 9. quo minus: depending on the idea of hindering¹ in the previous clause. — quod . . . tardabantur: subst. clauses in apposition² with haec subsidia.

223, 13. angustiis, etc.: 'by the narrow breach (in the wall which ran to the river), and that too, occupied,' etc. Cf. atque his, 129, 18, and note.

223, 14. ad: see on ad spem, 183, 4.

223, 17. propriam expeditamque: 'complete and easy.'

223, 22. CHAPTER 71. equites: 'knights.'

223, 23. Placentia: abl. of source, a usage far less common than the proper adj., which would be here Placentinum.

223, 25. fossis: see on fossas, 222, 27.

223, 28. imperator: see on 173, 3. Pompey allowed himself to be addressed by this title, but as his victory had been won over fellow-countrymen, he refrained from using it officially or from adopting the decoration which it usually carried.

223, 30. praescribere: the Romans signed their names at the beginning of letters and despatches, while the place and date of writing were put at the end.

224, 3. quo . . . haberetur: 'that greater confidence in the deserter (obj. gen.) might be felt.' Labienus, who had deserted Caesar at the outbreak of the war, was naturally distrusted by Pompey. He constantly sought to prove his loyalty by his cruelty toward his old comrades in Caesar's army.

224, 4. appellans: the dir. obj., as also of interrogans and interfecit, is omnes, l. 2. — magna . . . contumelia: abl. of manner.

224, 8. CHAPTER 72. ratione belli: 'the conduct of the war.' Pompey was advised to take his army at once to Italy, leaving only a small force to harry Caesar, who, being without ships, could follow him only by marching through Illyricum round the head of the Adriatic. Pompey rejected this advice because it looked too much like running away.

224, 9. Non: to bring out the emphasis which the negative receives from its position and repetition, translate, 'it was not the small number of our soldiers, it was not the unfavorableness,' etc.

224, 11. praeoccupatis castris: 'due to the seizure of the camp beforehand,' i.e. by Pompey's legion.

224, 12. non abscisum, etc.: 'it was not the cutting of our army into two divisions.' The perf. part. agreeing with a subst. frequently contains the main idea.¹

224, 13. causae fuisse, etc.: 'that had been the cause of our defeat, as they thought.' Paucitatem, etc., are subjects of fuisse; causae is dat. of tendency or service.

224, 14. non concursu, etc.: translate the abl. abs. as if parallel with dimicatum [esse], 'that no fierce charge had been made, no real battle fought, but the men themselves,' etc.

224, 17. communes . . . casus: 'the chances of war that are common to all.'

224, 18. quam: adv. limiting parvulae, 'what trivial causes,' and like quotiens, l. 20, introducing an indir. quest. in apposition with casus. — suspicionis, etc.: gens. of definition or appositional gens.,² 'in the way of,' etc.

224, 19. obiectae religionis: 'of opposing religious scruples.'

225, 14. cuiusvis . . . culpae: 'to anybody's fault rather than his.'

225, 16. castris: the old camp. For the constr., see on imperio, 52, 11.

225, 17. ipsorum: 'their own.'—aliquis: generally subst., here = aliqui.

225, 20. quod si esset factum: 'if this should be done'; for the tense, see on 64, 28.

225, 21. verteret: intr., 'would turn to a blessing.' For the constr., see on ut . . . audent, 73, 12.—uti . . . accidisset: 'as had happened.' The repulse at Gergovia, the only town in Gaul which made successful resistance to Caesar, is related in 150, 6 ff. The victory at Alesia, which broke the backbone of Gallic opposition, came a few weeks later (163, 6–168, 30). Similarly, in the present campaign, Caesar's admirable courage in the face of the complete failure of his elaborate plans for besieging Pompey, near Dyrrachium, had its effect on the spirit of his men, and in another month they overwhelmingly defeated Pompey's greatly superior force at Pharsalus.

225, 23. CHAPTER 74. signiferos: Caesar's punishment was merciful, as the penalty for throwing away standards was death.

225, 24. loco movit: i.e. he reduced them to the ranks.

225, 27. desideraret: 'waited for.'—sibi quisque: the regular order; see on sibi quemque, 54, 11.

225, 30. ordinis: 'rank,' gen. of quality. The lieutenants and tribunes are meant.—ratione permoti: 'moved by reason,' not merely by a desire to wipe out the disgrace of their defeat.

226, 1. Contra ea: 'contrary to these views,' 'on the other hand.'

226, 3. refectis munitionibus: abl. abs. expressing a concession, 'even if his lines should be repaired.'

226, 6. CHAPTER 75. modo . . . habita ratione: 'merely taking care.'

226, 7. prima: 'the first part of.'

226, 9. confectum: see on non abscisum, 224, 12; and cf. the common expression ante urbem conditam, 'before the founding of the city.'

226, 13. institutum: it was contrary to military usage to leave camp without sounding the signals for packing up and marching out. But by not giving the signals until the last division of the army was ready to march, Caesar concealed his plan from Pompey until his baggage and the larger part of his troops were well out of harm's way.

226, 16. neque . . . moram . . . intulit: 'allowed nothing to delay his pursuit.'

226, 18. impeditos: 'burdened with their baggage.'

226, 21. neque . . . potuit: 'but could not.' — expedito itinere: 'having an unobstructed road,' abl. abs. expressing cause.

226, 25. antesignanos: picked men who could be detailed for special services; as here, to support the cavalry according to the German custom; see on levis . . . complures, 179, 1.

226, 29. CHAPTER 76. iusto itinere: 'the regular march,' i.e. about twenty miles over the ordinary roads.

226, 30. veteribus . . . castris: see 207, 1 and 5.

227, 3. per causam: see on 200, 24. Both armies reached their old camps on opposite banks of the Genusus before noon (l. 13 f.). Pompey, seeing Caesar's cavalry start out to forage, as he supposed, thought he was going to remain there till the next day, and accordingly allowed many of his soldiers to return to their camp near Dyrrachium for their personal effects, which, owing to their hasty departure early in the morning, they had been obliged to leave behind. This gave Caesar a chance to gain a lead of eight miles, which Pompey was unable to overcome.

227, 4. decumana porta: see Introd. § 44. It is easy to see why Caesar chose this gate.

227, 12. Quibus . . . impeditis: 'as they were prevented from pursuing.' For ad, cf. 183, 4.

227, 13. fore: 'would be the case.'

227, 15. duplicatoque, etc: 'increasing his march of that day'; it cannot mean doubling his forenoon's march, because the Genusus is some twenty miles from his camp near Dyrrachium, a iustum iter (226, 29) for a Roman army.

227, 18. CHAPTER 77. similiter: i.e. as on the previous night (226, 6 ff.).

227, 20. esset imposita: implied indir. disc., representing fut. perf. of the original thought.

227, 21. expedito: 'unencumbered,' by the baggage.

227, 23. altissimis . . . itineribus: concessive abls. abs., 'although the rivers were,' etc.

227, 25. primi . . . suscepto: causal abls. abs., 'since he had been delayed on the first day and his exertions on the remaining days were made in vain.'

227, 26. cum: concessive. — se . . . extenderet: 'he exerted himself with forced marches.' Pompey's army, with its large number of Roman gentlemen, who were unused to hardships, and hampered by its size, was no match in marching for Caesar's little force of devoted veterans.

227, 27. quarto: 'the third,' according to our way of reckoning. The Romans counted the day of departure as the first, we begin with the next day.

227, 30. CHAPTER 78. urbibus: dat. of interest; the abl. of place would require in.

228, 2. tantum: 'only so much.'

228, 3. properanti: 'because of his haste' (lit., 'for him hurrying,' sc. ei). — Domitio: dat. of interest. Domitius Calvinus, one of Caesar's lieutenants, was in central Macedonia, opposing two legions of Pompey's army under Scipio (189, 10 f.).

228, 4. celeritate: limits ferebatur, 'he was hurrying with all haste and the utmost (lit., 'spurred on by') eagerness.'

228, 5. rei: 'campaign.'

228, 6. his rationibus: abl. of manner, 'according to the following calculations,' explained by the appositive clauses of purpose ut . . . decertare cogeret, . . . proficisceretur, . . . ferre cogeret.

228, 7. eodem: to Macedonia to join Scipio, see on Domitio, l. 3. — abductum, abstractum: translate as vbs. parallel with cogeret, 'he might take him away,' etc.

228, 8. Dyrrachi: Pompey's headquarters (207, 13 f.).

228, 9. pari condicione: i.e. away from his base of supplies.

228, 10. in Italiam: see on 224, 8.

228, 11. Italiae: dat. of interest with subsidio, dat. of purpose.

228, 12. se: indir. refl., referring to Caesar, the subject of the main vb. explicabat (l. 6).

228, 14. suis: dir. refl., referring to the subject of its own clause, illum.

228, 18. depositis : abl. abs. with is implied as antecedent of qui. — Athamaniam : a district of southeastern Epirus. See map, p. 191.

228, 21. illo : adv.

228, 22. Oriciaque : adj., 'and especially the coast near Oricum,' where the two legions still left in Italy could most conveniently land.

228, 26. CHAPTER 79. suis, ad . . . adversarios : so emphatic as to precede ut and ne.

228, 27. ne . . . deēssset : 'that he might not fail to take advantage of a favorable opportunity.'

228, 29. Candaviam : east of Dyrrachium. — iter . . . expeditum : see on expedito itinere, 226, 21. Pompey's route was along the Via Egnatia to Heraclia. This road was the main highway from Dyrrachium and Apollonia to Thessalonica and the East. — in Macedoniam : i.e. into Macedonia proper, which, before the organization of the province (see Macedonia in the Vocab.), extended only to the mountains east of the Drilon River.

229, 1. quod : 'the fact that.'

229, 2. conlata habuisset : 'had kept his camp near to,' etc.

229, 4. sublecta : 'below'; Candavia was mountainous.

229, 8. quam res erat gesta : 'than the facts warranted.'

229, 10. Haec : sc. fama.

229, 12. dimissi : 'messengers sent out.'

229, 15. demonstravimus : in 216, 28.

229, 17. pristina sua consuetudine : causal, 'owing to their former intimate relations with them.'

229, 18. gloria elati : 'puffed up with pride.'

229, 20. vix . . . antecedens : 'getting barely four hours' start.'

229, 22. quod est, etc. : 'which lies near the borders of Thessaly'; the participles have about the same meaning.

229, 25. CHAPTER 80. quod : agreeing with the pred. noun as usual; cf. 204, 2.

229, 26. venientibus : 'as you come.'¹ — ab Epiro : 'from the boundary of Epirus'; ex would mean 'out from.' — quae gens ; the people of Gomphi.

229, 27. ut . . . uteretur : obj. of the idea of bidding contained in legatos miserat, 'telling him to make use of,' etc.

229, 29. supra : in l. 9.

229, 30. quod . . . partibus: 'and had exaggerated it many fold.' The subject is implied from fama; partibus expresses amount of difference.

230, 1. praetor: regularly used to translate the Greek word for 'general.' In the early years of the Republic at Rome it was the name of the highest magistrate or commander, but was superseded by 'consul.'

230, 6. munitionibus: see on quibus, 194, 1.

230, 9. Larisam: to the south, in the plain of Thessaly.

230, 11. crates: to be used in filling up the trench before the wall of Gomphi.

230, 13. haberet: the subjects are the infins. potiri, inferri, fieri, 'how great an advantage it would be to get possession,' etc.

231, 1. civitatus: indir. obj. of the cpd. vb.

231, 3. horam nonam: about three o'clock; see hora in the Vocab.

231, 5. ad diripiendum: Plutarch says that in addition to provisions wine was found here, which the soldiers drank freely, and under its influence dancing and carousing along their march, they shook off the illness with which their privations had afflicted them.

231, 7. expugnati oppidi: 'of the capture of the town'; see on non abscisum, 224, 12.

231, 14. CHAPTER 81. Metropolitum: -um for -arum is chiefly poetic except in names of peoples.¹

231, 16. quin, etc.: 'which did not obey,' a characteristic clause after a general negative.²

231, 17. Ille: Caesar. — quo, rel., with antecedent locum.

231, 18. frumenta: observe the pl.

231, 19. belli rationem: 'campaign' (lit., 'war business'). — conferre: 'to transfer.'

231, 20. CHAPTER 82. in Thessaliam: Pompey marched by the Egnatian Way to Heraclia, and then turned southward to join Scipio at Larissa (230, 9).

231, 23. parta iam victoria: abl. abs., 'in a victory already won.' This spirit of overconfidence contributed to the completeness of the defeat which came soon.

231, 26. honorem partitur: i.e. he takes a colleague in the chief command. Scipio was Pompey's father-in-law, and had been his colleague in the consulship for the last five months of 52 B.C. — classicum: the signals were sounded before the general's quarters. Pompey honors Scipio by having them sounded also at his quarters (apud eum).

231, 27. praetorium: this word came into use when praetor had its old meaning; see on 230, 1.

232, 4. unius . . . diei: 'that only a single day's work was left.'

232, 5. illum: Pompey.

232, 6. numero: as in 185, 26. — dicerent: indefinite 'they,' of the officers and nobles in the army. Plutarch says that everybody except Cato was eager to fight and tried to goad Pompey into a battle by such nicknames as Agamemnon and king of kings, implying that he took pleasure in exercising supreme command over so many of the great men of Rome.

232, 7. praemiis: 'the prizes,' of office.

232, 8. in annosque: 'and for years in advance.'

232, 10. consilio: 'the council,' see on 197, 24. — oporteretne, etc.: 'whether (see on liceretne, 199, 16) Lucilius Hirrus, inasmuch as he had been sent by Pompey to the Parthians, ought to be considered in his absence at the next election of praetors.' Hirri is obj. gen. with rationem; rationem haberi is subject of oporteret. Hirrus was unsuccessful in his efforts to raise allies among the Parthians. The controversy turned on the point whether, owing to the important work in which he was engaged, he should be exempt from the law requiring a candidate for office to present himself in person (see Introd. § 11).

232, 13. cum . . . implorarent . . . recusarent: temporal clauses, expressing by the imperf. tense action coincident with that of the main vb. fuisset (see on cum . . . conaretur, 53, 29); translate, 'his friends appealing to Pompey's good faith to grant,' etc. — praestaret: an obj. clause coördinate¹ with implorarent, not subordinated by ut.

232, 14. recepisset: see on 198, 5. — ne . . . videretur: a pure clause of purpose. Hirrus is the subject.

232, 15. reliqui, etc.: parallel to necessarii . . . implorarent, 'the others refusing in equal hardship and danger to have² one man take precedence of them all.'

232, 17. CHAPTER 83. sacerdotio Caesaris: since 63 B.C. Caesar had been pontifex maximus or head of the college of pontiffs, who had charge of the state religion. In order to be able to fix the dates of religious festivals they managed the calendar, which was variable and uncertain till Caesar, by virtue of his office as chief pontiff, introduced the reform which, with but slight change, is now in use in most civilized countries. As the priesthoods were held for life, it is apparent that the Pompeians had no thought of sparing Caesar in the victory which they felt perfectly confident was soon to be theirs. — Domitius: Ahenobarbus, not to be confused with Caesar's lieutenant (see on 228, 3). After his dismissal by Caesar at Corfinium (see on 177, 14), he took charge of the campaign of the Massiliots (see summary of Book II, p. 383), and upon their surrender to Caesar he fled to Pompey in Macedonia. — Spintherque: the Lentulus family had so many branches that additional family names, as Crus, Spinther, etc. (see Lentulus in the Vocab.), were assumed to distinguish them. The added name commonly followed the regular family name. With the order here cf. Varus Attius, 178, 23, and see note. Spinther, like Domitius Ahenobarbus, had been allowed to go free at the capture of Corfinium.

232, 20. aetatis . . . ostentaret: 'held up the honor due to his age.' — urbanam gratiam, etc.: 'his popularity and high position in the city,' i.e. at Rome.

232, 21. adfinitate: see on honorem partitur, 231, 26.

232, 22. proditionis, etc.: gen. of the charge;¹ 'of betraying his army,' at Ilerda in Spain the year before; see summary of Book I, p. 383. Afranius was a less capable officer than Petreius, and showed sooner a disposition to yield to Caesar. Rufus's object in bringing the accusation of treachery was to prevent the candidacy of Afranius for the consulship.

232, 24. placere: 'that it seemed best.' — ternas . . . iis: 'for three ballots to be given for voting to each of those.'

232, 25. ordinis: gen. of quality.

232, 26. sententiasque . . . ferri: 'and for verdicts to be passed on the men one by one.' This statement is no exaggeration. Cicero, who was himself a follower of Pompey, shows in several letters to his friends that the savage threats and bitter enmity of the nobles in Pompey's army towards all who had not actually taken up arms in their support made him dread the outcome of a victory of his own party. Indeed Cicero is chiefly aimed at in the second clause, quique, etc., l. 27, for although he had joined Pompey in Macedonia, he had not taken any active part in the war, and had remained behind in Dyrrachium when Pompey started east on the present campaign.

232, 28. unam fore, etc. : 'that one ballot should be for voting that they ought,' etc. The fut. infin. is indir. disc. depending on dixit, l. 24, not, like dari and ferri, subject of placere; qua (lit., 'with which') introduces a rel. clause of purpose.

232, 30. qua damnarent : 'for condemning them to death.' The Pompeian nobles had no intention of giving their enemies a fair legal trial after the war was over, but they meant to secure the verdict which they desired by giving it themselves. — capitis : gen. of the penalty; cf. proditionis, l. 22. The penalty is sometimes expressed by the abl., as in the next clause.

233, 7. CHAPTER 84. perspectum habere : see on coactum habebat, 61, 6. The clause quo . . . videretur is rel. of result, 'for him to think that he had the spirit of his soldiers pretty well proved.'

233, 9. propositi : a partit. gen. is usually separated from the word on which it depends, here quidnam.

233, 11. primo : observe the difference between this word and primum; see Vocab. — suis locis : see on 209, 27.

233, 12. continentibus, etc. : 'but on successive days (contrasted with primo) in such a way as to go farther from his own camp.'

233, 13. collibus Pompeianis : upon his union with Scipio Pompey marched south and encamped about four miles from Caesar on the hills of Karadja Ahmet; see plan, p. 236. This move of his is not definitely mentioned, but the una castra of 231, 25 is doubtless this camp on the hills.

233, 14. eius : Caesar's. His army thought that Pompey was afraid to fight.

233, 15. demonstravimus : see 226, 24 f.

233, 16. multis partibus : 'far,' cf. 229, 30.

233, 17. esset : subj. of attraction, being an essential part of the clause ut . . . iuberet. — antesignanis : see on 226, 25.

233, 18. mutatis . . . armis : 'changing their arms (i.e. heavy for light) for the sake of speed.'

233, 21. mille : the subst. use (with dependent gen.) is rare in the sing., though regular in the pl.

- 234, 22. rationem: 'nature.'
- 234, 23. Persuasi: this word standing first emphasizes the idea that the only thing needed to insure a victory was a little persuasion on the part of the commander. We may imagine that Caesar, in the light of the outcome of the battle, so vastly different from what Pompey had confidently predicted, wrote these lines with the liveliest satisfaction.

- 234, 26. perturbatum, etc.: 'to throw the army into confusion and put it to flight,' etc.
- 234, 29. equitatu: Pompey had 7000 cavalry, Caesar less than 1000. Pompey's plan would have succeeded if Caesar had not, by an unusual arrangement of his infantry, guarded against just such an attack as was made; see 237, 12 ff.

235, 2. reliquorum: i.e. of all who were not present in the council, which was composed of nobles only. See on de consili sententia, 197, 24.

This sentence is a rhetorical reënforcement of multi sunt relictii in continenti. Labienus claims that men enough were left behind in Italy to make up entire cohorts, and that these men were practically deserters, their health being only a pretext to enable them to escape service against Pompey.

235, 14. horum annorum: 'of these last years,' i.e. the years of the Civil War, 49 and 48 B.C. — citeriore Gallia: see on ulteriorem, 55, 9.

235, 21. animo: 'in imagination'; abl. of means.

235, 23. nihil, etc.: 'no assertion seemed to be made in vain.'

235, 27. CHAPTER 88. traditae a Caesare: at the beginning of 53 B.C. Pompey, who was then on friendly terms with Caesar, lent him a legion to help make good the severe losses of the previous campaign in Gaul. In 50 B.C. the senate required Pompey and Caesar to furnish one legion apiece for the Parthian war (see Vocab., s.v. Parthi). To meet this requisition Pompey demanded back the legion he had loaned Caesar, who thus lost two legions, both of which, instead of being sent against the Parthians, were kept by Pompey to be used against Caesar in case war should be the outcome of the quarrel between Caesar and the senate.

236, 1. Mediam aciem: 'the centre.' — legionibus Syriacis: two Roman legions which had been serving in Syria; see 189, 11.

236, 2. Ciliciensis: the "twin legion" of veterans; see 189, 3 f.

236, 3. quas . . . docuimus: this statement, which is not found in the Civil War, may have belonged in the passage lost at the end of Ch. 50.

— Afranio: see Vocab.

236, 4. Has . . . habere: 'that these were the strongest cohorts he had.'

236, 7. millia XLV: each of the eleven legions (= 110 cohorts, see *Intro*d. § 28) accordingly had over 4000 men.

236, 8. superiorum exercituum: 'in his former armies.'

236, 11. rivus: the Enipeus, which in summer was only a small stream.

237, 1. CHAPTER 89. superius institutum: not the custom mentioned in 233, 15, but that of giving his favorite tenth legion the post of honor on the right wing.

237, 3. erat . . . attenuata: the ninth legion, which had been stationed under Marcellinus at the southern end of Caesar's lines near Dyrrachium (217, 30), suffered severely in the battles with Pompey (221, 19 f.).

237, 7. quarum . . . XXII: 'of which there was a total of 22,000.' This gives an average of 2750 men to each of the eight legions engaged; see *Intro*d. § 27.

237, 27. signum: for the whole army to advance, including the third

237, 29. CHAPTER 91. primum pilum, etc.: 'had led the first maniple of the first cohort in the tenth legion,' i.e. had been the highest centurion in the favorite legion. See Introd. § 35.

238, 1. manipulares . . . fuistis: equiv. to a vocative, 'my old comrades.' Crastinus was not addressing the soldiers who were then serving in the first maniple of the tenth legion, over whom he had no command, but those of his fellow evocati who had ever served in a maniple with him as he had been promoted from maniple to maniple and cohort to cohort up to the highest centurionship of the whole legion.

238, 2. quam instituitis: 'which you have undertaken,' i.e. by reënlisting.

238, 4. libertatē: they had reënlisted for this war only, and would be released as soon as it was over.

238, 8. laeti: 'gladly.'—centuriae: a division of the evocati, not of the tenth legion. As Caesar's legions averaged only 2750 men each (see on 237, 7) and there were 60 centuries in a legion (Introd. § 28), it is improbable, even if we suppose the first cohort to have been larger than the others, that any century of the legions had 120 men.

238, 13. CHAPTER 92. neque . . . moverent: 'without stirring from their position.'

238, 14. distrahi: the line would necessarily become more or less disordered in charging at full speed.

238, 15. Triari: see 190, 8.

238, 17, dispositi: 'his own men stationed,' etc.—dispersos: 'a scattered enemy,' meaning Caesar's army.—levius: 'with less force.'

238, 18. retentis militibus: abl. abs. expressing a condition, of which casura [esse] is the conclusion.—pilis: indir. obj. of an Intr. cpd. vb., 'run to meet the javelins that had been thrown against them.'

238, 19. fore: 'that the result would be,' depending on sperabat.—duplicato cursu: 'by running double distance,' i.e. double what they would have to run if Pompey's army should advance to meet them in the middle of the field.

238, 21. quidem: 'at least.'—ratione: 'judgment.'

238, 25. signa . . . concinerent: 'signals should be sounded on all sides at once,' with trumpets.

238, 28. CHAPTER 93. infestis: 'threatening,' i.e. pointed towards the enemy and ready to throw.

238, 29. non concurrere: impers., 'that there was no charge.'

238, 30. usu periti, etc.: Caesar liked to praise his soldiers. A similar commendation occurs in the account of the battle with the Nervii (75, 30 ff.).

239, 5. Neque . . . defuerunt: 'but the Pompeians were not caught napping.'

239, 7. exceperunt: i.e. with their shields.

239, 8. pilisque, etc.: the regular procedure in Roman battles was to charge at full speed, hurling the spear while yet some yards from the enemy, and then to fight at close quarters with the sword.

239, 9. ut erat imperatum: see 234, 23 ff.

239, 14. a latere aperto: see on 234, 25.

239, 15. VIII cohortium: pred. gen. of definition or material, limiting quam, 'consisting of eight cohorts,' one from each legion (237, 13).

239, 16. signum: with a flag (237, 17).

239, 19. incitati fuga: 'at full speed.'

239, 21. praesidio: i.e. the cavalry.

239, 23. circumierunt, etc.: the tables were turned completely on Pompey. His left wing was treated to the very medicine which he had prescribed for Caesar's right (234, 25 f.).

239, 25. CHAPTER 94. quae . . . tenuerat: the third line, as usual, was held back as a reserve; see 237, 16 f., and Intro. § 46, end.

239, 29. Neque . . . fefellit: 'but it did not escape Caesar's notice.' This is equiv. to 'there was no doubt in Caesar's mind,' hence the subject clause is introduced by quin; cf. neque abest suspicio quin, 54, 2, and see note.

240, 2. pronuntiaverat: 'had declared would be the case'; see monuit . . . constare, 237, 14 f.

240, 11. si . . . acciderit: 'if there shall prove to be any serious accident.'

240, 12. circumeo, confirmo: the pres. is sometimes, as in English, used loosely for the fut., 'I'm going round to the rest of the gates and reassure the guards of the camp.'

240, 14. summae: subst., indir. obj. of diffidens, which, unlike con- fido (see on quibus, 97, 17), takes the dat. regularly of both persons and things.

240, 15. CHAPTER 95. vallum: of Pompey's camp.

240, 16. spatium: 'respite.'

240, 18. etsi: sometimes accompanies the concessive abl. abs.; 'although the heat was intense.' The battle was fought August 9.

240, 21. cohortibus: seven in number (236, 9).

240, 22. barbarisque, etc.: 'and other barbarian allies.'

240, 24. plerique: although grammatically limiting an implied militēs, antecedent of qui . . . refugerant milites, its position shows that in thought it belongs closely with the abl. abs. dimissis . . . militaribus; translate, 'for the soldiers who . . . most of whom, too, had thrown away their arms,' etc.

240, 26. Neque vero diutius: 'and in fact not very long.'—qui . . . constiterant: i.e. soldiers of the seven cohorts guarding the camp (l. 21).

240, 29. ducibus: 'as leaders,' appositive.—in . . . montes: the same way by which the cavalry had fled (239, 19 f.), along the line marked C on the plan, p. 236.

241, 2. CHAPTER 96. argenti: 'silverware.'

241, 4. non nullorum: 'of some others.'—protecta: from the mid-summer sun.

241, 6. designarent: subj. of characteristic.

241, 7. qui, etc.: a causal rel. clause, 'since they,' etc.—non necessarias: 'unnecessary'; litotes.

241, 8. At hi: emphatic and indignant, 'but these very men used to taunt Caesar's army,' etc. According to Suetonius (Life of Caesar, 67), Caesar allowed his soldiers such extravagances as perfumery, and armor decorated with silver and gold. But taunts at such mild indulgences as these came with ill grace from the luxurious nobles of Pompey's army.

241, 11. insignibus: including decorations and uniform; see on colore, 167, 20. Pompey's cowardly desertion without any effort to collect his army, which was as yet more frightened than hurt, is a strong contrast to Caesar's conduct after his plan of campaign had suffered a much severer check near Dyrrachium; see 224, 25 ff.

241, 14. suos: see on nostri, 213, 19.

241, 17. se: obj., 'his fancies had so badly deceived him.'—a quo . . . ab eo: the rel. clause precedes its antecedent; 'by that body . . . from which.'

241, 20. CHAPTER 97. a militibus contendit: 'entreated his soldiers.'

241, 22. montem: the Pompeians had fled to the highest part of Karadja Ahmet (240, 29 f.), and had gathered on one of its hills, which Caesar now began to invest.

241, 25. iugis eius: 'along its ridges,' abl. of means, expressing the way by which.

241, 28. commodioremque itinere: Caesar doubtless crossed the Enipeus near the point marked E on the plan, p. 236, whence he marched rapidly through the plain to F; and drew up in line of battle before the Pompeians by their more difficult route through the mountains could reach the river.

241, 29. occurrere coepit: 'started to head off.'

242, 1. quodam monte: D on the plan.

242, 4. seclusit: this necessitated recrossing the river, not a difficult matter, however, since in summer the Enipeus, like most rivers of Greece, was only a small stream. It is called rivus, 236, 11.

242, 12. CHAPTER 98. proiecti: 'throwing themselves.'

242, 17. commendavit ne qui: 'he recommended that no one'; qui is less common than quis as the indef. subst. pron.; cf. 137, 18. Caesar's clemency is in keeping with his course from the beginning of the war, and with his claim of 237, 25 f. He is said to have put to death only those senators and knights who had fallen into his hands earlier in the war and had forfeited all right to further mercy by breaking their parole and rejoining Pompey.

242, 19. neu quid, etc.: 'and that they should not lose any of their property.' Caesar's generosity was shown by nothing more clearly than by his burning unread all of Pompey's correspondence, in which much incriminating information would have been found.—Hac . . . diligentia: 'having carefully attended to these matters.'

242, 23. CHAPTER 99. CC milites: see on millia, 72, 14.

242, 26. supra: in 237, 28 ff.—gladio: etc.: 'having received a sword thrust right in the face.'

242, 28. eo proelio: abl. of time when.

242, 29. excellentissimam, optimeque: with full superlative force. Crastinus's sacrifice was especially great, since, being an evocatus, he might have remained at home in security.

243, 3. castellis: see 236, 10.

243, 5. ex proelio: 'after the battle.'

243, 14. CHAPTER 102. Erat . . . propositum: 'had been published.'

243, 15. Amphipoli: an important port, near the mouth of the Strymon, in eastern Macedonia.

243, 16. iuniores: men from seventeen to forty-six years old, who could be enrolled at any time for military service; distinguished from the seniores, who were over forty-six and were called out only in emergencies. — iurandi: see end of note on primam, 174, 11.

243, 17. utrum . . . an: introduce a double indir. quest., which serves as subject of poterat.

243, 20. conaretur: referring to the fut., 'would try.' — existimari: 'be determined.'

243, 23. Mytilenas: on the island of Lesbos off the coast of Asia Minor. Pompey stopped for his wife Cornelia and his younger son Sextus, who had been sent here for safety at the beginning of the war. Plutarch (Life of Pompey, 74 f.) describes the sad meeting. See Introd. § 26.

244, 1. arcem: i.e. of Antioch, an important commercial city of Syria, which received its independence from Pompey himself when Syria was made a Roman province, 64 B.C.

244, 2. eos: fugitive nobles from Pompey's army.

244, 3. ne, etc.: obj. of the idea of ordering implied in nuntios dimissos.

244, 4. magno . . . periculo: 'at the great risk of their lives.'

244, 7. Rhodi: the capital of the island of the same name. Caesar studied there as a young man, and the people had favored his cause from the beginning of the war.

244, 9. ex . . . discederent: coördinate, 'to depart from these places'; cf. ne . . . adirent, l. 3 f.

244, 13. CHAPTER 103. pecunia . . . sublata: see 188, 24 ff. — societatibus: see on societates, 188, 27.

244, 17. familiis: 'the bodies of slaves' employed by the great tax collecting companies.

244, 18. quos ex suis, etc.: a second rel. clause limiting hominum; 'being those of each man's slaves whom he thought suitable for this purpose.'

244, 19. Pelusium: at the eastern mouth of the Nile. Pompey was inclined to seek refuge in Parthia. Some of his counselors favored the province of Africa, where Caesar's army under Curio was annihilated the year before, and whither many of his own soldiers were fleeing from Macedonia; but Pompey's favorite, Theophanes (see on 198, 29), urged him to go to Egypt, partly because it was near, and partly because he could probably count on the gratitude of the young king, whose father had been restored to the throne by his favor in 55 B.C. (see on Ptolomaeum, 189, 19).

244, 20. Ptolomaeus: when Ptolemy Auletes died in 51 B.C., he left his throne to his ten-year-old son, Ptolemy Dionysus, and his famous daughter, Cleopatra, who was then sixteen. The young king's guardian soon expelled Cleopatra from the country. She raised an army in Syria and made war upon the king, who, at the time of Pompey's arrival, was encamped against her near Pelusium.

244, 23. spatio: cf. intervallo, 77, 17, and see note.

244, 28. ut . . . praestarent: 'to do their duty by (lit., 'to') Pompey.'

244, 29. hoc . . . numero: of the king's troops.

244, 30. Pompei milites: see on Ptolomaeum, 189, 19.

245, 3. CHAPTER 104. amici regis: Pothīnus, the king's guardian, Theodōtus, his tutor, and Achilles, commander of the army.

245, 6. sollicitato, etc.: i.e. by Pompey's messengers (244, 27 f.). For the position of the abl. abs. before ne, see on vix qua, 54, 20. — ne . . . occuparet: depending on timore, 'that by tampering with the king's army Pompey would get possession,' etc.

245, 9. palam: 'publicly,' contrasted with clam, l. 11.

245, 14. quadam . . . productus: 'drawn on by a slight acquaintance with Septimius.'

245, 15. bello praedonum: see Introd. § 22. With the abl. cf. eo proelio, 242, 28 f. — ordinem duxerat: 'had led a century,' i.e. had been a centurion. — naviculam parvulam: 'a little tub of a boat,' the double diminutive emphasizing the utter lack of respect shown the fallen Pompey by the Egyptians.

245, 16. paucis suis: cf. paucos suos, 241, 14.

245, 17. interficitur: fuller details are given by Plutarch in his Life of Pompey (Ch. 77 ff.). Pompey was just stepping ashore when he was stabbed in the back by Septimius, in full view of his wife and son, who had been left behind on their ship. He was killed on the 28th of September, 48 B.C., the day before he would have completed his fifty-eighth year.

245, 19. CHAPTER 105. Asiam: the province (see on 188, 21), which Caesar reached by way of Thrace and the Hellespont. When he was crossing the Hellespont, Gaius Cassius appeared with ten Pompeian ships, but was so astonished at Caesar's boldness in summoning him to an immediate surrender that he yielded without resistance. See on Cassius, 190, 8.

245, 21. Epheso: abl. of place from which, like ex fano; we should say 'from the temple of Diana at Ephesus.' In this chapter observe the different constructions of place in the names of towns and of countries.

245, 23. testibus: he had witnesses at hand to make it appear that he meant to pay back the money later.

245, 25. duobus temporibus: the other occasion is described in Ch. 33, omitted in this book. Scipio was on the point of helping himself to the money in the temple of Diana when a despatch from Pompey was handed to him stating that Caesar had arrived in Macedonia, and bidding him to march thither at once. Accordingly Caesar claims that he had twice saved the treasure of Diana. This famous temple was one of the "wonders of the world."

246, 1. Item: this word makes it almost certain that a passage has been lost describing other supernatural events favorable to Caesar and similar to those which follow. Several are related by Plutarch in his Life of Caesar (Ch. 47). The Romans believed that in these ways the gods expressed their favor or displeasure. So Caesar's death is said to have been portended by many prodigies. Shakspeare mentions some of them in Julius Caesar, 1, 3 and 2, 2:

"A common slave (you know him well by sight)
Held up his left hand, which did flame and burn
Like twenty torches join'd; and yet his hand,
Not sensible of fire, remained unscorch'd."

"Fierce fiery warriors fight upon the clouds,
In ranks, and squadrons, and right form of war,
Which drizzled blood upon the Capitol:
The noise of battle hurtled in the air."

—Elide: loc. abl. — repetitis, etc.: translate the abl. abs. immediately after constabat, 'it was agreed, by reckoning and counting the days backward, that,' etc.

246, 2. quo die: as antecedent sc. eo die before simulacrum; and for the order of clauses, cf. a quo . . . ab eo, 241, 17 f.

246, 5. convertissæ: in her own temple the statue of Minerva naturally faced the entrance. The statue of Victory, which had been facing the Minerva, now turned round towards the door.

246, 15. CHAPTER 106. Cypri: see on Corcyrae, 192, 5.

246, 16. iter habere: 'was on his way.'—necessitudines regum: 'ties of friendship with the monarchs,' Ptolemy and Cleopatra; see on 244, 19.

246, 18. quam . . . iusserat: 243, 13 f.

246, 19. Achaia: see on 188, 26. During the siege of Pompey near Dyrrachium Caesar had sent Fufius Calenus (192, 15) into Achaia to win it to his support.

246, 22. CC: ducenti. These two legions were greatly depleted. For the size of Caesar's legions at the battle of Pharsalus, see on 237, 7.

246, 24. fama: see on quibus, 97, 17.—auxiliis: abl. of accompaniment; see on comitatu, 217, 1.

246, 26. Pompei morte: the king's friends (see on 245, 3) thought to please Caesar by bringing to him, as he landed, Pompey's head and ring. But Caesar turned away in sorrow, and afterwards had the murderers put to death. He was undoubtedly hoping to have the opportunity of pardoning Pompey, for he wrote home to his friends that the greatest pleasure which his victory afforded him was the possibility of repeatedly granting pardon to his fellow-citizens who had fought against him (Plutarch, Life of Caesar, 48).

246, 29. fasces anteferrentur: as a military commander Caesar had the ax bound up in the rods, symbolizing his absolute power. The Egyptians, who remembered, too, that he had proposed in 65 B.C. making their country a Roman province, resented this show of sovereignty in their capital.—In hoc: 'in this act.'

247, 5. CHAPTER 107. Pompelanis militibus: the soldiers who had surrendered and received pardon (242, 12 ff.).

247, 6. etesias: the prevailing winds during the summer in the eastern Mediterranean.

247, 7. navigantibus: cf. venientibus, 229, 26, and see note.

247, 8. regum: as in 246, 17.

247, 11. superiore consulatu: in 59 B.C.

247, 12. societas: it was as a favor to Pompey that Caesar had this recognition voted to Ptolemy Auletes, who was said to have paid over $7,000,000 for it. The oppression which the collection of this money brought upon the people was avenged by the king's expulsion; see on Ptolomaeum, 189, 19.—placere, etc.: Caesar's desire to settle the succession to the throne before leaving Egypt involved him in the Alexandrine War. See Introd. § 13.

VOCABULARY

In the derivations of compound words the first part is given only when it is not evident from the form of the compound ; for example, ad is given in the derivation of accēdō, but not in that of addūcō.

The sign + is used in the derivations of compounds only when the two words thus united have grown together to form the compound ; as accēdō is formed directly from ad + cēdō. In cases like acclivis, on the other hand, the sign + is not admissible ; for we have here not the simple union of ad and clivus, but of ad and an adjective form derived from clivus. Likewise accūsō is not a compound of ad and causa, but of ad and a verb form derived from causa.

When a word that is used in explaining derivations is preceded by the abbreviation "cf.," the vocabulary word is not derived from it, but both are descended from the same root or stem ; for example, aditus is not derived from the verb adeō, but both words come from the root i.

A hyphen signifies that the word to which it is attached is used only in composition.

Words used in explaining derivations are translated unless they are defined in the vocabulary immediately above or below.

A. = Aulus, -i, m., a Roman praenomen or given name.

ā, ab [ā is used only before consonants, ab before vowels and some consonants. Eng. of and off are akin to ab], prep. with abl., from, away from (cf. e, ex, out of); by; at, on, in; initium capit ā, begins at; ā millibus passuum viii, eight miles away.

abdicō, -āre, -āvī, -ātus [cf. dicō, say], disown; dictātūrā sē abdicāre, resign the dictatorship.

abdō, abdere, abdidi, abditus [dō, put], put away, hide.

abdūcō, abdūcere, abdūxī, abductus [dūcō, lead], lead or take away, carry off.

abeō, abire, abiī, abitūrus [eō, go], go away, go.

abiciō, abicere, abiciī, abiectus [iaciō, throw], throw away, hurl.

abiēs, abietis, f., fir, the tree or the timber.

abscidō, abscidere, abscidi, abscisus [abs (= ab) + caedō, cut], cut off or away.

absēns, absentis [part. of absum], adj., absent, in the absence of.

absimilis, absimile [similis, like], unlike.

absistō, absistere, abstiti, — [sistō, place (one's self)], stand off, hold off.

abstineō, abstinēre, abstinui, abstinētus [abs (= ab) + teneō, hold], abstain from, refrain from, spare.

abstrahō, abstrahere, abstrāxī, abstractus [abs (= ab) + trahō, draw, drag], draw or drag away.

absum, abesse, āfui, āfutūrus [sum, be], be away, be absent, be distant; be wanting or lacking; ā bellō abesse, take no part in war; nōn longius abesse quā, not to be farther away than that; paulum abesse quā, lack little of.

- abundō, -āre, -āvi, -ātūrus [undō, rise in waves], overflow, be rich in, abound.
- abūtor, abūtī, abūsus [ūtor, use], use up, waste.
- ac, see atque.
- Acarnānia, -ae, f., a country of Greece, on the middle western coast, south of Ambracia.
- accēdō, accēdere, accessī, accessūrus [ad + cēdō, go], approach, come up; be inspired in; be added; accēdit quod (lit., there is added the fact that), accēdit ut (see on 89, 22), furthermore.
- accelerō, -āre, -āvi, -ātus [ad + celerō (from celer, swift)], hasten, hasten.
- acceptus, -a, -um [part. of accipiō], acceptable, popular.
- accidō, accidere, accidī, — [ad + cadō, fall], fall to or upon, fall; befall, happen (generally of misfortunes), arise.
- accidō, accidere, accidī, accisus [ad + caedō, cut], cut into.
- accipiō, accipere, accēpi, acceptus [ad + capiō, take], take, accept, receive; incur, suffer; learn, hear; take, interpret; fāmā accipere, hear of.
- acclivis, acclive [ad, clivus, slope], sloping, ascending.
- acclivitās, acclivitatīs [acclivis], f., upward slope, ascent.
- accommodātus, -a, -um [part. of accommodō], adapted, appropriate.
- accommodō, -āre, -āvi, ātus [ad + commodō, from commodus, fit], put on, adjust.
- accūrātē [accūrātus, carefully made], adv., carefully; accūrātius, too carefully.
- accurrō, currere, currī or accu-
- curri, accursūrus [ad + currō, run], run to, hasten up.
- accūsō, -āre, -āvi, -ātus [ad, causa, reason], (bring a reason against), blame, accuse.
- ācerimē, sup. of ācriter.
- Achāia, -ae, f., Achaia; see on 188, 26.
- Achāicus, -a, -um, Achaian.
- Achillās, -ae, m., an Egyptian, commander of the king's army, one of Pompey's murderers.
- aciēs, aciēi (also gen. aciē), f., line of battle, army (in line of battle); see Intro. § 46.
- Acilius, Acilī, m., a Roman gentile or clan name. Manius Acilius Glabrio, a lieutenant of Caesar in the Civil War.
- ācriter [ācer, sharp], adv., sharply, vigorously, fiercely.
- āctuārius, -a, -um [āctus, a driving, cf. agō, drive], (driven), swift-sailing, propelled by both oars and sails.
- āctus, part. of agō.
- Acutius, Acutī, m., a Roman gentile or clan name. Acutius Rufus, a follower of Pompey in the Civil War.
- acūtus, -a, -um [part. of acuō, sharpen], sharpened, sharp.
- a.d. = ante diem; see on 55, 5.
- ad, prep. with acc., to, toward, against, until, up to; near, among, at, on; for, with reference to, according to, for the sake of; with numerals, when it is sometimes an adv., about, toward.
- adaequō, -āre, -āvi, -ātus [aequō, make equal], make equal to, make as high as; be equal to, equal; cursum adaequāre, keep up with.
- adaugeō, adaugēre, adauxī, adactus

- [augeō, increase], increase by adding.
- Adbucillus, -i, m., a leading citizen of the Allobroges.
- addō, addere, addidī, additus [dō, put], add.
- addūcō, addūcere, addūxī, adductus [dūcō, lead], lead or bring to; pull (toward one); prompt, prevail upon, persuade.
- ademptus, part. of adimō.
- adeō, adire, adī, aditus [eō, go], go to, approach, come near; visit; attack.
- adeō [eō, thither], adv., to that point; so, to such a degree, so much.
- adferō, adferre, attulī, adlātus [ferō, bring], bring to, bring, bring forward, allge; bring about, cause.
- adficiō, adficere, adfēcī, adfectus [faciō, do], do to, affect; visit with, fill with, afflict with.

LANE'S LATIN GRAMMAR

REVISED EDITION

$1.50

By GEORGE M. LANE, PH.D., LL.D.

Professor Emeritus of Latin, Harvard University

SINCE its first publication this work has been used more widely than any other Latin grammar for advanced study and reference. It is approached by no other American publication in completeness and authoritativeness, and is conspicuous for its originality, sound scholarship, accurate analysis of constructions, copious illustrations, and clear arrangement. The revision has been conducted under the direction of Professor Morris H. Morgan, who edited and completed the original edition, left unfinished by the death of the distinguished author. The chapter on Sound has been rewritten and enlarged by Professor Hanns Oertel, of Yale, and the views concerning the nature and kinds of vowels and consonants, the Latin accent, and the phonetic laws under which changes of vowel and consonant should take place, have been modified to conform to present usage. Many changes have also been made in the chapter on Inflection and Formation. Throughout the book the working of "hidden quantities" has been completely revised. For the most part, however, no alterations have been found necessary in the treatment of broad general principles or in the method of presentation.

LANE AND MORGAN'S

SCHOOL LATIN GRAMMAR

$1.00

Prepared by MORRIS H. MORGAN, PH.D., LL.D.

Professor of Classical Philology in Harvard University

THIS book is intended for the use of students of Latin during their course in secondary schools. It is based on Lane's Latin Grammar and furnishes abundant material for careful training in Latin pronunciation, for the study of the leading principles under which Latin words are formed, for thorough drill in inflections, and for acquiring a good working knowledge of the most important principles of Latin syntax and composition. The arrangement of the material is clear and logical, with cross-references to the larger grammar.

Latin Prose Writing

WITH FULL INTRODUCTORY NOTES ON IDIOM

By MAURICE W. MATHER, Ph.D.

Formerly Instructor in Latin in Harvard University and ARTHUR L. WHEELER, Ph.D.

Instructor in Latin in Yale University

Half Leather, 12mo, 216 pages Price $1.00

The present book furnishes all the essential material for the writing of average passages in Latin Prose. It is not intended to teach how to write isolated sentences, illustrative of given constructions, but the book assumes that the pupil, after a year or more of such practice, is ready to learn the art of writing connected narrative in Latin. The authors have based their exercises on Caesar's Gallic War Books III and IV, Nepos's Alcibiades and Hannibal, and Cicero's Manilian Law and Archias, inasmuch as these are not only models of good style, but are usually read in schools. As the book is not for beginners, the individual exercises have not been made vehicles for teaching any one or two constructions, but the authors have felt at liberty to introduce at any time even the more difficult constructions; indirect discourse, for instance, being taken up at the very beginning.

While, in general, the vocabulary and the constructions for any exercise are supplied in the Latin text on which the given exercise is based, yet enough variation from the language of the model is required to give the pupil abundant practice in handling forms and constructions. By this means the pupil's power of observation is increased, his interest is quickened by the pleasure of discovery, and he will remember the word much better than if he found it ready at hand in a dictionary.

A number of recent examination papers from various colleges have been inserted in the belief that they will be found useful for sight tests and occasional examinations. The notes accompanying some of the papers belong to the original examinations. At the end of the book are indexes of words and constructions, and of English words and phrases with references to sections of the Notes on Idiom in Part I.

HARKNESS AND FORBES'S

Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War

With Introduction, Notes, and Vocabulary. By ALBERT HARKNESS, Ph. D., LL.D.,
Professor Emeritus in Brown University. Assisted by CHARLES H. FORBES, A. B., Professor of Latin in Phillips Academy, Andover, Mass.

Price, $1.25

THIS WORK is preëminently a student's edition of Caesar's Commentaries on the Gallic War, and has been prepared with special reference to the present needs of preparatory and secondary schools. While it is remarkable for its simplicity, yet it contains everything which is needed for studying the author. Attention is called particularly to the following special features of the book :

1. This edition is furnished with an Introduction containing an outline of the life of Caesar, a description in brief of the scenes of his military operations in Gaul, Germany, and Britain, and a short treatise on the military system of the Romans, together with a list of valuable works on subjects treated in the Introduction.

2. The text is chiefly that of the critical edition of H. Meusel, Berlin, 1894, now quite generally accepted as the standard. Each important chapter begins with a brief summary in English.

3. The notes are intended to guide the faithful efforts of the student and to interest him in the stirring events recorded in the Commentaries. Special attention has been given to the difficult subjects of the subjunctive mood and of the indirect discourse.

4. The vocabulary gives special attention to etymology, but the treatment is made as simple as possible with the sole aim of aiding the student in understanding and appreciating the significant elements of words. The important subject of idioms and phrases receives due attention.

5. The illustrations are entirely appropriate and unlike those in most other works of a similar nature. They have in no instance been introduced merely for purposes of decoration. Among the most striking features of the work are the nine colored plates illustrative of the military system of the Romans, which have been made only after consultation with the highest authorities, and are here reproduced in their natural colors. Besides these, there are many other illustrations, eleven plans of battles, seven campaign maps, and a general map of Gaul.

REVISED EDITION

VIRGIL'S AENEID

With an Introduction, Notes, and Vocabulary by HENRY S. FRIEZE, late Professor of Latin in the University of Michigan. Revised by WALTER DENNISON, Professor of Latin in the University of Michigan.

First Six Books $1.30 Complete $1.50
Complete Text Edition $0.50

This Work differs in many respects from the former edition. Such changes and alterations have been introduced as are necessary to make the book conform to modern demands, and many important additions have also been made.

The Introduction has been enlarged by the addition of sections on the life and writings of Virgil, the plan of the Aeneid, the meter, manuscripts, editions, and helpful books of reference.

The Text has been corrected to conform to the readings that have become established, and the spellings are in accord with the evidence of inscriptions of the first century A.D. To meet the need of early assistance in reading the verse metrically, the long vowels in the first two books are fully indicated.

The Notes have been thoroughly revised and largely added to. The old grammar references are corrected and new ones (to Harkness's Complete, Lane & Morgan's, and Bennett's Grammars) added. The literary appreciation of the poet is increased by parallel quotations from English literature. The irregularities of scansion in each book are also given with sufficient explanations.

The Vocabulary has been made as simple as possible and includes only those words occurring in the Aeneid. The parts of compound words are not indicated separately when they appear unmodified in the compound form. The principal parts of verbs are given which are understood to be in actual use.

The Illustrations for the most part are new and fresh, and have been selected with great care with a view to assisting directly in the interpretation of the text. There are also maps showing the wanderings of Aeneas, the vicinity of Cumae, and pre-historic Rome, and a full-page facsimile of one of the best manuscripts of Virgil, the Codex Palatinus.

Cicero's Orations

AND SELECTIONS FROM THE LETTERS

EDITED BY

WILLIAM R. HARPER, Ph.D., D.D., LL.D.
President of the University of Chicago

AND

FRANK A. GALLUP, A.M.
Professor of Latin, Colgate Academy

Half Leather, 12mo, 566 pages, with Maps and Illustrations. Price, $1.30

This edition of Cicero contains in addition to selected letters all the orations required by all the colleges throughout the country. It is intended to be distinctly practical and aims solely to meet the needs of secondary and preparatory schools.

The Orations have been arranged in the order in which it is thought they can be read to the best advantage and include, besides the four against Catiline, those for Archais, Milo, Marcellus, and Ligarius, Pompey's Commission, and the Fourteenth Philippic.

The Letters have been selected with special reference to their fitness for reading at sight and for this purpose they have no equal in Roman literature.

The Introduction includes a well balanced life of Cicero with a just estimate of his standing and character and many helpful features which will give the student a comprehensive knowledge of Roman life and politics.

The Notes suggest rather than tell the student and help him to get, instead of getting for him, that acquaintance with the orator and with the language which is the result of true study.

The Vocabulary shows great care and thoroughness and meets the requirements of the average student.

The Maps are accurate and drawn especially for this work and the Illustrations are happily chosen to illustrate both text and time.

HARPER'S LATIN DICTIONARY

Founded on the translation of "Freund's Latin-German Lexicon."

Edited by E. A. ANDREWS, LL.D. Revised, Enlarged, and in great part Rewritten by CHARLTON T. LEWIS, Ph.D., and CHARLES SHORT, LL.D.

Royal Octavo, 2030 pages . Sheep, $6.50; Full Russia, $10.00

The translation of Dr. Freund's great Latin-German Lexicon, edited by the late Dr. E. A. Andrews, and published in 1850, has been from that time in extensive and satisfactory use throughout England and America. Meanwhile great advances have been made in the science on which lexicography depends. The present work embodies the latest advances in philological study and research, and is in every respect the most complete and satisfactory Latin Dictionary published.

LEWIS'S LATIN DICTIONARY FOR SCHOOLS

By CHARLTON T. LEWIS, Ph.D.

Large Octavo, 1200 pages . Cloth, $4 50; Half Leather, $5.00

This dictionary is not an abridgment, but an entirely new and independent work, designed to include all of the student's needs, after acquiring the elements of grammar, for the interpretation of the Latin authors commonly read in school.

LEWIS'S ELEMENTARY LATIN DICTIONARY

By CHARLTON T. LEWIS, Ph.D.

Crown Octavo, 952 pages. Half Leather $2.00

This work is sufficiently full to meet the needs of students in secondary or preparatory schools, and also in the first and second years' work in colleges.

SMITH'S ENGLISH-LATIN DICTIONARY

Latin Literature of the Empire

Selected and Edited with Revised Texts and Brief Introductions

By ALFRED GUDEMAN, Ph.D.

Associate Professor of Classical Philology, University of Pennsylvania

In Two Volumes. Cloth, 12mo. Per Volume, $1.80

VOL. I—PROSE. Selections from Velleius, Curtius, Seneca Rhetor, Justinus (Trogus Pompeius), Seneca, Petronius, including Cena Trimalchionis, Pliny the Elder, Quintilian, Tacitus, Pliny the Younger, Suetonius, Minucius Felix Octavius, Apuleius—Ammianus Marcellinus, and Boethius.

VOL. II—POETRY. Pseudo Vergiliana, Aetna, Manilius, Calpurnius, Nemesianus, Phaedrus, Lucan, Valerius Flaccus, Seneca, the Octavia (anonymous), Persius, Statius, Silius Italicus, Martial, Juvenal, Pervigilium Veneris, Ausonius, and Claudianus.

The works of Latin Literature of the post-Augustan period have hitherto, with a few notable exceptions, been virtually excluded from the classical curricula of colleges and universities.

The present collection has been made primarily for the use of students in higher classes in colleges. The selections will be found useful as collateral reading in connection with lectures on classical literature, and will also furnish suitable material for sight reading.

The selections themselves contain nothing that is not eminently worthy of perusal. They are in every case sufficiently extensive to give a continuous and coherent story, which at the same time exhibits the author at his best. The text follows the best modern editions, the deviations from the standard texts being briefly recorded in critical appendices.
